Sherwood wrote the screen play, which has been brought to the films by Hunt Stromberg, with Clarence Brown directing. He was also the director of "A Free Soul", in which Miss Shearer and Gable appeared in 1932, she as the star, he to win his first real screen distinction.

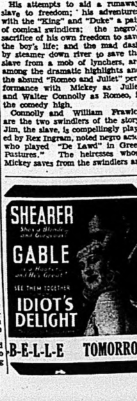
Prominent in support of the stars are Edward Arnold, Charles Coburn, Joseph Schildkraut, Burgess Meredith, Laura Hope Crews, Skeets Gallagher, Peter Willes, Pat Patterson, William Edmonds and Fritz Feld, together with the dancing group known as Gable's Glamour Girls, comprising Virginia Grey, Lorraine Krueger, Paula Stone, Virginia Dale, Joan Marsh and Bernadene Hayes. The girls join with Gable when he performs his burlesque act as a hoofer and sings a song called "Puttin' on the Ritz."

The screen version of "Idiot's Delight" is essentially the same as the memorable stage play which starred Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, but Sherwood has taken advantage of the camera's wider range. In the picture the initial meeting of the shabby vaudeville girl and the hoofer in Omaha provides a new opening. On the stage the incident could be established only by dialogue.

The story follows these obscure people to Europe where Gable, as the hoofer again meets the girl who has become, outwardly, at least a countess. She is toying at the moment with a munitions maker but she has never forgotten the fellow trouper of Omaha. War crashes into the scene and with a group of frightened travellers the two are trapped in a border town during an air raid. They realize then that nothing matters except the love that began on the road tour back to Omaha.

The picture presents Miss Shearer in an ultra-modern role in contrast to her recent "Marie Antoinette.' 'Gable, for the first time in his career, essays a song number and a burlesque dance.

"Streamlined Swing" an entertaining miniature Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and "The Miracle of Salt Lake,' 'a historical novelty precede the feature attraction.



RUMORS DENIED

units either off Wilhelmshaven or at sea.

More than 25 warcraft were reported engaged in the manoeuvres which will take them to the Strait of Gibraltar — now patrolled by French warships while the British Mediterranean fleet is concentrated in the eastern Mediterranean.

Hitler in Austria

Chancellor Hitler, two days before his 50th birthday anniversary and 10 days before his Reichstag reply to President Roosevelt's peace appeal, remained in Austria, continuing a tour of troop inspection. He was scheduled to spend tonight on his special train, reaching Berlin tomorrow forenoon.

The Rumanian Foreign Minister, Grigorge Gafencu, was invited to conference with Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop before von Ribbentrop entertained him at dinner tonight. Gafencu will be presented to Hitler tomorrow.

Rumors that Germany and Poland had agreed on return of Danzig Free City to Germany were termed nonsense by authoritative sources. It was explained that the next few days would be entirely devoid of any political note, except for Gafencu's talks with von Ribbentrop. "Nothing should interfere with the birthday spirit," a Wilhelmstrasse spokesman said.

There were rumors that Colonel-General Walter von Brauchitsch, chief of staff of the army, might be named a Field Marshal on Hitler's birthday.

Would Like to Disarm Germany

Meanwhile front pages of the newspapers continued to be dominated by scornful editorial rejecting President Roosevelt's appeal and concerned with Hitler's decision to answer it before the Reichstag.

Hitler's newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, carried editorials under headlines like "the real aim of the encirclement strategists," and "they would like to disarm Germany again just as in Versailles."

The Morgenpost said "Roosevelt wants to create a second Versailles."

Field Marshal Goering, who is en route to Berlin from his vacation and visit to Premier Mussolini, published a birthday appeal to the army in which he said, "the Fuehrer knows that we are blindly devoted to him. The Fuehrer knows that the German army is ready to march any time."

TIMBER INQUIRY

less inclined to agree with the opposition leader that there have been timber pirates."

There were many things the government should do immediately to protect the interests of the province without waiting for the result of the inquiry into the administration of timber resources, said Col. Drew.

Sluice Way Built

The Long Lac diversion in Northern Ontario had caused a sluice way to be built for transporting logs for export for manufacture in the United States and to give added competition to the railways, said Col. Drew. Estimated cost was $250,000 but completion cost $1,300,000.

Premier Hepburn said he didn't know where the opposition chief got his $250,000 figure. That was the figure for a sluice way to carry logs, but the job had been carried out by the Hydro Commission and enlarged to become a canal for water diversion purposes. Power was needed in the north at this very moment.

Railway rates were too high to permit of the profitable export of logs from the Long Lac diversion area by rail, said Mr. Heenan.

Comment on the "extraordinarily pleasant basis" of the debate was made by Col. Drew, but what the Colonel commented about didn't last long when he and Mr. Heenan started to tangle.

Timber Limits at $1

The opposition leader seemed not only bent on an inquiry, said Mr. Heenan. He wanted to be the judge, jury and executioner of the Department. As far as the sale of Lake Sulphite stock went, the Department had clean hands. The prospectus carried timber limits at only $1.

"Col. Drew takes a high and lofty attitude," said Mr. Heenan. "His criticism has been constructive and if the inquiry is carried along the same lines, I'm satisfied a good deal of good can come of it."

The railway wanted the "last pound of flesh" for carrying pulpwood, said Mr. Heenan. They wouldn't adjust their rates to meet the changed situation. As far as they were concerned timber could come to maturity and go unharvested.

If an inquiry would put an end to the work of scandal-mongers, ink-slingers and mud-slingers, it would be worth anything it cost, said Mr. Heenan.

Loyal Servants

The Department had efficient and loyal officials. It was a "bunch of so-called or self-styled experts who are causing all the trouble. They'll want the opposition leader to see that they're engaged as experts."

"There will be one thing I will ask the committee to check on," said Mr. Heenan. "There are some things going on that I might be uncharitable enough to call blackmail of myself and other ministers. They say if you don't do this, we'll get you."

Those who some called "timber pirates" were often men who had invested money in the exploitation of the province's resources.

Col. Drew protested that he had said there were many operators to whom tribute should be paid "but there were also timber pirates and the Minister is not such a babe in the woods that he doesn't believe there have been timber pirates loose for many years."

"I could almost tell you who wrote that," Mr. Heenan retorted.

Inviting Trouble

"The Minister is getting very incautious and if he's inviting trouble he'll get it," came back Col. Drew. The Minister's suggestion somebody wrote Col. Drew's speech was beneath contempt. No one assisted him.

Mr. Heenan read extracts from reports of speeches made by Col. Drew on a Northern Ontario tour and referred to a "damnably wrong statement from a public platform" in regard to forest fire prevention services.

The word "damnably" was withdrawn by the Speaker's orders.. Mr. Heenan said the 1936 heat wave was the cause of so many fires in that year. Hon. Earl Rowe, then Ontario Conservative leader, became in 1937, said Mr. Heenan, the first man he ever knew who "actually gloated" over the number of fires. Now Col. Drew was following Mr. Rowe in this.

The Minister expressed confidence the Lake Sulphite Company condition "will rectify itself and that before very long."

A charge that there are places in Ontario where police "wink at crime conditions, participate in them, and draw revenue from them." was heard in the House last night, during the first night sitting of the present session, from former Attorney-General Arthur Roebuck (Lib. Toronto-Bellwoods).

Attorney-General Gordon Conant said he agreed with Mr. Roebuck but had been diffident about making such a statement because of his position as Attorney-General. A bill going through committee stage when Mr. Roebuck made his charge, had been designed to correct the conditions of which Mr. Roebuck spoke, said Mr. Conant.

The great majority of Ontario police forces were honest and efficient, said Mr. Conant, but there were exceptions. The investigatory powers conferred by the bill on the Attorney-General with respect to municipal police forces and policemen would strike at corrupt conditions.

The bill, as approved in committee, empowers the Attorney-General to order an inquiry into the administration of any police force or the conduct of any constable. Where a municipal council requests such an inquiry, the cost will be paid by the municipality.

Changed in Committee

Titled an act to amend the Constables' Act, the bill was subjected to an important change in committee stage. As drafted it would have conferred authority on all Ontario policemen and constables in the whole province.

The amendment limits this extension of the authority of municipally-appointed officers to the pursuit of criminals or persons suspected of having committed a crime in the municipality by which the pursuing officer is appointed.

In effect the intent of the measure is that an officer will not have to stop chasing a criminal or a suspected criminal at municipal boundaries.

Foreshadowing the appointment of Hon. A. St. Clair Gordon, Minister without portfolio, as Ontario's Liquor Commissioner to succeed the late E. G. Odette, Premier Hepburn introduced a bill to make possible the appointment of an assembly member as Liquor Commissioner.

Drew Opposes Bill

Cited as a precedent by the Premier was 1912 Conservative legislation making possible the appointment of legislature members to the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission.

Col. Drew said he opposed the bill and counselled the Premier to withdraw it. It would bring the Liquor Control Board right into politics. A strenuous debate on second reading was indicated.

Law clerks are drafting two unemployment insurance measures, Premier Hepburn said in answer to a question by T. A. Kidd (Con. Kingston). One would enable Ontario to participate in a federal unemployment insurance plan, should Ottawa enact legislation. The second would enable Ontario to proceed on her own hook.

Henry Criticised

Former Premier George S. Henry "seems to be well acquainted with dame rumor," said Premier Hepburn, commenting on Mr. Henry's allegation last week that an old age pension cheque had been delayed, probably in an effort to balance the budget. The cheque was probably dame rumor's, said the Premier.

The Premier referred to a statement he also attributed to Mr. Henry that the present government had settled with a London estate for succession duties in a lesser amount that the former government would have received.

It was true, said Mr. Hepburn, that the Henry government had ordered a firm of lawyers to report on the London estate, but they did nothing. The present government amended the statutes to permit it to carry on an investigation into the estate and $680,000 was collected from it.

In another case, said the Premier, $3,000,000 in succession duties had been collected that had not been collected by the Henry government because of Mr. Henry's negligence.

The Stars Say—

For Tuesday, April 18

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A DAY on which much depends upon personal poise, restraint and amiability is forecast by the predominant lunar aspects. With the forces and energies under very high stimulus, there is some danger that over-zealousness and aggressiveness may occasion impulsive, rash and temperamental outbursts, thus defeating otherwise good prospects for putting over major objectives. In the private affairs there is sign of romantic intrigues which should be managed with prudence, restraint and good will.

Those whose birthday it is may realize some definite advancement in important projects, but these seem beset by personal tendencies to reckless, impulsive and quarrelsome moods. Intimate affairs are of a peculiar or intriguing nature, calling for discretion, prudence and self-restraint. Moderation in all things may promote fine, constructive programs.

A child born on this day may be aggressive, pugnacious and dominating, using impulsive and high-handed methods. These may offset its excellent equipment for creative work. Its private adventures may be alluring and curious, unless an elderly female supervises its romantic entanglements.

For Wednesday, April 19

WHILE THERE are auguries of many progressive and happy conditions on this day, according to planetary configurations, there are also some protentous testimonies. There is danger through too drastic action, which has omens of far-reaching and radical effect on both business and personal life. It would be well to move coutiously, with precision and definite plans, being circumspect with superiors and thsoe in power. With this and good acumen there may be decided benefits and desired climaxes.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves launched in a year of sudden and drastic activity, with affairs disturbed in a rather revolutionary manner and with far-reaching effect. But with sagacity and caution there is much to be gained. Tact and precaution are recommended when dealing with employeds, superiors or those in authority.

A child born on this day although talented, studious and ambitious may encounter obstacles and frustrations despite some swift-moving periods of activity. Subtle difficulties may cause grave anxiety or discouragement.

Bad Company

By CARLTON JAMES

Inspector Warren carefully examined the dead man where he lay in the bed and then turned to the girl. She was a pretty girl, dark with blue eyes. Just now the eyes held a look of fright. They were wide and staring. She stood near the door watching the officer intently something vaguely familiar about her features caused him to hesitate. He frowned trying to remember. Then suddenly it came.

She seemed a little bewildered at the question. "Why, yes—that is—Blackie and I are engaged."

"That's bad, Miss Hartley. Bad. Sometimes a person—quite often, in fact—is judged by the company he —or shall we say she keeps."

Instant anger lighted the girl's eyes. Her lips were white. "Do you mean to insinuate—"

But Warren had turned and was studying the articles on a bedside table. There were a variety of medicine bottles, a tumbler, spoon, a lamp, a clock with illuminated figures, and a book. He turned to face the girl once more.

"Your uncle—" he indicated the bed with a slight tilt of his head—"your uncle was paralyzed, wasn't he? A shock victim?"

The officer frowned. "Let's see now. The doctor said he died from an overdose of medicine. When could he have taken that medicine, Miss Hartley?"

"Why probably last night. I was out for a short time. I'd been here with him all day, and wanted a breath of air." Her voice had an apologetic note. "He seemed contented enough. He was reading when I left. And when I came in he'd turned off his light and gone to sleep. It wasn't until this morning that I found him—" She shrank from uttering the word.

Warren shook his head sadly. "There are still some things I can't seem to puzzle out." He looked up suddenly, and saw that the eagerness had vanished from the girl's eyes. Something in the inspector's tone had caused the color to drain from her cheeks. "Of course," Warren was saying, "you'll inherit his entire fortune? You're his only heir?"

"I hardy see what that has to do with uncle's death. If you're through with your investigation, inspector, I wish you'd go."

But Warren seemed scarcely to hear. "A million dollars" he mused, as if to himself. "Perhaps more. Blackie would like that, Now wouldn't he though."

The girl suddenly stamped her foot indignantly, yet behind that mask of dignity Warren discerned another emotion fear.

"Inspector Warren, if you're insinuating that Blackie—that I—" She paused, confused.

"If Blackie, if you?" questioned Warren.

The girl placed both hands on her head as if striving to restrain herself. "Oh, what is it you can't understand? What is it? Can't you see that Uncle's death has unstrung me. That in itself is enough, without having to listen to your prattle."

"Prattle?" said Warren mildly. "Prattle?" And then his voice took on a sterner note. "Would it be prattle if I accused you of murdering your uncle, Miss Hartley?"

The girl's face went chalk white. She swayed against the door frame. "Murdered?" she whispered. "Murdered! Ma? Not—not me!"

"Blackie might have had something to do with it," Warren agreed. "He probably thought up the idea, and you carried it out. That's like Blackie. He lets others do the dirty work."

"But—but—how do you—that is, why do you say such things? Why? Why?" Her voice faltered, and Warren said sternly:

"You might as well make a clean breast of it, Miss Hartley. I know you killed him!"

"You know?" She stared at him incredibly. "How?"

"Why because someone must have given him that medicine. And who, besides yourself, is there here to do that?"

"But I've already told you I was out. I can prove it. I was at a dance with Blackie. Uncle took the medicine himself while I was gone."

"But that's absurd, Miss Hartley. Absurd. Unfortunately Blackie didn't warn you. But you see, this bedtable is on the left side of the bed. It would have been impossible for your uncle, paralyzed as he was, to reach over with his right hand, pour out the medicine himself, drink it, switch off the light and lie back to die. Oh, that would have been impossible, Miss Hartley. It's a shame Blackie wasn't here to arrange things for you. He—"

Warren broke off abruptly and hurried across the room. The girl, with a little cry of terror and misery collapsed near the door there.

Warren stood over her a minute, and sadly shook his head. "Bad company," he said. "You can usually judge a person by the company he—or she—keeps."

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was lighting his cigar with his feet on his new ottoman and ma said, Well Willyum I finely broken down and consented, it seems I'm going to play a little part in the play after all.

Meaning the play the dawters of Cleopattera are going to give to celebrate their anniversary, and pop said, Good, congradulations, I'll be the first to applaud and the last to boo, and ma said, At first I resisted vigorously, because I'm no actress and dont pretend to be and never thought I was, but here I am a full fledged stage artist because Mrs. Hannah Mabel Papst the authoress and director wouldn't take No for an answer or even Perhaps, because she insisted I was just the type.

What type's that? pop said, and ma said, Well, it's a woman who was born in China through no fault of her own on account of her parents being missionaries, and she came to this country as a young girl where she married a worthless good for nothing chap and leaves him to keep her self respect before the play opens.

By gollies that's you to a tea, that Papst woman must be a wizz at type shooting, pop said. I might be pursuaded to take part in a play myself if I could ever find a roll in a play that's just my type. Do you know what my type is? It's a man who was found floating on a raft when he was a baby and nothing elts was heard of him till he was discovered years later painting red flowers on yellow cups and saucers in a pottery work in Japan, never suspecting that on the bottom of each cup and saucer is stamped Made in Sweden, dont you think that hits off my type exactly? he said, and ma said, Such nonsense, I only have 2 lines to speak so you can imagine the feeling I must put into them to suggest all that passed history.

No I can't imagine, pop said.

STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, April 8 1(CP)—Prices were trimmed for index losses of a point or two today on the Toronto Exchange as volume dropped away to the lowest of the year. Only about 275,000 shares changed hands, equal to about an hour's turnover in normal times. The only explanation for the dull tempo appeared to be a general desire among traders to hold off till Europe settles down.

Demand for Eggs About Equals Supply

Toronto, April 18.—Although a firmer undertone appeared in butter, no price changes occurred on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Fair trading and light offerings steadied the butter market. Some holders were endeavouring to obtain higher prices as fresh receipts were clearing, but buyers were not willing to take on first grade Ontario product above 21c. Ontario creamery solids traded at 21c for No. 1 grade, and 20 1-4c for 38 score. Prints turned over at the previous prices of 22 1-2c to 23c for top grades, and 21 3-4c to 22 1-4c for 38 score.

Offerings moved readily at prevailing prices on the egg market. Production is being retarded to some extent by the adverse weather conditions and receipts are arriving in about sufficient volume to supply the local demand, with no surplus available for storage. Graded shipments closed at 20c for grade A large, 19c for medium, 18c for pullets, and 17c for B and C grades.

Montreal, April 18—Butter and eggs held steady on open produce markets here yesterday, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22 1-2c to 23c a pound and solids for 22c to 22 1-2c.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 21c a dozen for A large, 19 1-2c for A medium, .. 1-2c for A pullets, 18 1-2c for B large, and 18c for C. Receipts: 1,065 cases.

HOG QUOTATIONS

Toronto, April 18—(CP)— Up 40 cents from yesterday, Hamilton dressedweight price at $11.80 topped the bacon-hog markets in that division today. Chatham prices rose 25-40 cents and Brantford liveweights increased 10 cents to $8.60. Other markets were unchanged.

Liveweights: Brantford $8.60, Chatham $8.50, Hull $8.50.

PENNY PIECE THOUGHT NO GOOD IS GOLD PIECE

Florence, S. C., April 18 (AP)—Fifteen-year-old Mary Jo Cockfield's mother gave her three pennies to put in the Sunday school collection. But the teacher turned one of them back, telling her it was no good. After hard polishing, the mother, Mrs. T. V. Cockfield, discovered the penny was a $2.50 gold piece.

Galaxy of Belleville Talent Presents Program

Appealing to the aesthetic souls of the most critical students of musical art, "Musical Night", sponsored by the Devotional Commission of the B.Y.P.U. of Victoria Ave. Baptist Church, was the means of bringing before a well-filled auditorium on Monday evening a galaxy of local talent in a varied program that sparkled with beauty and culture.

Heading the long program, the Belleville Male Quartette, comprising Messrs. Harry Moorman, James Bankier, Harold Howard and Alfred Evans, whose vocal eminence is well established, rendered several very pleasing numbers that included "The Jolly Blacksmith", "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes", Negro Shout "Hie Away Home" and that well-loved Negro spiritual "Steal Away."

Donald Henderson, a young artist of promise, played several familiar hymns on his electric guitar, "Abide With Me", "Onward Christian Soldiers", and "Sweet Hour of Prayer." An interesting feature of Mr. Henderson's instrument is the amplifying unit, utilizing a loud speaker, radio tubes, and other contrivances, which employs electric current in the "pick-up" arrangement, the whole being the result of the young musician's own experiments.

Miss Mildred Lloyd, elocutionist, injected a note of comedy into the program with two rollicking numbers, one concerning a simpering female radio announcer pushing sales for Plunkett's Pink Pills over station KNUT and the other in French-Canadian dialect "The Stove Pipe Hole."

A feature that captured the hearts of the audience was the resonant tones of the electric vibra-harp, played by Mr. Ed Rupert. This instrument, of which there are but a few in Canada, is similar in construction to the xylophone; the notes are metal, however, instead of hard wood and situated below each note is a sounding-tube with a baffle or fan blade at its entrance, which revolves by means of an interconnecting belt run by an electric motor. When the notes are struck these revolving blades create sound waves that throw wonderful chime-like tones which prove very satisfying to the ear, especially in a large auditorium. Mr. Rupert played an Easter hymn "Up From the Grave He Arose", also "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere", "The Old Rugged Cross" and "It is Well With My Soul."

Mr. Frank Whittle's fine tenor was heard in two vocals, "Then You'll Remember Me" and Brahm's "Lullaby" and Miss Muriel Jobson sang very sweetly "Little Grey Home in the West."

Miss Mary Pigeon and Mr. Bruce Sills contributed in the rendition of two accordian duet numbers "Simplicity Waltze" and "Whispering Hope" that brought spontaneous applause from their appreciative hearers.

Mr. Alec Gordon, organist of Bridge St. United Church, whose wizardy with the ivory keys is always enjoyed, played two piano selections "Polonaise" and "Hungarian Etude." The sensitive fingers of Mr. L. G. Lennox gathered magic from the strings of his violin in the offering of "Chant Hindou", "Danny Boy", and "On Wings of Song." Mr. R. A. Lennox supplied piano accompaniment.

Interspersed in the program were several capable offerings by Intermediate B.Y.P.U. members. These included Miss Jean Cook with two humorous readings, Miss Anna Hogle's dramatic reading, "The Last Hymn" with musical background supplied by Miss Katherine Hogle and two numbers by the Intermediate Boys' Quartette, comprising Carne Bray, Ernie Whittle, Leslie Wynne and Clarence Sagar, accompanied at the piano by Miss Marjorie Faires. Tribute was paid to the boys' efforts by Mr. Harry Moorman.

Rev. C. T. Olmstead ably performed the duties of chairman. To impresario Arthur Wynne is due much praise for gathering together such a talented group of entertainers and arranging a well-rounded program that left nothing to be desired. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Mr. Olmstead after which the artists were entertained at a luncheon in the church parlours by the B.Y.P.U. Devotional Commission.

LARGE AMOUNT LUMBER SAWN BY MILLTOWN MILL

Sawage of one hundred thousand feet of lumber, one of the largest amount cut in years, was estimated yesterday by Robert Little and Sons, Milltown sawing outfit proprietors.

The largest number of logs cut from the woods of the district in years lie in wait for the sawyers' operations. The large number is attributed to the fact that sleighing and other hauling facilities encountered in years has been enjoyed by farmers of the district during the season just ended.

Police Blotter

John Diamond, Stirling, parked his automobile on Church Street yesterday and while it was there another motor car collided with the rear of Mr. Diamond's car, damaging the vehicle considerably. The driver of the second vehicle failed to stop at the scene of the accident, Mr. Diamond informed city police. He also provided the authorities with the licence plate number of the 'hit and run' vehicle. The matter is receiving police attention today.

When Edward Grass, 270 William Street, went to his barn yesterday to look over his garden utensils, he found the family lawn mower missing. Spring was in the air prompting Mr. Grass to prepare for the lawn mowing season, but his mower had been removed from the premises A description of the mower was given city police and the matter will be thoroughly investigated, as it is believed the mower was stolen and disposed of locally.

Although no arrests were effected yesterday the city police cell block was well populated last night when twenty-one transients were given shelter from the heavy down pour of rain that fell.

A. T. BURTT IS INSTALLED AS CHIEF DICTATOR

Presentation Made to Past Dictator Mossman and Wife

BANQUET HELD

With notables of the Moose Lodge present from many parts of Ontario, the annual installation of officers of Belleville branch of the Moose Lodge, No. 1004, L.O.M., was held in the Moose Auditorium last evening when A. T. Burtt was exalted to the supreme position of Dictator for the ensuing year. Delegates from Toronto and Trenton assisted the local members in the installation ceremony, which was followed by a delightful banquet provided by the ladies of the organization.

W. G. Kirkwood, General Dictator of Ontario, from Toronto, was the guest speaker of the evening, talking on the subject of lodge co-operation and mutual benefits. "Despite the trend of the times the Moose Lodge is forging ahead gradually and our benefits increasing annually," assured Mr. Kirkwood as he outlined the activities of the Moose Lodges throughout Ontario during the past years.

During the evening banquet Past Dictator G. M. Mossman occupied the chairman's seat and introduced Dictator-elect Burtt, who' accepted his new duties and responsibilities, assuring the members of his untiring efforts and requesting equal co-operation. BRITISH HOUSE for Foreign Affairs, said the date of General Franco's victory march into Madrid had been postponed until May 15 when Mussolini's promise to evacuate Italian troops, planes and pilots would become effective.

While rumors circulated in London that German troops might march tomorrow into the Free City of Danzig from East Prussia, Mr. Butler told the House that the League of Nations, which has a commissioner in that Nazi-dominated Baltic port, would have to consider any change in the status of Danzig.

Asked whether "existing Polish rights in Danzig were covered by a recent British guarantee" to Poland, he refused to add to Mr. Chamberlain's declaration pledging Anglo-French aid to maintain Polish independence.

Poland's Attitude

Britain has indicated, however, that the question of whether Britain decides to fight for Poland rests entirely on Poland's willingness to go to war.

(Danzig, under a post-war settlement that separated the Free City from Germany, was placed under the Polish customs administration. Poland has indicated that any change in the Danzig status must come only through negotiation, not through one-sided action either by herself or Germany.)

In some diplomatic quarters it was suggested that any Anglo-Turkish anti-aggression agreement would not be made public from fear it might antagonize Germany, Turkey's best customer. The Turkish Ambassador called at the foreign office this morning while the Bulgarian and Soviet Envoys left for their home capitals for consultation.

Turkey And Bulgaria

It was understood in informed quarters that Turkey has been trying to get Bulgaria into a solid Balkan bloc.

Atty. General Conant Refuses to Comment

Toronto, April 18—(CP)—Attorney General Gordon Conant today refused to discuss reports that theft of large quantities of dynamite from construction firms had roused fears of sabotage at the generating and distributing plants of the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission.

"In this case I believe anything I say would be detrimental to the public interest," said Mr. Conant. "In the public interest I have to shut up."

Reports said the government has appealed to the Department of National Defence to cooperate in providing guards and patrols for the chief nerve centres of the huge Hydro system.

C. N. ROUNDHOUSE FULLY DESCRIBED

Alf. Jones, Locomotive Foreman Gives Interesting Address to Y's Men

The romance of railroading and the history of the Belleville Canadian National roundhouse were explained to the members of the local Y's Men's Club at their weekly meeting held at the Y.M.C.A. last evening by Alf. Jones, C.N.R. Locomotive foreman of the Belleville division.

"The Belleville roundhouse was built in 1910 and was then the very latest in the matter of engine hostelries. It is a 48 pit roundhouse with 42 stalls, the remaining spaces being for incoming and out-going engines. We employ 96 men at the Belleville terminal in the roundhouse along with a pay roll of $10,000.00 per month in that department alone, all of these men are city residents and represent a large percentage of our community.

"Through our roundhouse we dispatched over 900 engines each month. At our coal chutes we can completely service an engine in less than ten minutes, including 10,000 gallons of water, a tender of coal and completely oiled and greased, so rigid are our maintenance regulations," added Mr. Jones as he continued to describe the various types of engines, which pass through Belleville on the Canadian National Railways.

"The largest engine we have weighs 336 tons, including the tender. It has a drive wheel diameter of 80 inches and is built for speed. Our smaller engines in the yard have smaller wheels, which give them more power for their purpose. Our railway began a program of modernization in 1921 and today we have the finest and best railway equipment to insure safety and speed," explained Mr. Jones as he concluded by stating the C.N.R. will ultimately prove a national asset especially with so much continued advancement in railway operation.

The speaker was introduced by Y's man Bob Pringle and thanked for his enlightening revelation by Chairman Lionel Blaker. During the evening Arthur Wynne delighted the gathering with two well rendered baritone solos.

THE GOLDEN GIRL

—by—

Agnes Louise Provost and Ladbroke Black

Miss Endicott did nothing so foolish as to tell him that she had summarily dismissed Gloria Stainton. She was fighting for the Endicott dignity, for Jack's future as she saw it, and that future held no place for pretty secretaries.

"I see you have a new secretary" he said casually.

"Yes; Miss Staunton left some days ago. But I think I shall like Miss Dalton quite well. She is quiet and efficient and more likely to be contented away from town. But tell me about yourself, my dear. I have missed you."

"My dear Jack there is not the slightest necessity for you to go into business. You know that whatever I have is yours."

He smiled ruefully. "I haven't gone into business. I started out last Monday to see what a husky chap of twenty-seven well-fed years, moderate intelligence and a decent wardrobe could do in the line of breaking into the fields of high finance. I tramped miles of corridors, made a lot of altitude records shooting up in elevators and lost a lot of conceit, but nobody seemed a bit anxious to engage my services. Even in the jobs where you plug away at a desk with a green shade over your eyes they ask you what experience you've had."

"By four o'clock I was pretty mad. I decided that if experience counted for so much I'd use what I had. Now, my long suit is cars. I can do anything with a motor—make it sit up and beg, or roll over and play dead. So I walked into the nearest garage and offered myself, and the proprietor fell on my neck and wept for joy. Behold me, Miss Endicott, a valuable repair man in McGilvary's Central Garage, with my first pay envelope in my pocket, and another, many more I hope, on the way."

"Jack!"

For an instant her eyes blazed. Then her anger seemed to fade into an almost furtive fear.

"Is it because you need money, Jack? I will increase your allowance at once."

"No, no; you have been entirely too generous," he assured her hastily. "You see, Aunt Harriet —" he went on.

"I cannot see anything but insanity in such a course," he retorted impatiently. "If you must do something, why not try for something that a gentleman may do? If you would like a post in the diplomatic service I will speak to some of my friends in Washington. Our family has plenty of influence. But no Endicott ever demeaned himself by working as a common laborer. I wish you to stop it at once."

Something in his face made her pause.

"Of course," she added hastily, "if it is one of those ridiculous bets—"

She waited hopefully, almost pitiably anxious to be reassured He dropped an affectionate arm around her shoulders, hopeless of making her understand

"Yes, it's—a sort of bet. But you must let me see it through now."

CHAPTER VII

A little later he was in the anteroom again and went directly over to the table which was serving Miss Dalton as a desk. She noticed with a dry smile that he lowered his voice.

"I have a book which belongs to Miss Stanton," he said. "If you will give me her address I will mail it to her."

"Miss Endicott didn't mention any address," said Sara brusquely

Her cool upward glance flickered over him, caught quick disappointment, and dropped again.

"He is nice," said Miss Dalton to herself, "and if Glory is to comply with that outrageous will, it's now or never. There's no telling what she will do, but anyway it's flying in the face of Providence not to let him see her."

She expertly whirled an envelope into place in the typewriter and began to click the keys.

"Perhaps," he insisted politely "you will find Miss Staunton's forwarding address at Beechwood. I should like very much to send her book to her."

"M'm'" said Miss Dalton dryly. She made a swift dab at a shining nickel handle at one end of the typewriter and began to write a new line. "I might send it on for you," she offered. "I used to work in the same office with her and I know about where she would be."

A second jab at the nickel handle. The envelope jumped another space and the keys pounded smartly again. There was an emphasis about Miss Dalton's movements which made him look down absently, wondering just how he could get Gloria's address from this odd person. Beneath his eyes was the envelope she had just addressed:

Miss Gloria Staunton,
903 East 102nd. St.,
City.

"You're an angel!"

The envelope was in his pocket and Sara found her hand grasped with an energy that made the knuckles ache. A second later the door closed. It almost slammed.

Gloria sat with the afternoon paper spread in front of her, looking through the "Help Wanted" columns. On the table beside her, in mocking contrast to her search, lay the letter from John Carver. She dropped her chin on a pink palm and stared at the tantalizing thing.

"I would be horrible," she said hotly, "to marry that way."

Jack's heart leaped to his throat at the sight of Gloria's trim head, its burnished gold like a flame against the dull walls of the little corridor.

"I am in luck to have found you," he said simply. It was all the greeting he could muster and he could have flayed himself for the thrill in his tone that made it seem almost tremulous.

"I did not know you had my address," she said leading the way to the tiny living room.

"I am developing great qualities as an amateur sleuth," Jack replied. "I simply had to see you."

She felt her eyes travel over her shabby quarters, as she mentioned him to a chair.

"Please forgive me for following you but I only just heard that you had left." His tone was grave and the dancing light in his eyes had vanished. "I hope the Endicott reputation for honesty and fairness has not suffered from anything my aunt may have done?"

"Miss Endicott had the right to dispense with my services if she wished," said Gloria coldly. "I prefer not to discuss my leaving Beechwood."

She was indignant with him for following her, indignant also with Sara who must have given him her address, and her cheeks grew warm as an inkling of Sara's purpose came to her. Her unwilling eyes seemed dragged toward the letter from her uncle's lawyer and executor lying on the table beside them.

That was why she did not see the queer look which came over his face and as quickly disappeared.

"I am sorry." He spoke haltingly, which was not usual with him. "I fear my inability to efface myself when you were anywhere about has worked you a serious injustice. I wish there was something I could do to make amends."

On the chair nearest him lay a newspaper opened so that he could see column after column of "Help Wanted" "Situations Wanted", marching monotonously across the printed page.

"Isn't there something — anything that you will let me do?"

Gloria lifted her eyes from the wretched letter which one moment beckoned with tantalizing fingers and in the next gibbered and jeered at her. A hasty terrified resolution was taking shape in her mind. Her heart seemed to be beating in her throat.

"There is only one thing that anyone could do at present, but — it is too dreadful—" somehow the words would not come.

"What is it, Gloria?" Jack's voice could be so gentle!

"I had an uncle," she said at length, her words tumbling over each other with a strange eagerness. "We never agreed very well. He disapproved of my earning a living even though I would otherwise be dependent on his charity. Less than a month ago he died. Has left everything to me provided that I marry within a certain period. That time will be up in two days. I thought perhaps I could that is might be possible to marry merely as a business agreement to comply with the terms of the will, and so that neither person would be bound in any way."

He had taken the chair opposite her and sat there listening quietly, almost impersonally, with his eyes fixed on her.

"Am I to understand that you would be willing to marry me under those circumstances?"

Gloria's lashes shadowed her cheeks for a moment. Now that her secret was out she would have given anything to recall it.

"You know I told you that I couldn't really care for you?"

"I understand that." He even smiled a little.

"There is something else," she continued hurriedly. "We need never see each other after the ceremony unless there are papers to be signed. But—it would be utterly impossible if it were to be known. I want to keep my own name and go my own way.. No one except my uncle's lawyer need know that we are married. I mean it as a purely business arrangement, a sort of partnership. You would make it possible for me to inherit this money and I would arrange with the executor to have a definite amount paid to your bankers—say a third of the income. Oh, I know it sounds preposterous and dreadfully mercenary! But what can I do?"

She broke off with a slight despairing gesture, but for a moment Jack did not answer. Then he looked up and again she caught that strange smile that somehow was not mirthful.

"I think we shall have no trouble about business details," he said quietly. "And of course I shall respect your wishes if you want the marriage kept secret. The time being short the best thing would be for me to call for you tomorrow morning in the roadster. That will be less noticeable than taking a train together in case we meet people we know. Of course we shall have to go out of the state, but we can soon get back, and you can communicate with your uncle's lawyer by wire."

He might have been arranging for a luncheon engagement or a day's motoring trip. He held out his hand and she placed hers in it. Her affianced husband. It gave her a queer feeling.

"Thank you. I—it was dreadfully hard to tell you, but you have been very kind about it."

"Not in the least," he assured her. He seemed once more the light, irresponsible Jack Moreland that she had known at Beechwood. "It will be rather a sporting adventure, you know. Do you mind if I come at seven tomorrow? We shall need an early start?"

"I shall be ready."

Down in the lower hall Jack Moreland stood for a moment and looked out. It was raining.

"A pleasant outlook for my wedding day," he muttered. "Well — it is a sporting adventure, Gloria dear, whether you know it or not."

His right hand, carelessly thrust into his pocket, came in contact with a stiff rectangle of paper. He pulled it out, a little yellow pay envelope with the first week's wages he had ever earned in his life. He had meant to show it to Gloria. He smiled grimly and pocketed it again.

"Not now, little yellow friend. We are marrying an heiress and pay envelopes won't count. Tomorrow, up early and across the state line! Then back again, a married man without a wife! I wonder what will come of it?"

CHAPTER VIII

It seemed to Gloria that for the rest of her life she would remember that drive through the spring morning. Jack was at the apartment early, as he had promised, and she had come down to find the roadster at the curb, low, grey and swift.

For a second panic had seized her at the irrevocable step she was taking. How did she know she could trust this spoiled, pleasure-loving young spendthrift to live up to the dreadful agreement he had made with her? Then Jack's voice, pleasantly practical, brought sanity back again.

"I am even earlier than I said, but it is well to have a good start in case of delays later."

She assented, but her voice sounded far away. He had helped her in with the lightest possible touch of her arm and slid into the seat beside her. Then off through dingy streets into the open country, with the throb of the motor in her ears and the acute consciousness of his presence at her side, freshness of morning and of spring running through it all like a shining thread.

They said little. Now and then she stole a look at him. Today he seemed even more of a stranger than he had been in the few months of casual acquaintance at Beechwood, quieter and more reserved. He seemed occupied with his driving in spite of the fact that he did it with such indifferent ease.

"State line," he said laconically, and Gloria caught her breath as they sped over into a state where marriage laws were less stringent.

The moments were slipping by — slipping by—

An hour later they stood in the parlor of a modest parsonage with a clergyman and hastily gathered witnesses. Strange faces, all of them. And this was her wedding! A marriage that was no marriage, an elopement without romance, a business contract for the use, always secret of this man's name.

She felt a ring slipped over her finger, Jack Moreland's hands just brushing her own, and heard the voice of the strange clergyman:

"I now pronounce you man and wife."

She was Mrs. Jack Moreland. There could be no turning back now."

Then they were off again in the grey roadster speeding back over the roads by which they had come. Already the capricious spring day showed signs of change. There was a hint of grey where blue and gold had been, a touch of chill in the wind which had been so balmy an hour before. Jack slowed down long enough to tuck a robe around her.

"Comfortable?" He almost whispered it.

"Oh, very," she answered hastily.

They sped on again. The distant city appeared, a smoky blur against the edge of the sky, then a jagged outline, a labyrinth of roofs and chimneys and upthrusting towers. Already as they came into the outskirts a light mist tingled against their faces.

They stopped only once and that was at a telegraph office where they both stood at a dingy wall desk while Jack scribbled off a telegram for her.

"Letter concerning Staunton will received. Was married this morning.

Address until further notice—"

He stopped and looked at her questioningly.

"You will get the answer addressed to Mrs. Moreland,' he reminded her.

"I know." She colored faintly. It was so new, and so awkward in its secrecy. "I thought I might go to some quiet hotel until I got Mr. Carver's answer and know what arrangements have to be made. I had thought of the Grandon—unless anyone you know is likely to be there?"

"Not a soul so far as I know."

He wrote the hotel name in and then added her own.

"Gloria Staunton Moreland."

It gave her a shock to see it written there. "I don't know her very well," she said breathlessly, and found his quizzical smile rather disconcerting.

"No," he said slowly. "I don't believe you do."

While she wondered just what he meant he took the telegram over to the desk, gave it to the clerk and started it on its way.

Half an hour later they stopped in front of the dingy hive of an apartment house that she had left that morning. He leaned forward and tucked in her purse a card with a pencilled address on it.

"If I can do anything don't hesitate to call on me.. That address will always reach me."

"Thank you. Of course there will be certain arrangements to be made."

He made no reply, nor did he attempt to go in with her for which she was thankful, but he stood for a moment beside her on the pavement, looking at her. Just looking. Then he held out his hand.

"Good-bye. Thank you for trusting me."

He was back in the car and slipping away from the curb. In a second more he was a part of the traffic of the noisy street.

Gloria went upstairs slowly. The tide of excitement which had carried her through the day was ebbing fast. As she opened the door signs of confusion and haste met her eyes, a small trunk in the middle of the floor, clothing and books and oddments of personal possessions here and there in the midst of them Sara packing the rest of her belongings to leave for Beechwood. Sara turned an anxious face toward her and asked:

"Glory dear, but I'm glad to see you! I couldn't imagine where you were all this time."

Gloria pushed the door shut and leaned against it, half nervous, half defiant.

"I'm married," she said recklessly. "I was married this morning —for money! I have a husband whose name I shall never bear, a fortune that was left me in malice and a secret to hide for the rest of my life. How pleased dear Uncle Robert would be!"

Her laughter, mirthless and hysterical, shivered through the little room. Sara sprang to her feet and seized her firmly by the shoulders.

"Gloria Staunton, what is the matter with you?" She softened abruptly. "Child, you're tired out! Here, sit down and let me take your things off. Wet, too! Have you had lunch?"

Gloria shook her head. "No, I was in such a hurry to get back and send a telegram to the lawyer."

Sara went out to the tiny kitchenette. With a woman's unerring instinct she went directly to the teapot. She sent an anxious question over her shoulder.

"Who is it, Glory—or can't you tell me"

"Jack Moreland."

"You might do worse," she said tersely. "He's a nice fellow. And its' easy to see he's crazy about you."

Over the hastily prepared luncheon Gloria's composure came back to her. As briefly as possible she told Sara how it had come about.

"And that is all there is to it," except that I must go to the Grandon and be there to receive Mr. Carver's reply. No one will know me there. And, Sally dear, I want you to give up drudging for Miss Endicott and come with me."

"No," said Miss Dalton decidedly. "I'm much obliged, Glory, but I've made my own way too long for that. Besides, I like my new job and I'm going to see it out. But I wish you good luck. I hope everything turns out all right."

She went back to the kitchenette and busied herself brushing up the fragments of the broken cup.

"I hope it does turn out all right," she muttered to the dustpan. "But I don't like the secrecy. I don't like it at all."

Miss Endicott was worried. Several things, of late had combined to disturb her. There was that wretched flirtation between Jack and her former secretary. Then there was this absurd prank of his, this notion to earn money in a distressingly menial way. She wondered if there could be any connection between the two. It made her feel the urgent need of more money herself to keep Jack sufficiently amused to forget these whims.

Already the money received from the Cheriton fours was dwindling with appalling rapidity. There had been so many outstanding bills so many new expenditures, and then the roadster, her birthday gift to Jack, had been a heavy item.

Miss Endicott tapped the telephone table nervously.

"Jack's friend said that I should have my money invested more profitably. He was right. No one in these days can afford to get only a wretched three or four per cent."

She drew the telephone toward her and called Mr. Wayne Gorham.

Fire on Liner Believed Set by Foreign Saboteurs

Two Killed in Fire Which Sinks Liner At Le Havre Port

Former Flagship of French Merchant Fleet Burned Through and Sinks in 36 Feet of Water

ITALIAN IS HELD

Shipment of Warplanes Made in United States Taken Off Vessel Hour Before Fire Starts

Le Havre, France, April 19—(AP)—The liner Paris, once the flagship of the French merchant fleet sank in 36 feet of water today, burned through by fire which officials suspected was set by foreign saboteurs.

Two persons were killed and two others seriously injured in the night-long fight against the flames which firemen said spread from two widely separated parts of the ship. One point of origin was behind locked doors.

Investigators said preliminary investigations strengthened the belief that the 34,000-ton liner was deliberately set afire.

An Italian dockworker was held for questioning by Le Havre police.

Planes Taken Off

A shipment of warplanes made in the United States for the French army was taken off the vessel only an hour before it listed and sank in the centre of the port. The planes had not been unloaded from the Paris, which arrived from New York Saturday, before the fires started.

Mayor Leon Meyer of Le Havre told The Associated Press that in his opinion "incendiarists" were responsible.

Fire fighters said the main blaze originated in the ship's bakery. The heavy door of the bakery was locked and firemen had to hack it open. Meanwhile the fire gained considerable headway.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Build for wind! During the last great hurricane which visited New England many houses, barns, fences, signs, etc. were blown down. This should remind all builders that they should design their structures to stand the maximum wind speed for any locality may be obtained from any U.S. Weather Bureau office. The pressure of the wind may be calculated from its velocity. The pressure per square foot is obtained by multiplying the speed by itself, and multiplying that result by .005. Thus a wind of 50 miles per hour has a pressure of 50 x 50 x .005, or 12.5 pounds, for each square foot of exposed surface. Apply a good factor of safety to this to allow for wear and tear.

Ottawa, April 19—(CP)—A gleaming train of royal blue trimmed with silver and gold will carry the King and Queen across Canada next month, the inter-department committee in charge of arrangements for their Majesties' visit announced Tuesday.

King George, Queen Elizabeth and a few of their attendants will find luxurious accommodation in two private cars at the rear end of the 12-car train. Other cars in the train will carry Prime Minister Mackenzie King and members of the royal retinue.

Slightly ahead of the royal train throughout the royal tour will be a 12-car pilot train carrying the press, other members of the royal entourage, and tour officials.

Workmen have made considerable progress in preparing the royal train at Montreal. Painting is well advanced and so is refitting and redecorating. Locomotives, four from Canadian National Railways and two from the Canadian Pacific Railway, will be painted blue and trimmed with silver and gold like the cars.

The cars will have roofs of gunmetal topping the royal blue. Panels between the windows will be silver and there will be horizontal gold stripes above and below the window line.

Of the two cars devoted to the King and Queen, one will be fitted as a private apartment for Their Majesties. There will be two royal bedrooms, each with dressing room and bathroom attached, as well as two bedrooms for members of the royal staff and a sitting room for the King and Queen. The second private car will be arranged for two additional staff bedrooms with bathroom, an office, a dining room and kitchen and a large lounge or official drawing room.

HUNGARY BOUND

Will Stick Firmly to Axis Hungary Premier Tells Italians

Rome, April 19—(AP)—Italy, manoeuvring with Germany for position in the current European crisis, appeared today to have bound Hungary firmly to the Rome-Berlin axis.

The Hungarian Premier, Count Paul Teleky, in an after dinner toast to Premier Mussolini last night at Palazzo Venezia, said his country was "faithful to the policy of the axis which Hungary has spontaneously adopted."

Mussolini, in a similar speech, reaffirmed a friendship which "unites the strength of each country in the defence of order and peace."

The axis diplomatic campaign, which began last weekend with German Marshal Hermann Goering's visit to Rome will continue, after the scheduled Thursday departure of the Hungarian Premier and his Foreign Minister, with Italian-Yugoslav and Italian-Rumanian talks.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE BILL TO BE INTRODUCED

Ontario Will Participate in Any Scheme Initiated by Federal House

Toronto, April 19—(CP)—Enabling legislation authorizing the Ontario government to participate in any scheme of unemployment insurance initiated by the Dominion government will be introduced in the provincial legislature today.

The measure was forecast in the Speech from the Throne and notice of its introduction was given last night by Hon. N. O. Hipel, Minister of Labor. It is understood Ontario does not intend to proceed with a provincial unemployment insurance scheme this year, regardless of what federal authorities may do.

The House also will hear from Attorney-General G. D. Mr. Conant promised the statement after Conservative leader George A. Drew asked if

Gibraltar, April 19—(CP Havas)—Decision to concentrate a French naval fleet off Gibraltar arose from concern lest an Italo-German-Spanish coup be attempted against Gibraltar, Portugal and the Tangier international zone, Havas was informed last night.

Anxiety has been allayed somewhat by official reassurances from Spain and Portugal, British authorities said. Nevertheless Gibraltar remained alert.

Word arrived from London that the Portuguese government placed no credence in rumors that extremists among General Franco's advisers in Spain contemplated a move to swallow up Portugal in an "Iberian federation." These reports said Portugal regarded the ancient Anglo-Portuguese alliance as stronger today than at any time since the outbreak of the Spanish civil war.

BOY RUNNING AFTER BICYCLIST IS STRUCK BY CAR, POLICE CHARGE

Police said the lad was running along road behind a friend who was riding a bicycle and that both were struck from rear by a car said to have been driven by Simon Zinger, New Germany.

Hammond suffered a compound fracture of one leg, a possible skull fracture and extensive head lacerations. His cycling friend, 14-year-old John Schnarr was unhurt.

PROSPECTS OF PROROGATION BY KING DIMMING

C.C.F. Members Want More Definite Action on Two Subjects

Ottawa, April 19—(CP)— Prospects of a royal prorogation of parliament next month dimmed today as debate on unemployment went into its fourth day and definite opposition to a speeding up of parliamentary business came from the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation.

"In my opinion this House should not think of prorogation, this House should not think of adjournment until we have something far more definite laid down with respect to two problems which were pressing in 1935 and which are still urgent—unemployment and the problem of agriculture," said M. J. Coldwell (C.C.F. Rosetown-Biggar).

"There is nothing that warrants this House in rising at the present time or within the next month or two, for so far in four years this government has done nothing to meet the pressing problems that confront this country."

Debate Takes New Turn

Something Necessary Beside 3 R's Says P. S. Inspector

Kitchener, April 19—"When we look around at individuls in the degenerated world of today, it is perfectly obvious that education has failed," Dr. H. J. Preuter, Inspector of Public Schools, told the Kiwanis Club Tuesday afternoon. Dr. Preuter asserted, however, that schools today are in a remarkable position in respect to views of the public, probably better than ever before. "Parental influence on the child has deteriorated, and more is now left to the school. While the utility aim, the three "R's," reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic got to be something else" stated the speaker.

"We have gotten away from the belief that education and culture are synonymous, and we now realize that there is an abundance of culture walking the streets in overalls" declared Dr. Preuter. "There is no doubt but what education gives a superficial gloss of culture, but there has got to be something else inside."

PAGE REFUSES TO JOIN COALITION WITH MENZIES

Canberra, Australia, April 19 — (CP-Reuters)—Sir Earle Page, leader of the Country Party, today refused to enter a coalition cabinet under Robert Menzies, elected yesterday to succeed the late Prime Minister Joseph Lyons as leader of the United Australia Party.

Under Mr. Lyons the two parties, with a working majority in parliament, had cooperated for five years. Last month Mr. Menzies, then Attorney General, resigned when the Country Party members of the cabinet persuaded the government to junk an old-age pension scheme because of the mounting cost of defence.

HITLER BIRTHDAY PLANS CROWD OUT POLITICAL NEWS

Official Sources Deny Any Action Over City of Danzig

VON PAPEN TO TURKEY

Two - Day Celebration for Fuehrer as He Reaches 50th Birthday

Berlin, April 19—(AP)—Germany relegated politics to the background today and turned attention to the two-day birthday celebration of its leader.

While official sources emphatically denied rumors the Free City of Danzig would be handed to Chancellor Hitler as a present on his 50th birthday Thursday and while the day will find 25 warships of the fleet steaming toward Spanish waters, columns of reports on the birthday preparations crowded out political news from German newspapers.

Hands still were busily completing profuse street decorations, garlanding and beflagging the houses, for the celebration.

Hitler returned to the capital yesterday, after reviewing recruits and inspecting military establishments in Austria. The Chancellor returned to his new chancellory where his first official act was to name Franz Von Papen as the Reich's new Ambassador to Turkey to succeed Friedrich von Keller.

Observers attached great importance to the appointment of Von Papen, who as Ambassador in Vienna laid the foundations for Germany's absorption of Austria. He will be no newcomer to Turkey. He was chief of the general staff of the fourth Turkish army under Field Marshal Liman von Sanders in 1917 after his recall as military attache at Washington.

Observers seeing the appointment as a move to counteract British efforts to gain greater influence in Turkey, which controls the Bosphorus, key to the eastern entrance to the Mediterranean from the Black Sea, noted the comment of Hitler's own newspaper, the Voelkischer Beobachter.

"That he is now being dispatched to Ankara speaks for the value which the Fuehrer places upon the continuation of friendly relations between the young Reich and young Turkey," the paper added.

The Lokal Anzeiger, significantly referring to Prime Minister Chamberlain's remarks in the House of Commons yesterday and his failure to announce inclusion of Turkey in his system of independence guarantees, said "Chamberlain has no new proteges" and "the British Premier this time has a bad day in the House of Commons."

Ridiculing what it said was his role as a world policeman, the paper blamed the British press for having worked "too liberally with advance laurels."

HUNTER SHOOTS WILD

Hamilton, April 19—(CP)—A wild duck hunter whose aim was as wild as his game was sought by police today following receipt of a complaint from Eva Fletcher, that a rifle bullet crashed through the front window near here yesterday.

Hearing the shot and the crash of the glass, she hurried to the door and saw a man running from the marshy grounds to the north. He entered an old roadster and sped eastwards towards Hamilton Beach.

Limitations on Changing Names Proposed in Bill Before Legislature

Toronto, April 19—(CP)— Legal bills committee of the Ontario Legislature today approved a bill sponsored by Louis Hagey (Lib. Brantford) to put legal limitations on the changing of names by individuals or families.

The measure, now to be dealt with by the legislature as a whole, provides that a person can change his or her name or that of a family only after advertising intention to do so and only after a judge has issued an order approving the change.

Attorney General Gordon Conant said the bill was worthy of serious consideration. The present law, enabling any body to change his or her name to anything pleasing was wrong.

"A man can simply assume any name he likes—Mitchell Hepburn or George Drew, for instance," said Mr. Conant. The proposed change would create no hardship for persons seeking to change their names for legitimate reasons.

Attorney General Conant outlined Limitations Act and Mortgages Act complementary bills which change the law as to the right of a mortgagee to receive personal judgment against a mortgager on the covenant for payment of the amount of the mortgage debt.

John Robinette, Sarnia, expert on mortgages, said the bills cut down the period of liability of a mortgager to 10 years from the date of maturity of the mortgage.

Frank Leonard, acting for the Ontario Mortgager's Association, asked for technical changes in the bills and Chairman Ian Strachan (Lib. Toronto-St. Georges) asked the changes proposed be submitted in writing for consideration of the committee of the whole House. The bills will be reported.

Approval was given an amendment to the Optometry Act, removing from the definition of "opticians". persons who simply repair glasses.

Winston Churchill May Join Cabinet; Runciman May Go

Delivery of Munitions Will be Speeded Up by This New Department Belief of Cabinet

NO CONSCRIPTION

Ministers Feel Compulsory Service Would Antagonize Large Section of Trade Union Movement

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, April 19—(CP Cable) — The British government has decided to establish a department of supply to speed up the delivery of munitions and military supplies, it was reported today after a two-hour cabinet meeting.

At the same time rumors increased that Winston Churchill may join the Chamberlain government, perhaps succeeding Viscount Runciman as Lord President of the council.

The government was reported to be in favor of a department of supply which could be expanded in time of war to full-fledged ministry of munitions, with wide control over labor and industry.

Priority in Industry

The main purpose of the department would be to secure priority in industry for government armament contracts. It was not immediately apparent whether it would be under control of a member of the cabinet or a junior minister.

Although Mr. Churchill's name has been associated with entering the cabinet it is not being linked at present with a department of supply.

Prime Minister Chamberlain was expected to make an announcement regarding the latter question in the House of Commons today.

The supply department, at least during the early stages, would be concerned mainly with providing material for the army. The war office urgently needs additional equipment for the territorial army which is being expanded to more than twice its old peace-time strength.

Considered Measures

The cabinet was understood to have considered these further measures:

Adoption of some form of compulsory service.

Reorganization of the voluntary national service register—the listing of volunteers for emergency jobs in wartime—so as to release additional men for service in the territorial army.

Inauguration of compulsory non-military physical training for youth.

A policy of building deep air raid shelters.

It was believed unlikely the cabinet would alter its present view that conscription would be unwise at this stage. The Ministers fear compulsory military service would antagonize a large section of the Trade Union movement.

It was believed, however, that the government would approve a system of compulsory physical training for youth under the joint direction of the Boards of Health and education.

No Large Air Shelters

There appeared to be small likelihood the government would adopt a policy of building big air raid shelters deep underground. The government has distributed small "splinter proof" steel shelters for individual lawns and back-yards.

Mr. Chamberlain told the House that Britain still was in communication with other governments about enlarging the French-British front but he had nothing to report on the progress of conversations.

The Prime Minister, pressed to include China and other far eastern governments in his bloc of nations, said he would bear in mind the "desirability" of such a move.

Substantial Increase

Richard Butler, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, told the House that "there has recently been a substantial increase in the number of men under arms in Italy and a corresponding increase of the forces in the Dodecanese Islands." He gave no figures.

Geoffrey Mander, Liberal, asked how President Roosevelt "knew all about" German intentions to annex Czecho-Slovakia when the British government apparently did not.

Mr. Butler replied that "the British government is as well informed as any other government."

Mr. Mander apparently was referring to the United States President's intimation at a Florida press conference Feb. 16 that he might break his southern vacation because of the gravity of the International situation. Germany absorbed Czecho-Slovakia in March.

ANIMAL CRACKERS

Boone, Ia., April 19 —(AP) — Three baby squirrels and a lone kitten constitute the family being mothered by a cat on the Arbie Peterson farm. The cat adopted the squirrels when the tree in which they lived was cut down.

Allentown, Pa., April 19—(AP)—Fisherman Albert Shellhammer sat down on the bank of a pond, tossed his baited hook into the water and fell asleep. A hefty tug on the line awakened him. When he attempted to haul in his catch he discovered a wild duck on his line. The bird had spotted the bait floating on the water and swallowed it.

Preston, Ont., April 19—(CP) — Police today sought the persons who threw a mongrel dog into a 30-foot well here and nailed boards over the top. Police rescued the animal after children heard whimperings emanating from the well. The animal was standing in water nearly to its neck and was believed to have been in the well at least 40 hours.

Omaha, Neb., April 19—(AP) — Blackie, a three-year-old mongrel dog, and Johnny Walpus 2 1-2-year old, are pals. So when Mrs. Henry Snipp saw Blackie alone, poking his nose into a fish pond, then barking wildly, she investigated, and found Johnny almost drowned in four feet of water.

CROCUSES AND GREEN GRASS PROVIDE REAL TOUCH OF SPRING

With the purple and yellow of crocuses blooming in colorful profusion against the green of hardy perennials, the lawns of Dr. G. H. Stoble, Campbell Street, provide a real Spring touch in a city that is anything but Springlike in appearance.

Green grass that is gradually hiding the drab colors of its winter appearance, is slowly covering the lawns, and providing an additional contrasting effect against the lively shades of the flower blooms.

CITY HALL BASEMENT FLOODED BY RAIN

City hall employees about their usual duties in the lower levels of the building today sloshed through the basement in a depth of six inches of water, the first trouble of this nature reported this season. Evidently the result of heavy surface seepage following the continued rains, the water commenced its rapid penetration of the basement shortly after six-thirty o'clock this morning. Considerable cellar flooding in other downtown buildings has also been reported.

A master chef residing in this city, and who wants his name withheld for business reasons, may accept an invitation to assist with the cuisine on board the Royal Train carrying Their Majesties on their tour of Canada in May.

Duties would last for a week only, and would take place on the Royal Train while in Eastern Ontario. Members of the Master Chefs Association of various districts of Canada will do similar duties while the Royal entourage is in their particular districts, it is understood.

However, although the local chef is delighted with the honour and prospect of assisting to serve Their Majesties, business reason may force him to decline, he stated.

HEAVY RAIN MAY BRING ON WARMER WEATHER

Agriculturists of the district still unable to get at their usual Spring work, were of the opinion this morning that the heavy downpour of rain yesterday and today might prove a blessing by clearing the air for some bright, balmly weather. At the present the land is so badly soaked that it will be some time yet before the usual plowing is permitted.

MOTHS ARE SEEN AROUND LIGHTS

Added to the increasing signs of warmer weather is the report that a number of large moths were observed by a resident fluttering in the light of a downtown street standard last evening. First appearance of bats in the district is also reported by an uptown cigar store from which building one of the little animals was ejected to the street with the aid of a broom yesterday.

Police Blotter

Kingston police reported the theft of two automobiles from that city yesterday. Pontiac coupe, blue in color and bearing Ontario licence plates number 189-N-1 was first reported missing, while later a maroon colored Dodge coach was stolen from the same city. The latter vehicle was equipped with licence plates number 385-N-8. No signs of vehicles of that description were seen locally, however.

A transient who gave his name as Straty Saltaruk with no address given, was arrested yesterday on charges of intoxication. Saltaruk was found to be in possession of a portion of a bottle of native wine as well. He was annoying citizens by pan handling on East Bridge St., when apprehended by P. C. Thomson. Two other persons were taken into custody on charges of inebriation last night.

Reforestation in 7 Counties Increased Hundred Percent

OFFICERS ELECTED

Stirling, April 19 —(Special) — About seventy-five delegates representing Fair Boards, Agricultural and horticultural societies, civic and municipal bodies in the counties of Ontario, Durahm, Victoria, Peterborough, Northumberland, Hastings, Prince Edward and Lennox and Addington gathered for the annual meeting on Conservation and Reforestation held yesterday afternoon in the Town Hall at Brighton. Excellent reports on the ast year's work as given by several representatives revealed nearly 100 percent increase in actual reforestation in counties where planting has been carried on under supervision of the Ontario Department of Forestry working in co-operation with local governing bodies.

Has Keen Interest

Mayor Jamieson Bone of Belleville addressing the delegates as guest speaker expressed keen interest in reforestry from the economic standpoint and in general the benefit it shall eventually bring to the Province. The city of Belleville will in the near future plant two thousand trees in addition to some four thousand, that have already been planted in and about the city for the purpose of adding beauty. This is a step in the right direction and personally I would like the number to increase rapidly and that waste land along the banks of the Moira River near and in the city will some day be transformed into a healthy, colorful forest. Projects such as reforestation were excellent agencies through which municipalities could largely absorb unemployed, he believed. He had some actual experience in planting trees on some of his own property some twenty years ago.

Chairman W. A. Anderson, Peterborough, presided over the meeting and following his address of welcome to the large number of delegates called upon Ian MacLeod, Brighton, Secretary, for his report and also a financial report. The first speaker was A. H. Richardson, officer in charge of reforestation, Forestry Branch, who spoke on "Tree Distribution for 1939" reported an increase in applications from all counties within the zone and throughout the province. Interest was so greatly shown that staff workers are called upon for extra working hours to deal with the applications for trees. Mr. Martin, Assistant Director of Agriculture spoke of the vast areas of fertile soils we possess, averaging about eight acres to the person according to the present population of the Dominion of Canada, but to conserve this vast wealth we must adopt a thorough program of reforestation.

Marginal land and areas unused for crop purpose must be turned back to forests as a moister conservation agency which will in turn greatly affect the flood condition which wash away the priceless top soil from our fields.

Deals With Watersheds

Another address of great benefit to the interested audience was one delivered by G. M. Linton, superintendent Forestry Station, situated at Orono, Ontario, dealing with the subject of nearby watersheds. This was illustrated by means of a lantern. Mr. A. H. Richardson also spoke on Forest Field Days and planting ceremonies and advocated the use of planting ceremonies to mark the coming visit of the British Royalty. The Forestry Branch was anxious to cooperate with any county officials in sponsoring field days of reforestation, which had already proved themselves excellent projects during the past few years.

Another outstanding speaker was Mr. W. H. Porter of the Farmers' Advocate, who described the Province-wide activities of the organization. Each zone having within its bounds eight or ten counties selected its officers, chairmen, vice-chairmen and secretary-treasurer, who in turn formed part of the governing body of the provincial organization, meeting once a year. He urged the delegates to seek the co-operation of service clubs, school boards, Agricultural and Horticultural Societies, create interest and return to a meeting with something really accomplished. It is a Province-wide enterprise that must be build stoutly. Ralph Carman of the Forestry Branch also spoke briefly on the subject "Prince Edward County Soils."

Election of Officers

At this point a nominating committee was appointed composed of Messrs. Winters, A. S. Denyes, F. L. Weldon, M. Rutherford and H. L. Fair, who later presented the following slate of officers to direct the activities of the organization in Zone Number 4 for the coming year.

Chairman—W. A. Anderson, Peterborough.

Vice Chairman—A. E. James, Uxbridge.

Secretary-Treasurer —Ian MacLeod, Brighton.

Ladies Night at Men's Club of Christ Church Enjoyed

Entertaining their lady friends, the members of Christ Church Men's Club held their annual 'ladies' night' entertainment in their Parish Hall last evening. A goodly crowd assembled, despite the inclement weather prevailing. President George Watkin occupied the chair and welcomed those present, assuring the ladies everything had been arranged in order to provide them with fine entertainment.

A musical program and commercial moving pictures preceded carpet bowling, cards and subsequently a delightful luncheon, all of which were in the hands of the executive of the Men's Club. The games proved entertaining to the ladies, especially the carpet ball, which was new and enticing to the fair sex.

The musical program consisted of violin and piano duet, Leslie and Ray Lennox; Musical trio, Clarence and William Sligh and Jerry Nolan; Musical Saw, B. C. Sills; Violin solo, Leslie Lennox; Solos, "Tommy Lad" and "Asleep in the Deep," by Mr. Arthur Brooker; Electric guitar, Mr. Hamilton.

During the evening the meeting was addressed by Rev. G. G. Wright, rector of Christ Church parish.

FISHERMEN AGAIN TRY NIGHT FISHING

First anglers of the season were silhouetted against the early dusk on the government dock last evening as the first of the mudcat fishing got under way following the disappearance of ice from around the edges of the dock. Catches were reported light, but small strings of mudcats were offered as proof that the season's first angling has commenced. Last year, it is recalled by Wm. Dingman, veteran fisherman, first mudcats of the season were hooked on April 6th.

LARGE VOLUME OF WATER FLOWS DOWN THE MOIRA

Rains and Melted Snow Cause Substantial Rise in River Levels

HAS CLEAR PASSAGE

Tons of brown swirling water rushing down the Moira River to the bay today; fed by tributary streams of the northern areas swollen by the rains of the past two days, caused Front Street merchants and flood-minded citizens to pause in retrospect and appreciation of the fact that the ice has left the lower stretches of the river.

Claimed by some to have risen nearly two feet within the past few days, the river today raced down to its mouth, in places a foaming torrent, at the highest speed since it shook itself clear of its ice-shackles a few days ago.

With a clear passage from as far back as O'Brien's Bridge where heavy ice in the "dead water" awaits the disintegrating effects of warm rain or Spring suns, flood waters from sodden fields and swamps of the upper areas are pouring into the river.

Ice from above the Corbyville dam went out a few days ago, not in a rushing roaring torrent but gradually as the large field broke up in small areas and slowly poured over the dam.

While the rise in the river levels is attribtued to the steady rains that have fallen within the past forty-eight hours, these have been augmented with overflow water from former ice and snow covered fields of the districts to the north of the city. Snow is fast disappearing and surface water is flowing into creeks and from there to "Mother" Moira.

"It's a good thing that ice-field went out of the river when it did," commented two Front Street merchants, former victims of flood damage, this morning, "or by the looks of that river, we might be parading around in rubber boots to-day."

A heavy covering of ice and snow is still reported in the woods of the northern townships of the county, and these cold remnants of winter may linger for some time. Ken Bird of Oak Lake reports that in the Oak Hills' district shaded sections of woods contain a measured thirty inches of snow which has apparently been unaffected by the recent warm weather.

'Farewell Come Again' Sign Found in River

The Moira River, bearer of many strange and unusual objects on its broad tides at flood level in spring, delivered the season's most unusual object at the side of Victoria Park yesterday afternoon.

A large wooden sign salvaged by one of the city's unemployed from the banks of the park, evidently from some northern municipality of Hastings County bordering the river, carried the printed lettering: "Farewell—Come Again."

Inspector's Report

Inspector T. D. Ruston's Report follows:—

Belleville, Ontario, April 17, 1939.

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Once more we have come to the end of another year, and in looking back over the year's work we may truly say much has been attempted and by the Grace of God something has been done: Something well worth while. It has been one of the best years. Every member of the Board of Management lent a helping hand, and sustained your superintendent in many perplexing and some times irritating cases that were brought to our attention.

Investigation and Prevention

We had 109 new cases, 50 cases were re-opened, which involved 283 children an increase on last year of 20. These required 198 home visits, 199 office interviews, 97 court attendance, Medical Health clinic attendance 15, Mental Health Clinic. attendance 27.

Children made permanent wards totalled 8 an increase of 8 on last year. Temporary wards No. 15, temporary wardship extended 28, an increase of 15. Two boys were committed to Inds. School, at Bowmanville. Seven girls were committed to Inds. School. One girl to Industrial Refuge, and one girl placed in the care of the Salvation Army Home, Toronto, awaiting admission to the School for the Blind, Brantford.

Children in Care

Visits 226, office interviews 431, Mental Health Clinic 37, Medical Clinic 140, Dental 54, Children in care contacted in office or on visit numbered 371.

Investigations re: Industrial Schools, (a) Before commitment 17, (b) Before parole 14.

Adoptions

Applications fully consummated 24, increase—10.

Un-married Parents' Work

New cases 26, cases re-opened 1; office interviews 253; visits 124; agreements obtained 7; court cases 79; office interviews re mother or child 36; Mental Health Clinic 1; Medical Health Clinic 8.

Cash collected in connection with U. P. Cases $1,748.00. (this does not include any moneys paid direct to the department.)

Meetings, Conferences and Addresses

May I just here give the totals so that you can better visualize the amount of work accomplished during the past year.

Children involved 283, necessitating 548 visits; office interviews 883; Mental Health Clinic 65; Medical Health Clinic 163; court case attendances 176; Industrial School investigations before and after parole 31; mileage covered (approx) 24,000 miles; mail received 3,632; mail sent out 4,398; telephone calls in and out (approx.) 2,727; and many other tasks and problems are brought to the office of which we do not trouble to record.

Work Broadens

As knowledge has been gained and new ideas developed in child caring, the field work of the Society has broadened in its scope, and now at the beginning of another year, we launch out into fuller and even more active work.

The board in its wisdom has appointed a trained Social Worker, Miss M. Robins, B.A., who has come to us highly recommended and with a fine record, and we are looking forward with hope and expectation that at the next Annual Meeting we will be able to prove that this step was in the right direction.

To check evil influence by providing wholesome surroundings and thus give every boy and girl a chance to become a good citizen is generally the accepted solution; but how difficult the task of providing this environment or improvement when one takes into consideration the ignorance and godlessness of so many parents and the absence from the home of the simplest Christian teaching. Is it any wonder that so many of both sexes thrown upon society without a spark of moral principle to restrain them, should fall before the temptations and sneers which beset the pathway of the young? We here have the problem of the godless home out of which neglect and delinquency come.

Family Ties

The Society's aim is to restore the home and preserve whatever family ties there are. However, may I say here that we are often worried by being asked to take charge of a family of children or help in the maintenance when the sole question is one of relief. It cannot be emphasized too much that the society is not a relief organization and that when the only difficulty is lack of finances the problem is one for the relief authorities in the municipality in which they belong.

No man or woman fulfills their duty to Christ today who does not do something either privately or publicly to lessen the misery of the poor or the dependent and neglected child, but remember your service should be wherever it is possible, personal service, giving the personal sympathy and energy to those who need it.

In all our work for human beings, whether of a preventative or reforming character, the thought should run through all our efforts, like a golden thread, that it is not law or system of institutions that save but only the personal influence of good men and women thoroughly imbued with the spirit of love and compassion for the children of misfortune.

Every possible effort must be made by all that touch the home life to bring to bear the influence of religion as a formative power in the lives of children, but without the strengthening power of God at the back and through all we do, our ideals and work will be of little avail.

Sympathy for Suffering

One of the finest epitaphs, as true as fine, is the memorial inscription to General Gordon in St. Paul's Cathedral, London.

"He gave his strength to the work, his substance to the poor, his sympathy to the suffering, his heart to God."

I am sure if we will emulate the spirit of General Gordon in this great work we are engaged in, we will accomplish every lasting good for the community.

In conclusion I desire to express my sincere thanks to you Mr. President for your kindness and valuable assistance and co-operation. Also to the executive and finance committte with whom it has always been a pleasure to meet and work with, to their loyal backing the finances of the society are in splendid shape.

Also, to Mr. B. C. Donnan, K.C., our honourary solicitor, who at any time and without hesitation has given your superintendent and the society valuable assistance, and to Mrs. Morton of the receiving home and the Foster Parents throughout the city and County who minister to the care and well being of our wards.

The only regretful note I have to make is the loss the society has sustained in the resignation of Mrs. E. Stanton, who for the past four years rendered most faithful, intelligent and co-operative service to the work. Her place will be hard to fill but we believe that in Miss G. Etchells we will find the work carried on efficiently and the arduous duties of the office well maintained.

Respectfully submitted,
T. D. Ruston,
Superintendent-Secretary

UNEMPLOYMENT

steps were being considered to prevent sale of the stock.

Urges Reforestation

Continuing the budget debate T. P. Murray (Lib. Renfrew South), urged reforestation should begin with looking after the timber the province has and described himself as a "broadened-out Liberal who thinks more of men than parties."

Mr. Murray said farmers planting a few trees on wet days wouldn't help much. In the long run men working on the conservation of forest resources would add more to the national wealth than men digging for gold.

Monetary reform was advocated by Mr. Murray. There was something wrong with the economic system. Progress was arrested and in its place was confusion and stagnation.

Pride in the record of the Hepburn government and in the Premier's leadership was expressed by Mr. Murray, though of the Premier he said: "He does some strange things."

If there was a liquor problem in Ontario today, it was no fault of the Liberals, said Mr. Murray.

The Conservatives had brought in the Liquor Control Act and described it as "a real temperance measure." It was the Conservatives, too, who had brought the beverage room issue to a head in Ontario.

"It is high time Ontario got wise and cut out some of the liquor," said Mr. Murray. "I'm no teetotaller, I started to drink whiskey when I was 12 years old." But lately he had weaned himself.

Well Looked After

W. B. Reynold (Con. Leeds) said his county had been well looked after by the Minister of Highways.

In the 1937 election campaign in a Brockville address, the Premier announced motor car licences would be reduced by $5.

"Believe me you never did anything in your life that got you more votes." Mr. Reynolds told the Premier. But those who were pleased by the $5 reduction were more than equally displeased today by the two cent increase in the gasoline tax.

The "Tory whisper" predicting the gasoline tax increase, denounced by the Premier, was a fact today.

Mr. Reynolds said he had been amazed at the number of Liberals absent when the gasoline tax increase bill passed the House. Twenty three were not on hand.

F. B. Brownbridge (Lib. Stormont) suggested the legislature set aside a week or 10 days to deal specially with Toronto's problems. Toronto members were wearied by the parade of the Ontario capital's problems all session.

The federal government had been unfair on relief policies in the past 10 years, said Mr. Brownridge. Ottawa should bear at least 70 per cent of relief lists, the province 20 percent and the municipalities 10 per cent.

Teachings of French to English-speaking pupils in the primary schools, especially in areas where there are large numbers of French Canadians, was urged by Mr. Brownridge. In Cornwall there were many public school pupils taking French lessons privately.

Tax More Palatable

Increase today in Quebec of the gasoline tax from six to eight cents made the Ontario increase more palatable along the Provincial border, he said.

Premier Hepburn pointed out that the Quebec increase, effective today, was made without legislative action as there had been in Ontario.

"Quebec simply notified the companies it was to be increased," said Mr. Hepburn. "Quebec took this action to prevent any possible hoarding of gasoline. Legislation will undoubtedly be introduced to make the tax retroactive."

Frank Spence (Cons. Fort William) suggested the Minister of Mines send a geologist into the Severn River region to investigate reports of oil-bearing rock formations. The formations extend from the edge of the Pre-Cambrian mill to Tidewater and many persons were anxious to enter the area.

New System Advocated

Financing of public works through currency issues was advocated by H. N. Carr (Lib. Northumberland). If the national assets were considered sufficient backing for bond issues, why weren't they sound foundations for currency?

"If when we erect a public building to cost a million dollars it is considered security for bonds of a certain amount plus interest, I will be glad to have someone tell me why it is not just as good security for currency to the extent of the amount of principal represented by the bonds," he said.

The House approved in the afternoon a motion by Col. Drew for a select committee to inquire into the administration of the province's timber and pulpwood resources. Hon. Peter Heenan, Minister of Lands and Forests, invited the inquiry to go back many years to learn why it had taken the present government a few years to correct conditions in the department.

TRAINING OF YOUTH

The task of moulding the world's youth rests in large part upon teachers. President Dr. H. J. Cody of the University of Toronto impressed that upon delegates to the O. E. A. this week. How necessary that the youth be wisely guided and what a task rests upon teachers after parents was pointed out as Dr. Cody showed the nations of the world headed towards catastrophe, which he hoped could be avoided without the use of extreme measures.

Enough is known of the training of the children in totalitarian states where the mind and body of the child are directed to one thought only — the exaltation of their own state at the cost of every institution, including the church, and of other nations. How the dictators have dominated the training of the childhood and youth has been revealed. What the results of this training will be, remains to be unfolded.

The parents and others who elect school boards and teachers, must face this great issue of educating the rising generation, because what one is trained in colors the entire life, as it relates to private life and to the state and world.

A SIXTEENTH CENTURY EMBANKMENT

Interesting traces of old river walls and landing places have been brought to light during excavations on the site of part of old Whitehall Palace.

Records going back to the 12th century show the site as occupied by the houses of rich noblemen, but Whitehall Palace, formerly known as York Place, is primarily associated with Wolsey who spent an enormous amount of money on it. The buildings and courtyards by the river covered an area of 23 acres as compared with only 6 at Hampton Court, Wolsey's other Thameside palace.

The only part of the old palace known to have survived, apart from Inigo Jones's banqueting hall, was the King's Wine Cellar which will be preserved in the new Government offices which are to be built on the site.

The remains of paved floors and foundations of parts of an earlier building later incorporated in the Tudor palace have recently been discovered. Among the most interesting of the new discoveries are a paved passage leading to the Queen's Stairs and an early embankment wall of Kentish ragstone. Two masonry platforms, dating from about 1515, project over what used to be the Thames foreshore where the noblemen's gilded barges lay at rest.

Another river wall with six semi-circular bastions on the river side, built by Henry VIII, has also come to light. This second wall was 50 ft. in advance of the earlier one, but 300 ft. behind the present embankment wall, and is known to extend as far as Richmond Terrace.

The last alteration before the palace was destroyed in 1698 was a terrace garden designed by Wren for Queen Mary. It was 280 ft. long with curved flights of steps at both ends leading down to the water. These steps have now been uncovered. A stone pier used for the purpose of boarding the State barges has also been discovered. Photographs and detailed records of the discoveries are being kept, and it is hoped that the steps and river wall of Queen Mary's Terrace may be preserved.

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS

Among the distinguished guests visiting Canada this year are Early Baldwin of Bewdley and Countess Baldwin.

The Earl is so typical of the best English tradition and his Countess is so gracious a lady that Canadians will be delighted to welcome more heartily than it is possible in a short visit. Men like the former Prime Minister are more than individuals, they are representatives and they are types worthy of emulation.

It is easy to understand in a country like Great Britain what must be the influence of a great figure like Earl Baldwin upon the boys of the country. They cannot but breathe into their being something of the spirit and nobility of such men.

Great men! what do they not mean to their country! Their memory lives after them in fame and in the lives of others who inspire oncoming generations. Fortunate great men who not only serve in so many ways their country but lift up the oncoming generations to all time!

Those who meet the noble Earl and the Countess will have the rare privilege of meeting courtesy and grace and those finer human qualities so admired. They are living exemplars.

Meditation is the life of the soul; action is the soul of meditation; honor is the reward of action; so meditate that thou mayst do, so do that thou mayst purchase honor, for which purpose, give God the glory.—Quarles.

ECLIPSE

Earth's shadow has no port of call;
Nor harborage nor resting-place;
Nor crevice in a garden wall
Under the bougainvillea's lace.

Nor under rhododendron lies;
Nor shapes a bed beneath the willow
For lovers' long felicities
Who sleep upon a bracken pillow.

How pleasant, then, to glide along
The moon's cold contours and to seek Rest her volcanic wells among,
Or lean upon Diana's cheek!

And then, the great adventure done,
To fall away, a formless ghost,
Into the somber void, alone
For lonely months, all substance lost.

But constant in those timeless deeps
It waits that moment, opportune
And immemorial, when Earth keeps
Her old appointment with the moon.

KING AND QUEEN ARE TO BE DEPRIVED OF THE PRIVILEGE of seeing the beauties of the Thousand Islands and the Bay of Quinte, which looks like a supreme blunder of those in charge of the itinerary. However, it seems that Ottawa is taking full advantage of the fact that it is the Capital of Canada to detain the Royal visitors there as long as possible. They will no doubt be edified at the Rideau Canal archaic approaches and the contrast between the ancient barges and even more ancient hulls of the tugs, contrasted to the handsome Chateau Laurier, close by, like a picture from the "Dead-End Kids." They may well wish to be saved from their friends when they find they are to be deprived of seeing the St. Lawrence at its best and the Bay of Quinte where the United Empire Loyalists landed and blasted new homes out of the bush after being evicted from their homes south of the border because of their loyalty to the British throne Even the Quints were almost denied them And Belleville is having its old station painted up to look like new when the King and Queen are passing through. If this be treason make the most of it.

CONGRATULATIONS TO THE STUDENTS OF ALBERT COLLEGE in the fine publication just released, "The Alibi," the voice of the students of this popular institution of learning. The fact that this issues of The Alibi marks the celebration of the fifteenth birthday of Albert College in its beautiful home on the banks of the Bay of Quinte is also significant, marking a new and progressive chapter in the eighty-one years of usefulness of Albert College. It was fitting, therefore, that this year's issue of "The Alibi" should be the very best in its history, breathing an air of determination and progress which is a certain augury of success. The Alibi represents the true spirit of Albert College, so well illustrated in every phase of college life, studies, sports and progressive spirit generally. This issue of The Alibi is exceedingly well groomed, well printed and well edited. The cover is the very latest in the modern bookbinder's art, thick covers representing grained wood. Instead of ordinary stitching The Alibi is bound with the very latest in artistic binding known as the Cercla which permit the volume to open easily and fully at every page and is easily held for reading purposes. Its size and general makeup is also worthy of commendation and is sure to meet with the hearty approval of readers. A list of the students at Albert College looks like a directory of Canada, every section of this country being represented, with the majority from Ontario and Quebec, and in addition representation from the British West Indies. Albert has a fine lot of students including the co-eds who would lend grace and beauty and brains to any college. Congratulations upon the publication of a splendid college magazine are in order to the Headmaster, Rev Bert Howard, D.D., and his excellent staff of assistants, as well as to the editorial and business staff of The Alibi who certainly turned in a fine effort, one of which they can each well be proud, and we have no doubt every student of Albert College will long treasure this year's production of The Alibi as among the best of their souvenirs of one of the happiest periods of their lives. Incidentally, The Alibi was printed in the commercial printing department of this Great Family Journal.

The attention of the fishery inspector is called to the fact that a great deal of illegal fishing, or rather fish catching, is being done in the river here daily. Scoop nets, grapples and spears are the instruments used, and the "grapplers" pursue their work during daylight between the footbridge and Coleman's dam. Scoop nets are also used nightly by parties who go to the vicinity of the spawning beds in boats. So far nothing has been done to stop this illegal practice.

Fame From a Comic Strip

As the thoroughbreds rounded the turn and began the last trying dash to the finish line the crowd attending the 1903 Futurity Stakes at Belmont Park, New York, rose to its feet to cheer on Hamburg Belle, an outsider showing her heels to the favorite. Hamburg Belle withstood the challenge and won going away at 30 to 1.

Within 12 hours after the race, a short and somewhat rotund youth of 21 was comfortably ensconced in a pullman bound to New York from St. Louis. In his pocket was $3,000 which he had won on Hamburg Belle on a tip from his bootblack; in his mind the ambition to become a successful cartoonist. To say that he succeeded would be an enormous understatement, for today at 55 George McManus is perhaps the highest paid newspaper cartoonist in the world. The strip, "Bringing Up Father," which was to bring him fame and wealth, actually was born 28 years ago Dec. 9, although it did not appear until Jan. 21, 1911.

Luck has played an important part in the rise of George McManus, but he will tell you that the most consistent factor contributing to his success was hard work.

His parents, connected with the stage, arranged a job for him on the St. Louis Republic when he was 13 years old as assistant to a cartoonist and as part time office-sweeper because he had shown greater aptitude for drawing than he had shown in his studies at school. After more than a year, during which time several of his drawings were used in the paper, his salary was increased—from $5 to $6 a week.

When given a job as regular cartoonist, he launched himself upon a career which should have produced anything but a humorous cartoonist. He accompanied reporters and drew pictures of highlights of a story. He claims at least one record as a news cartoonist: In the short time that he was with the paper he covered 120 hangings and about 50 suicides. But he managed to come through with his sense of humor still his most valuable possession.

Arriving in New York, he began looking for work. Following many disappointments he was given a cartoonists berth on the World. After tinkering around with several strips, among which were "Let George Do It," and "The Ready Money Ladies," Mr. McManus joined William Randolph Hearst's American where he created his popular strip, first really, "The Newlyweds." He has been with the Hearst organization since.

On Dec. 9, 1910, he completed arrangements for the release of "Bringing Up Father." How did McManus strike the popular characters of Jiggs and Maggie? It was this way. Indelibly in his mind since childhood remained the picture of old Bill Barry, the leading Irish comedian of his day, whom he had seen often in theatres managed by his father. He remembered every detail of Barry's play "The Rising Generation." The character played by Barry became Jiggs. In this popular drama were presented the experiences of a laborer's family suddenly become rich. "Why not a comic strip based on the resistance of the head of house to the family's social ambitions?" he reasoned. The idea clicked and McManus has been on the upgrade since.

Besides an estimated salary of $2,000 a week earned through the syndication of his strip to more than 400 newspapers, George McManus has made a fortune from books and dramatic rights alone. The first of 28 annual editions of "Bringing Up Father" in book form sold more than 1,500,000 copies in 1915, and are now selling at a rate of 100,000 a year. The new books sell at 25 cents each. Plays based on the strip have added richly to his income.

He is a comfortable person to be with for he is always at ease. Immaculate, he is often referred to as "the best dressed cartoonist." He is an inveterate cigar smoker, consuming an average of 30 a day and has been doing so since he was 12 years old. His conversation is animated—his hands amplify and give form to his words.

For a hobby, George McManus collects canes and today has one of the largest collections of hardwood canes in America. Inconsistently however, he carries a malacca because it is light. Another hobby is to tinker with automobile engines, even when they are running to perfection. He lives in Los Angeles, where his friends are legion. Yet his popularity is not by any means limited to the city where he makes his home. He likes to recall a dinner given him in Toronto in 1927 which drew more people than one tendered the Prince of Wales.

Sorriest Store in the State

"The sorriest store in the entire state" is the proud boast of Robert N. Hauser, small-time retail grocer, concerning his "Midget Store on Midget Square," writes Marvin Sykes in Greensboro News.

And he is putting on a newspaper advertising campaign to prove it.

"Anything people will read is good advertising," he says, "and anything they won't read is wasted. I get 10 times as much good out of these 'different' advertisements as I would out of a regular one."

His advertisements cause a stir every time they appear in the Greensboro Daily News, his chief medium. His copy for the purpose of "combatting with humor for the big space placed by chain stores."

"Silver dollars for 98 cents" was his biggest special the first week in December following a campaign in which he had sold "eggs not over two years old, and hams that grow better with age," and in which he had played up his clerks and his store as nothing short of needing a Senate investigation.

"White elephant copy" the advertising man would call it. But, Grocer Hauser has waylaid the white elephant, handed him a peanut, and turned him for a "Corrigan" loop, all to his own advantage.

About his store he declares in two column by 12 inch advertisements, "Our store looks like a hog pen—we got so many country hams you ought to see it," and about his clerks, "Our clerks are pretty dumb and discourteous — especially our butcher," and about his business policies, "Our credit is none too good; if you believe it is, we'll buy something from you."

And all the time he is running down his own business in printed word, it is producing good results. He is not making a fortune, not even a huge profit, but he is gaining a livelihood by his unique advertising and enjoying every advertisment he composes.

Located at 600 South Elm street in Greensboro, his business is across the street from "The Giant Food Store," which provided him with the name for his 30 x 60-foot retail grocery business. "All the other stores were bragging about having the best of everything," he said, "so there was nothing I could do but have the worst. I had to have something different," he said, "so I became the owner of the sorriest store." His store is not an ultra-modern establishment — far from it. Many who view it proclaim they have never heard his boast of "sorriness' contested.

His sale of silver dollars was a "flop" according to the cash register, but it stirred up about as much local publicity as George Washington's stunt with the big coin. "SILVER DOLLARS, Sale begins at 9 a.m While stock of about 100 lasts. one to a customer, each 98 cents," his advertisement ran.

"We sold only six," he related. "although hundreds of persons came around to see what it was all about." Asked why the sale was so small, he replied:

"I told them I couldn't guarantee them because the bank had let me have them for a little over 75 cents each, and they were afraid of the dollars." His "little over" 75 cents, of course, had been a 25-cent piece, but his twist of the sentence had played havoc with the sale.

His current interest is the reorganization, through advertisements though not in reality, of his store. His board of directors is much publicized, and a picture of the chairman has been published. He published a detailed financial statement in which he included "money borrowed from clerks to pay taxes" and "checks issued which they have promised to hold until Monday." He listed a bunch of turnips, back due salaries, mortgages, and $9.32 cash on hand, among the many items of his financial statement.

The statement is still on the upgrade. We made a gain of ten dollars in volume in sales last week and have now employed a new clerk. You ought to see him—he's plenty dumb.

"We have been reliably informed that several wholesale men are anticipating opening charge accounts with us, but through embarrassment or timidity they have failed to approach us on the subject. For their information, we would be interested in opening three or four long-term accounts."

Hauser, a former bank president in Winston-Salem, N.C., and a former wholesaler of considerable means, lost everything he owned following a try at the stock market. He says "A man must be down and out to know what the masses really read in an advertisement." He has seen some of the best of living and some of the worst, having been president and stock holder in a bank, and having also hit the bottom when ill-health overtook him.

He is essentially a small-time grocer now, uses less than $10 a week for advertising, runs a large advertisement when his financial condition and inspiration click together, and uses small space with consistency. During the last watermelon season he advertised melons "at your own price, and if you don't want to pay that, come on down and we'll give you one. Of his financial statement one customer said, "It looked so much like mine, I decided to trade here." His advertisements have been clipped and sent all over the country, he says, and he has a standing request to send copies of his ads to several large firms.

He started his present store on $2,000 capital outlay, in July, 1937. Today he says his stock represents an outlay of approximately $6,000, and is still "the sorriest store in the entire state."

As to an annual gross business, Mr. Hauser says the Midget Store runs close to $100,000, but that might be taken with a grain of salt. There is no doubt, however, that the sum bulks large considering the size of the store, due to its original advertising.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Both Acid and Alkaline Foods Must Be Eaten

Diet experts, particularly scientific diet experts and physicians generally, have been greatly annoyed in recent years because of the emphasis being placed on the danger of 'acid' foods. Some of these advertisements give the reader the impression that eating these acid foods means that the blood is turned to an acid condition and it is this that makes the individual feel weak and sick and may cause death.

As a matter of fact, a blood that was acid would cause more than sickness or weakness, it would cause death.

Yet these advertisements, although meant to sell the special products of the advertised, do tell the truth in stating that if meat, potatoes, bread and pie make up the 'regular' daily diet, an 'acidosis' may result. Acidosis does not mean that the blood has reached an acid condition but that it is losing some of its 'alkalinity' and approaching 'nearly' to an acid condition. This nearly or near acid condition of the blood can cause the sickness and weakness called acidosis.

These advertisers, in trying to sell their products to the public, may, therefore, be really helping the public in warning them of the lack of alkaline foods in their daily diet.

There are certain foods which, when burned in the body, leave an acid ash. These are 'true' acid foods. There are other apparently acid foods—oranges, lemons, grapefruit—which contain citric acid but when burned in the body, leave an alkaline ash. These foods are really alkaline foods.

The principal acid foods are meat, fish, eggs, cereals and bread. These give an acid ash which can be detected if the ash from these foods is put in water; the litmus paper turns red.

The principal alkaline foods are milk, lemons, oranges, bananas, green vegetables. The ash from these will turn the litmus paper blue.

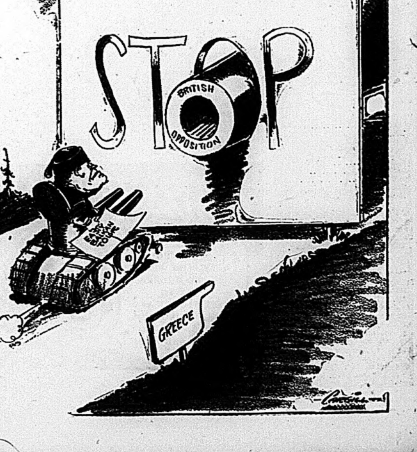
Despite the fact that they are acid, meat, eggs, fish and cereals are nutritious and necessary foods and must be eaten; to make up for these acid foods, other necessary alkaline foods must be eaten milk, fruits, and green vegetables.

It will thus be seen that to the 'regular' diet of the individual (meat, potatoes, pie) some other foods must be added regularly—milk, fruit, and vegetables. This will prevent acidosis.

FORGOTTEN MAN

The forgotten man today is not the unemployed, but as Finance Minister Dunning said, the middle class average citizen who really bears the burden and whom present conditions hit the hardest. The incidents of taxation are not fairly spread, and there is also a great number who escape taxation almost entirely. The one hope is a growing tax-consciousness among all citizens, to bring about government more responsive to the welfare of the public and to make for more efficient government with waste and duplication eliminated.—St. Catharines Standard.

ANOTHER ONE THAT DIDN'T SHOW ON THE ROAD MAP!



Court Officials Advocate Establishment of Farms To Alleviate Petty Crime

Useful Employment Thought Better Than Confinement in Jail for Youth

JAILS NOW CROWDED

"Our jails are full to capacity and some to over-flowing, something must be done with these young men who are appearing in our courts on minor charges and also with those traversing up and down the length and breadth of the country", stated His Worship, Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., during the course of Monday's city police court proceedings at which time several young men appeared before him for sentence after having been convicted of minor offences.

"Right now there are nearly 50 inmates at the Hastings County jail, most of whom are in for minor offences and who are well under 40 years of age. Hardly a police court sitting goes by in this district that does not see at least one young transient appear before the Court on charges of vagrancy. Many of these men would like to work, but can't find employment," stated His Worship as he added that the provincial reformatory and jail farms were also taxed to capacity.

"There has been some talk of the establishment of government-controlled farms throughout the country where these transients might work and at least earn their keep. After a careful survey of many such types of men to appear before me from time to time, I am firmly convinced each police court district throughout the province should have a large farm where these wayward boys, who have been convicted of minor offences and also the majority of the transients travelling up and down this province, could be put to work, under the proper supervision, maintaining the farm. They could grow enough in the summer months to keep them throughout the winter and I am firmly convinced such a move on the part of our governments would materially help in the decrease of crime in Canada", predicted Magistrate Butler.

A marked increase of petty stealing and minor crime has been noted throughout the country during the past few years, as the police records will show. Other police and court officials were in accord with Magistrate Butler regarding the establishment of government-supervised camps or farms where the younger elements, who are unemployed or repeaters in the matter of petty crime, could be placed under supervision.

Chief Kidd Comments

"For the past few years I have advocated some such system as proposed by His Worship. If those in charge of affairs would drop around at any police station in Ontario night after night for a month, I venture to say their eyes would be opened and they would realize the seriousness of the plight the youth of this country is coming to," commented Chief Kidd these lines in order to curb the

"If we could stop these young transients from roaming up and down the countryside much of the petty crime the police are daily confronted with would be immediately solved and would come to an abrupt halt.

"Also, I have always been of the opinion our county jail should be situated outside of the city limits and include a large farm area and perhaps a stone quarry where men could be usefully employed. Introduce some of these young fellows to some physical labour and they will not be so anxious to "get booked as a vag" and loaf off a ten-day sentence doing little or nothing in our county jails", added Chief Kidd and he concluded by voicing similar sentiments as those brought forward by Magistrate Butler.

Crown Attorney's Opinion

"There is no doubt but that something must be done along these loines in order to curb the increased petty crime among our young men, many of whom are becoming repeaters. A farm, such as suggested by His Worship might help to alleviate the ever-increasing petty thieving among our youth", added Crown Attorney B. C. Donnon K.C. Tuesday as he added it is the major problem of our courts today to know what disposition to make of cases where young men and boys have been convicted of minor offences.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was downtown with ma on account of her needing some things and me needing new shoes again, and we were going from the ladies hat department to the boys shoe department and some lady stopped buying gloves when she saw ma, saying, Well Pawleen of all people.

Being a lady with a round face and a green hat, and her and ma started to talk, ma saying, Do you know the last time I saw you, it was at your daughter Barber's wedding, how is Barber? and the lady said, She has a little Barber of her own now, 7 years old last Wensday.

My my, does time fly or does it just disappear like thin smoke? ma said, and the lady said, It does a Hoodini, if you ask me, and this is your little boy.

He's one size one day and too big for his shoes the next, if you call that being little, ma said.

And they said good bye and we kept on going, may saying, She hasn't changed one bit, she has the same expression, that same shifty look, she took good care not to ask me to come and see her, and I returned the compliment in the same medecine. Oh well, there never was any love lost between us. Of course she had to have the ordinary decency to invite me to her daughter's wedding and I had to have the common politeness to go, but there was always something I couldn't stand in that woman, and to give the devil his due she always seemed to feel an unreasoning aversion tords me.

Well G, ma, if that's a way you both feel why did you kiss each other hello and goodbye? I said, and ma said, , no particular reason, i nfact I dont remember that we did, and I said, Well I remember ma, and she said, Oh well, it's of no consequence.

Wich maybe it wasn't.

THE AGE OF CHIVALRY IS NOT YET DEAD

Master John Kershaw ably demonstrated that the age of chivalry is not yet dead in England as he presented Queen Mary with a purse, when she officiated at the opening of the new holiday home for working mothers at Stansted, Eng. After making the presentation, Master Kershaw bowed like a closing jackknife, but his performance evidently aroused the royal risibilities of the Queen Mother.

Religious Drama Presented at Tweed By Belleville Talent

Tweed—A religious drama "Release" was presented at Tweed United Church on Sunday night by a group of young people of Bridge Street United Church. The large congregation was deeply moved as the story of Barabbas and the two thieves (who were crucified on Calvary with our Saviour) was unfolded with thrilling and unforgetable realism before their eyes. The scene was laid in a dungeon in Jerusalem in close proximity to Pilate's Hall whence could be heard the chants of the mob as they angrily demanded the crucifixion of Christ and the release of Barabbas.

Preceding the drama an impressive worship service was conducted by Mr. Taylor Franklin and Miss Betty Anderson, with Miss Lois Richardson, at the organ, playing fine old hymns at intervals. This splendid service served in no small way to prepare the audience for the play which followed. Miss Margery Lashbrook announced the names of the players and briefly related the story of the drama. The following were the members of the cast and the parts which they played:

William Burgoyne—Barabbas.
Jack Dickens—Dysman.
Elmer Dixon—Sothmes.
Mary Lockhart—Mara, mother of Barabbas.
Mary Lou Lazier—Tamah, sister of Barabbas.
Taylor Franklin—Dumal, member of the insurgent band.
Gordon Barclay—Centurion.
Everett Fairman—A soldier.

The play was directed by Miss Helen Sulman and the effective characterizations by all the actors, as with a fine sense of values they enacted the scene in the dungeon, demonstrated most clearly, not only their own ability but the careful attention to every detail that was given by Miss Sulman. Nothing but praise was heard on all sides (of the very fine effort) and it is generally hoped that this is but the first of what may prove to be at least an annual visit of the young people of Bridge Street United Church.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Gordon entertained the cast and their friends at their home following the service.

The drama "Release" was presented under the auspices of the Tweed Young People's Society.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

What About Marriage?

Dear Miss Fairfax

We've been going together for two years, and I love him very much. He doesn't go out with any other girl, and he comes to my house almost every evening.

But he seems to hate the thought of marriage, and everytime I bring up the subject he tells me how much we would suffer and would probably go hungry. But I know several young couples in our neighborhood, where the husband has a smaller salary than my friend and they get along very well.

I work and have a small salary, and have offered to keep on with my job and help. But that does not interest him either. Unless I bring up the subject, he won't talk about marriage, and I have come to the conclusion that he doesn't want the responsibility of a wife. What do you think of this case?

B. M.

It looks to me as if this gentleman belonged to the large guild of irresponsibles, otherwise known as "time wasters". If any girl has the idea of marrying and settling down, it's a mistake for her to consider their attentions seriously.

Let me tell you a story. A certain correspondent, whose experience was similar to yours, rose up one evening when the "chair-warmer" was calling, asked to be excused because she had to pack her trunk. Aghast, the young man asked where she was going. She mentioned some remote destination, and in answer to his question how long she intended to stay, smiled back "indefinitely". He did considerable war-dancing, accused her of heaven only knows what in the way of being fickle, and the girl sticking to her role, said she didn't think he was interested.

He proposed and suggested the wedding date before you could say "marriage license". Maybe a little trunk-packing would start this delinquent, but you may not be giving him sufficient time to get economically set for marriage.

Beware The Triangle

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I used to see him a couple of times every week. I am 16, a high school student and he's a married man. He gave me his telephone number and I used to call him up in the forenoon.

One afternoon I called him up and his wife, who had been sick that week and unable to go to her work, answered the phone. I hung up immediately, and I haven't seen him since.

How can I get in touch with him just to apologize for calling him at the wrong time? We were only good friends. I got out of school in the afternoon at the same time he got through with work. He'd pick me up and we'd go for a ride, talk and joke. So you see, it was really nothing.

Kitty

Don't bother to apologize, Kitty, even if you should happen to run in to the married man who seems to have plenty of time to go motoring with you while his wife is out getting the bacon.

For a 16-year-old high school girl to be seen around with a married man isn't good for her reputation. Perhaps you'll tell me that this doesn't interest you, but it will have an effect on the type of friends you make and the company you keep. If for nothing else but purely selfish reasons and interest in your own future, cut out this type of friendship.

Etiquette News From Here and There

Good News for the Art of Conversation: Doctor William Young, of the New York Department of Education, announces that New York State "proposes to teach school children the art of carrying on an 'interesting' conversation". The method is outlined in an English course for elementary schools now in process of preparation. The new program, announces Doctor Young, recognizes speech as the most important means of social adjustment, and it is aimed to "provide training for vigorous, pleasant, interesting, direct speech". An inspired idea!

I constantly marvel that men and women who preside over stationery of department stores and jewelers shops do not inform themselves about whats what in correct forms for engraving letterpapers, invitations, announcements, visiting-cards, and so forth. Customers have the right to depend on their judgments . . . and how often these judgments fail. These salespeople, so often unjustifiably high and mighty, could so easily do some needed home work, build up sound knowledge by consulting authoritative books.

Then we would not see, as I saw this week, a man's visiting-card (he was told that it was "correct" by an attendant in ranking stationers store in New York) reading Mr. H. Robinson as the first name should have been spelled in full; a young lady's visiting-card reading Dorothy Fairchild, which (should have carried Miss before the name); and a formal marriage announcement reading:

Mr. and Mrs. (Bride's parents) wish to announce the marriage of their daughter which should have read either, have the honour of announcing the marriage of their daughter or,

announce the marriage of their daughter

Manners of the Moment

When you are giving a party and the number of guests in the room is large and scattered in groups, don't attempt to introduce an arriving guest to each person in the room.

To do this is awkward, and unnecessary. Instead, introduce the newcomer to two or three people standing near, and as an opportunity offers, to the other guests.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Susceptibility of Child to Diphtheria Can Be Determined Beyond Shadow of Doubt

In spite of the drop in the number of deaths due to diphtheria, owing to the development of antitoxin, there are still a few fatalities. Sometimes a doctor isn't called in time and the child doesn't get the antitoxin as soon as it should. One such death occurred in our neighborhood two years ago.

In order to prevent such deaths, medical men began looking about for something they could give to children which would prevent them from developing the disease at all. The first step was a test which when applied would tell us whether the individual was susceptible to the disease. This test consists of the injection of an extremely small quantity of the poison into the skin of the person being tested. If there is a susceptibility, within two days a redness will appear around the spot where the injection was given. This test has been found to be fool-proof, and is used extensively at the present time.

But this didn't solve the problem of preventing the disease. After long investigation, two methods of making people immune were discovered, and with this discovery, diphtheria was licked.

The first method science hit upon was to take some of the toxin produced by the diphtheria bacteria and mix it with some of the antitoxin. When these two were injected into the arm of a child, that youngster developed an immunity to the disease, and didn't develop the disease even if exposed.

Still later, experimentation brought out the fact that if the toxin was mixed with formaldehyde the poisonous properties of the toxin were destroyed. Not only that, but this mixture, when injected into the arm of an individual, gave him immunity to diphtheria. This method has been found to be the more satisfactory of the two, and is now largely used.

I think perhaps you would all like to know how this immunity is actually developed. When we inject antitoxin into the arm of a child that has diphtheria, all we are doing is neutralizing the poisons which are already present. This is achieved in the same way as mixing a strong alkali with a strong acid. The result is that neither the alkali nor the acid can do any harm. This is called passive immunization since the body does not do anything to fight the bacteria. All we do is introduce an antidote to overcome the poison.

This method is fine as far as it goes, but in a few days the antidote tends to lose its power to neutralize the poison and the patient is then just as susceptible as ever. I remember, years ago, being called to see a boy who had diphtheria. He was very sick, so I filled him with antitoxin, and in a couple of days he was better. Two weeks later I was called to the home again and I found the same boy dreadfully ill. I gave him more antitoxin, but his heart couldn't stand the strain. It gave out while I was right there.

Here is what had happened: the first antitoxin I had given him had cured him then. When the antidote wore off, he had been re-exposed to the disease and had contracted it again. I can tell you I was pretty upset about it.

Marsh Hill Y. P. U. was held in the spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. Will Detlor on April 14, with about 35 present. The president, Ralph Campbell, led the devotional part of the service beginning with the singing of "Tell Me the Old, Old Story", followed by prayer by Rev. Mr. Cooke. The Scripture lesson, found in 2nd Ephesians, was read by Aleita Horton. Following a brief business discussion and the singing of "Jesus, Lover of My Soul" the meeting was turned over to Parley Lindenfield, missionary convener, who read a selection from the book, "Streams in the Desert." "Come, Holy Spirit" was sung followed by a reading by Mrs. J. Frederick. A duet by Mr. and Mrs. P. Campbell was followed by a splendid topic by Mrs. C. Lansing. The singing of "Sun of My Soul", preceded a fine piano solo by Norma Detlor. The meeting was closed by the hymn "Unto the Hills" and the Mizpah Benediction. Delicious candy was served by the hostess and many games were enthusiastically played.

Delegates Present Glowing Reports of V.O.N. Convention

Progress throughout Canada of the Victorian Order of Nurses was reviewed by the delegates from Belleville who attended the Dominion annual meeting in Ottawa last week and who spoke of the excellent reports and addresses, at the regular monthly meeting of the Order held on Monday evening in the Y.M.C.A. Mr. G. H. Bray, the president, who was in the chair for the meeting and Miss Soutar were Belleville representatives at the annual meeting and their impressions of the various sessions reflected the enthusiasm and progressive spirit which characterized the event.

Outstanding Speaker

The annual meeting brought delegates in contact with citizens from coast to coast who are concerned with the health and welfare of their communities, and introduced to them figures eminent in research and experience. In the latter group was Sir John Boyd Orr, Scottish nutritionist whose address was most interesting. The speaker advocated a conference of the commonwealth nations for the purpose of promoting an easier flow of food through the channels of international trade lest an economic regime of poverty in the midst of plenty would lead to inevitable disaster. Sir John stressed the importance of food in the building of good health, pointing out that as it was a moulder of national health it was a prime factor in world peace and happiness. During the past three years 21 countries have set up nutrition committees in an endeavour to improve living conditions. The new science of nutrition has brought important health facts to light, and Sir John discussed in detail various phases of this study.

Organization Growing

Interesting facts were recorded at the annual meeting. The Victorian Order now extends services to one third of Canada's population, with 85 branches and 350 nurses throughout the Dominion under the guidance of the chief superintendent, Miss Elizabeth Smellie, R.R.C., C.B.E.

Sincere regret was felt by all delegates at the announcement of the retirement as president of Rt. Hon. George P. Graham who held the office with distinction for twelve years during which time the Order had greatly extended its sphere of usefulness. A presentation was made to Senator Graham at the annual meeting and words of appreciation were sincerely expressed by many associated with him in the work.

Round table conferences of great value were held, and the meeting with its business sessions and social gatherings was most successful.

Supervisor's Report

At the meeting on Monday evening a report of the supervisor, Miss Ferguson was read, and the work of members and nurses was highly commended. During the transaction of business, leave of absence was given Miss Soutar, nurse in charge to spend a short period visiting nursing work in one of the American centres. Miss Soutar having been distinctly honored by head office in being selected for this work. Expression of sympathy to Mr. Holland in the death of her mother was made at the meeting.

Busy Month's Work

Miss Soutar in presenting the nursing report said that one of the busiest winter months where sickness is concerned is over and the flu epidemic which announced itself about the end of February stayed approximately six weeks. 253 patients were cared for during the month, 89 patients having the flu. A total number of 742 visits was registered in March. A survey of the first three months of the year shows an increase of 137 patients and 503 visits over 1938. Miss Soutar explained in detail the system of fees. Last month five baby clinics were held with an attendance of 77 infants.

Current Offerings at Belleville Theatres

Advance Information on Screen Offerings Supplied by Theatre Managers.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Trade Winds"

No dramatic picture ever to reach the screen has equalled in the variety of its far-flung scenic backgrounds Walter Wanger's "Trade Winds", which comes next to the McCarthy Theatre with Fredric March and Joan Bennett in the starring roles.

This thrilling and yet lighthearted screenplay tells the story of a detective chase that leads half way around the world, and authentic scenes are shown in the seven different countries in which portions of the action take place. These were filmed by Director Tay Garnett, who made a 40,000-mile trip aboard his yacht "Athene" for the purpose of insuring a truly correct background for the story.

Beginning in San Francisco, when Miss Bennett flees after having apparently killed a man, the action shifts to Honolulu, Hawaii, where she pauses long enough to buy a fake passport and have her hair dyed black. With Detectives March and Ralph Bellamy always in close pursuit, Miss Bennett next escapes to Kobe, Japan and shortly afterward proceeds to Shanghai, China, later to go from there to Saigon, Indo-China. Here Ann Sothern, March's secretary in his San Francisco office, re-enters the story and adds to the complications.

As the flight of the fugitive is resumed, the story moves to Singapore, Malaya, and from there to Colombo, Ceylon. With the excitement continually increasing, the next jump is to Bombay, India, where March spirits his quarry away from another detective working under orders from the San Francisco police. After an action-filled sequence in the Laccadive Islands, off the coast of India, the story shifts back to San Francisco, where a startling climax brings the picture to a close. In each of the places visited, there are many scenes in well known, interesting and picturesquely colorful localities.

Three Added Treats

"Circus-Co-Ed" a splendid featurette subject presenting circus Trapeze acts, bareback riding and the Clarkonians famous daredevils of the [illegible] w-dust ring will be presented at the McCarthy Theatre, with the above feature, also an amusing Popeye cartoon, which also presents Popeye's father Poopdeck, entitled "Goonland" and another episode of 'Flying G-Men' completes an ideal show, for the whole family.

AT THE BELLE

"IDIOT'S DELIGHT"

Robert Sherwood's Pulitzer prize-winning play, "Idiot's Delight", is now on the Belle screen with Norma Shearer and Clark Gable in the memorable roles created by Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne.

Clarence Brown directed and a cast of notable players appears in support of the stars. Among them are Edward Arnold, Charles Coburn, Joseph Schildkraut, Burgess Meredith, Laura Hope Crews, Skeets Gallagher, Peter Willes, Pat Patterson, William Edmunds, Fritz Feld and a group known as "Gable's Glamour Girls" who dance with him in burlesque number.

The group consists of Virginia Grey, Lorraine Krueger, Paula Stone, Virginia Hayes, appearing as a chorus when Gable sings 'Puttin' on the Ritz' his initial attempt at song on the screen.

Sherwood seized the wider range of the cameras and wrote a new opening which introduces Miss Shearer and Gable as the vaudeville troupers on tour in Omaha. In stage play this incident was established only in retrospective dialogue.

The story follows the lives of these two, as the girl strives for an exalted position in life and becomes a fake countess. The hoofer, still what he was back in Omaha meets her in Europe at a critical moment in the international scene. War breaks out as they are stranded in a border town with a group of strange people. Under the shower of bombs from enemy planes they realize that their love was born far back in Omaha and has strengthened with the years.

"Streamlined Swing" an entertaining Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer miniature and "The Miracle of Salt Lake" a historical novelty will be presented on the same program. For your perfect enjoyment of 'Idiot's Delight" it is suggested that you see it from the beginning.

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Just get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a reliable "WOMAN'S" tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and those disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life.

North Hastings Red Cross Hospitals

Through the Red Cross Outposts at Bancroft and Coe Hill, over 3,500 individuals received service last year, mainly through the efforts of three nurses.

This service included some 2,800 hospital days care for 324 in-patients; medical treatment for 1,171 out-patients; 735 nursing and public health visits at the homes of the people; 33 visits to school in the districts, when 1,206 children were inspected; and last, but very important, 450 children given remedial treatment at 15 clinics which were arranged by the nurses. The above figures include 94 births, 80 at the hospital and 14 in the homes attended by Red Cross nurses.

Bancroft Hospital was established in January 1927. It has a normal capacity of seven adults and four children. Coe Hill, opened a year later, is slightly smaller, capacity five and two.

When driving along highway 62 from Madoc this summer, it is worth one's while to turn west at Ormsby to visit Coe Hill, or continue another seventeen miles north to Bancroft. A visit to these two hospitals will give you a vivid idea of how Red Cross is carrying out it ideals in less populated areas of Ontario and the Dominion.

There are thirty-one of these outpost hospitals throughout Ontario. By contributing to your local Red Cross branch, you are indirectly helping to bring medical care within reach of some 50,000 Ontario pioneers.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, April 18 —(Special) — Sunday evening worshippers at King Street United Church enjoyed a rare musical treat as the Royal Canadian Air Force silver band, about fifty strong, occupied the choir loft and rendered the famous Hallelujah Chorus from the Messiah and other melodic gems before a large audience. Led by Flight Sergeant Thos. Cooper the musicians performed splendidly, and many words of appreciative comment were heard as the service ended. A number of the officers of the R.C.A.F. and many of the airmen attended the service and helped swell the congregation. Rev. J. U. Robins, introducing the organization, tendered his thanks to Wing Commander C. M. McEwen, by whose courtesy the group were present, and to Flt Sgt. Cooper and the bandsmen. Included in the familiar hymns sung during the service were, "Nearer, My God to Thee" and "What a Friend We Have in Jesus." Before the service Organist Leslie Hearts played beautifully an adaptation of the Liebestraum and during the offering variations of "Deep River."

New School Used

Upwards of six hundred east side pupils marched proudly into their new school on College St., on Monday morning, but no less proudly than the thirteen teachers, who are going to realize all too well the difference between the new structure, praised by Chief Inspector V. K. Greer of Toronto as "the finest and most economical school of its kind in the province", and the old tumble-down structure which is to be scrapped almost at once. The new school is without doubt an architectural marvel to the most of the townsfolk, and is an asset indeed to the town. Inside it combines utility with modern fire-proof construction, and as one man expressed it who attended the official opening, "You couldn't set fire to it if you lit a bonfire on the floor in each class-room." The lighting is so expertly arranged that it is almost impossible to produce a shadow, and blackboards are set at a slight angle to offset any glare. The school is air-conditioned to an extent, and each classroom allows for heat control by thermostat. The furnace is fitted with automatic stoker, and the huge basement, running from end to end of the building, is so constructed that all or any part of it may be used as an assembly hall or auditorium.

New President

Meeting on Friday evening last to iron out a few pre-season differences, members of the executive of the Trenton Softball Association elected Victor Ryan as 1939 president of the group. At a previous meeting Percy Beale had been appointed to the position, but for various reasons he found it necessary to relinquish the post. No definite commitment has been made by the teams as yet, but it is believed that the same entries as for last season will again be found in the loop. A story that the R.C.A.F. will enter a team in the Belleville league may or may not be well founded, but in any case the entry of a team there, will not in any way change the local setup. So many boys have now arrived at the R.C.A.F. Station who want to play softball that in fairness to them some outlet must be arranged, and it is said that should a team be sent to Belleville it will not interfere in any way with the Trenton loop or entry.

Liddle—Reid

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the Tweed Anglican Church Rectory on Saturday afternoon when the Rev. A. E. Pepper united in marriage Miss Martha Reid daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Philip Reid of Shannonville to Mr. Bert Liddle only son of the late Mr. Charles Liddle and Mrs. Liddle also of the village.

The bride who was attended by her sister, Mrs. Douglas Thompson of Foxboro, was attired in royal blue lace over taffeta and Mrs. Thompson wore a royal blue ensemble. Each wore a corsage of Talisman roses. The bridegroom was attended by Mr. Douglas Thompson.

Tea was served at the Rectory immediately following the wedding ceremony by Mrs. A. E. Pepper. A reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Thompson, of Foxboro in the evening.

After a short honeymoon trip the bridal pair will return to Shannonville where they will reside. Mr. Liddle is an employee of Vivian's Garage.

Attend Grand Lodge

Mr. William MacFarlane, Master of the Shannonville Orange Lodge, and Mr. Good Campbell of Deseronto and also a member of the Shannonville Orange Lodge attended Grand Lodge held at Lindsay on Wednesday and Thursday of the past week. Very important decisions were arrived at during the course of the meeting. On Thursday evening a sumptuous banquet was served by the Presbyterian Church of Lindsay.

Mr. Douglas Thompson of Kaladar was a week end guest of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Knight.

Mrs. Ted Breadman spent the weekend in Toronto the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Watson.

The Messrs. W. Kemp and Blake Cook attended the party held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. Mitchell on Wednesday evening and furnished music for the dancing.

School children returned to their desks this morning following the Easter vacation. The year's most important lessons lay ahead of the children who will not enjoy a lengthy vacation again until the summer vacation.

Mrs. James Topping, Miss Marion Toppings of Marysville and Miss Anne Culbertson of Deseronto were Sunday evening tea hour guests of Mrs. Jack Kent and family.

Due to the fact that no minister has yet been appointed to this parish there was no service in the Trinity Church on Sunday. However it is thought that the regular church services will begin next week.

Mr. and Mrs. William Thompson and son Gordon of Trenton were Sunday afternoon guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Leverton.

Mr. William Bell Jr., is spending a few days in Brockville the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Snider.

A number of local men have secured work on the No. 2 highway at various spring-time jobs. According to one of the men the work might last for a lengthy period due to the fact that the roads are in a very bad condition in many places.

Mr. Donald Leverton had the misfortune to injure his leg while at work last week.

Drafted American Leaguers Responsible for Victories in Games So Far in National Zeke Bonura Homers With Two on to Win for Giants

BRIDGES WINS

Only Game Played in American League is Won by Detroit

You can't blame an American leaguer for turning up at a National League baseball park for a season opener these days.

The way things are going, what with pretty nearly every team in the senior circuit sporting at least one ex-American leaguer, the National is getting to be somewhat of an "old men's home" for fellows who once drew pay in the younger loop.

Of the three National League games to get by the leaky skies so far, a drafted American leaguer has been the main cog on the winning side in each case.

Of course, the club owners didn't care too much about this. They looked over the box office and had too much fun discovering 118,923 cash customers turned out for the four games Monday and Tuesday, topped by the 47,000 who saw the Tigers wallop Chicago White Sox 6-1 in Detroit yesterday.

On Monday it was Heinie Manush whose sharp grounder sent the run across for Pittsburgh which tied the Reds in the eighth, from where the Pirates went on to win. And Heinie came from the American League.

Bonura Wins Game

Then there were terrible Bill Terry's Giants yesterday, getting little encouragement from their arch-enemies, the Dodgers, through the first two innings before 25,946 damp fans in Brooklyn. In the third, however, that playboy late of the American League, Zeke Bonura, came to bat with two on and two out, and parked one of rookie Russ Evans' special slants in the left field stands for three runs and the spark that sent the Giants to a 7-3 decision. All this from Zeke whom such lowly American League outfits as Chicago White Sox and Washington Senators gave up on.

And St. Louis' mysterious Cardinals, the outfit nobody knows nipped the Pirates 3-2. There was no news in the fact Ducky Medwick's single shoved over two runs. You expect that sort of thing from the Medwick man. But the box score summary shows: "Winning pitcher—Weiland." This is the same lefty Bob who had addresses in half the American League's cities before the National League adopted him. Bob has won 31 games for the Cards in the last two years and did a right fair job yesterday until he gave way to a pinch-hitter.

In the only American League game Tommy Bridges joyfully celebrated the start of his 10th season with the Tigers with some classy right-hand elbowing. He handcuffed the Sox with seven hits, fanned five and didn't walk a man.

LESLIE PAWSON RACE FAVORITE

Canadian Contingent Headed by Young is Given a Chance

Boston, April 19 (AP)—Leslie Pawson, the Pawtucket, R.I., alderman who runs, reigned the favorite today as 215 plodders toed the mark in suburban Hopkinton for the start of Boston's 43rd annual marathon.

Pawson, defending champion and holder of the 2.31 3-5 record for the 26-mile, 385-yard course, dominated the pack and got the nod from the veteran Clarence Demar, 50-year-old Keene, N.H., printer who has won the grind seven times in 20 starts.

The Canadian contingent, source of upset winners in the past, numbered 29 experienced contenders including two ranked as favorites.

Walter Young, the Verdun, Que., policeman who won two years ago, and Garry Cote of St. Hyacinthe, Que., had plenty of supporters among the crowd of 500,000 who lined the marathon route and were expected to be among the leaders at the end of the grind. Another favorite was Walter Hornby of Hamilton, Ont.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz Associated Press Sports Writer).

Providence, R.I., April 19 (AP)—Fight men say the Roper-Louis bout didn't do Joe's coming tilt with Tony Galento any good — Joe had said in the papers he'd have more trouble with Roper than he would with Galento....Dink Templeton, Stanford track coach, thinks he has a coming champ in Clyde Jeffrey, a freshman who has stepped the century in 9.8 and the furlong in 20.8....There are whispers that Henry Armstrong will leave his welterweight title in Europe.

One minute interview with Casey Stengel: "The Giants probably have got five better men hitting in a row than any other team in the National League....Fellows like Moore, Ott, Bonura, Danning and Demaree can start a rally and keep it going."

One reason Ralph Guldahl is tops is that he spends hour upon hour drilling while the other boys are playing around in the locker and elsewhere.....Keep an eye on an 18-year-old southpaw named Al Olsen, with San Diego in the coast league ....Umpires say he has more stuff than Lefty Gomez had when he was 18....Joe Cronin says his Red Sox probably are the worst educated team in the majors with only six college guys on the club .... What about Berg—he's a whole collitch in himself, ain't he?

Mike Jacobs came out of the Roper-Louis affair with a bigger headache than Roper....Mike didn't make a nickel—his arrangement with Tom Gallery, the co-promoter, was that he wasn't to cut in until the gate passed the $125,000 mark.

Joey Archibald studied for the priesthood before going in for boxing....Quite a to-do was raised when the Reds and Red Sox used up four dozen balls in an exhibition game last week.....That's nothing. Four years ago Boston Bees and North Carolina State played in Fayetteville, N.C., and used up 188 balls before they had to call the game in the sixth inning.

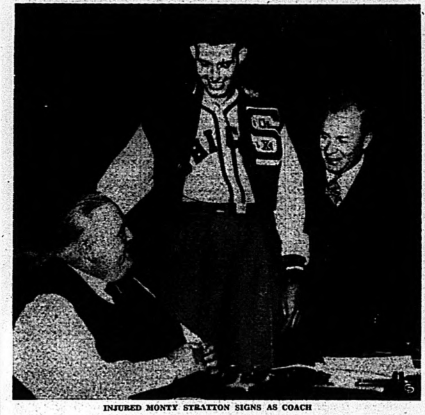
KENTUCKY DERBY FAVORITE LOSES 1939 OPENER

Touted by the boys who lay the odds (with an appreciable edge to themselves) as winter book favorite for this year's Kentucky Derby, El Chico, outstanding two-year-old of 1938, was victim of an upset in his initial 1939 appearance at New York's Jamaica Park track, when he was nosed out in a photo finish by Gilded Knight. It was the first defeat of El Chico's brief career, after seven successful starts as a juvenile. In the six furlong test at Jamaica The Kid (to translate his Spanish name) led all the way, only to be nipped at the wire by the winner. Jockey Donoso was up on the latter, seen farthest from the rail in this picture, with Nick Wall piloting the loser.



INJURED MONTY STRATTON SIGNS AS COACH

Once one of the brightest pitching prospects with Chicago White Sox, Monty Stratton saw his hopes for the future shattered last fall when a gun accidentally discharged, inflicting wounds that necessitated the amputation of his right leg. Ever cheerful, Monty claims he'll be out there on a major league mound again, but in the meantime he will serve as coach with the White Sox, the team he had hoped to help climb the American League ladder this summer. Here is the scene in the Sox offices as Monty signed a one-year coaching contract. Seated is Lou Comiskey, president of the club, while standing at the RIGHT is manager Jimmy Dykes. Stratton has been told there's a job with the Sox "as long as he wants it."

MAXIE BERGER WINS ANOTHER

Drops Buster Carroll in Second Round of Brooklyn Bout

New York, April 19 (CP)—If any hasty thinker figured Maxie Berger was discouraged a few weeks back when his victory string was snapped at 18 fights, there was ample evidence to the contrary today.

Buster Carroll of Lowell, Mass., formed the biggest portion of this evidence—146 pounds to be exact—along with tough Johnny Rohrig, lightweight champion of New Jersey.

Just eight days after disposing of Rohrig via the decision route, young Maxie stepped into the Broadway arena ring in Brooklyn last night and battered Carroll into submission in less than two rounds.

The bout was billed for eight rounds but the 4,500 fans had to be satisfied with seeing the Canadian lightweight ruler in action for only four minutes and 50 seconds. At that point with Carroll reeling and bleeding from the mouth, referee Eddie Joseph stopped the bout.

Maxie gave away 7 1-4 pounds to Carroll and found the going easy enough. He took the first round handily, sparring about and feeling his heavier opponent out. Then early in the second frame he cracked over his blistering right to Buster's face. Twice he dropped the Massachusettes battler and Carroll's mouth was so torn he had to have hospital treatment.

BUNNY AUSTIN AMERICAN VISITOR

During the past month or so much has been heard in the world of sport of Bunny Austin and his connection with the "moral re-armament" movement, which he, along with others both in and out of the sport world, feel is away to world peace. Austin, once second only to Fred Perry in the English tennis sphere, is now on this continent and is seen here discussing the movement with a New York follower, Mrs. J. H. Hammond.

LOOP PRESIDENT LIKES LOOK OF LEAGUE SETUP

Frank Shaughnessy Thinks All Teams in Int. Will be Stronger

OPENS THURSDAY

Toronto Leafs Will Perform at Syracuse on Opening Day

(By Frank J. Shaughnessy, President, International League)

New York, April 19 (CP)—For the first time in three years the International Baseball League will open its season tomorrow with all eight clubs believing they have a good chance to win the pennant.

Newark Bears, with great ball clubs, ran away with the flags in 1937 and 1938, but this did not discourage the other club owners. It inspired them to build up to the Bears and during the winter they made deals and formed alliances that brought new and able players into our league.

Although Newark will have a strong team this season, results of spring exhibition games have demonstrated the other International League clubs are well equipped to give the Bears a real battle for the flag.

I saw all our teams in spring exhibition games and each looked a good double "A" club. Some as yet have not received all the player help they will get from the majors.

NEWARK again will have a strong, well-balanced club.

SYRACUSE has a great staff, paced by the towering southpaw Johnny Gee, and a very much better team than at this time last year.

MONTREAL will show more new faces than any club in the league. Help received from Brooklyn should make the Royals real contenders.

BUFFALO has obtained some fine young players from Cleveland and the Bisons will be a much more colorful club this year than last.

ROCHESTER will have fine pitching and for the first time in years will start with an experienced team.

TORONTO has a much improved infield, the pitching is good and a little more power in the outfield would make the Leafs formidable contenders.

BALTIMORE will have a young, hustling club. Player help from the Athletics gives the Orioles the best infield they have had in years.

Joe Archibald Crowned King Of Featherweights

Providence, R.I., April 19 (AP)—Little Joe Archibald, newly crowned king of the featherweights, set out today to see what can be done about casting in on his hard-won 126-pound title.

Victor in 15 rounds of rough if not savage dueling with Leo Rodak of Chicago, Archibald, who once studied for the priesthood and who was a regular student at Providence College until the chance came for him to get into the boxing money, holds undisputed possession of the crown relinquished last year by the then three-time champion, Henry Armstrong.

An offer of $5,000 for him to make his first title defence against Pete Scalzo of Brooklyn in New York this summer awaits his acceptance but Manager Al Weill said he proposes to canvass the field thoroughly before sending Archibald into action again.

Not everybody in the crowd of 5,500 that saw the first championship match staged in Rhode Island thought Archibald won, but it was the consensus of newspaper writers that the Providence oatiler had a slight edge most of the way and clinched the fight by wading in and taking the final round.

Being mistaken for the Dominion junior finalists was the happy lot of the Belleville "Hi-Speeds" at the King Edward Hotel on Monday night. The local juniors were taken to see the final Oshawa-Edmonton Memorial Cup game in Toronto and stayed at the King Edward Hotel prior to hostilities. Fortunately or unfortunately, as the case may be, some of the local kids wore their new windbreakers, also a gift from the club executive. In the hotel lobby sport fans surrounded and congratulated them for their win Saturday night. One bespecked gentleman approached Harry McGuire and congratulated him for the splendid manner in which he checked the great Billy Taylor on the previous Saturday night, when the Roamers won. The man took McGuire for Elmer Kreller, of the Roamers. Mark Storms and Gordie Cook also had their share of fun, when other fans swarmed around them wishing them success on the night, of course believing the locals were the Roamers.

Naturally the Belleville kids got a great kick out of being taken for the Roamers and were applying the salve wherever possible until it took the united efforts of Coach Holway, President Cook and Secretary Yanover to corral their mischievous charges and hold them in tow. The kids were afforded the best seats in the house and thoroughly enjoyed the game and the outing. Incidentally President Bill Cook of the locals, is of the opinion that Jimmie Drummond, star defenceman of the Generals, was the outstanding player on either team. "This lad Drummond has everything a good player needs and will be up in the big show in no time," predicted Prexy Bill. Substantiating this are statements in the Oshawa press praising Drummond for his continued steady playing and ability.

Picton Junior Hocky team went the Boston Bruins one better yesterday when they signed Peter Cooper Welsh, three day old son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Welsh, East Lake to a contract for the 1955 season. The Bruins recently signed "Dit" Clapper's five-year-old son of the famous Boston star to a contract. Both seemed destined to carry on the tradition of their forebearers.

We understand there is to be a meeting of baseball-minded fans and players at the Y.M.C.A. on Friday night of this week. The conclave is of grave importance, especially to the players interested in baseball. In their attendance depends the future of the diamond game in Belleville. Players and interested fans alike are invited, Secretary Lorne McDougall informs us. Unless the players themselves take an active interest in the business end of the club it looks like curtains for baseball in these parts. The challenge has been issued to them.

President Frank Calder, of the National Hockey League, announced yesterday that Clint Smith of the Rangers had been awarded the Lady Byng trophy and Hector "Toe" Blake, of the Canadiens, the Dr. David A. Hart Memorial trophy. The Lady Byng trophy is given annually to the player who "combines the highest standard of sportsmanship with outstanding ability." The Hart trophy goes to the player considered the most useful to his team throughout the season.

Skeeter Newsome, leading candidate for the shortstop berth with the Philadelphia Athletics, wears a helmet made of fibre when he takes his cut at the plate. He was struck by a pitched ball last year and suffered a fractured skull. Another such accident might prove fatal, he was warned.

An emergency meeting of the Belleville Softball Association has been called for this evening by Secretary Harry Knott. Considerable business confronts the softball moguls tonight, as a report of the activities of the O.A.S.A. will be tabled as well as the matter of new applications for affiliation. A recent news dispatch from Trenton prompted the local softball fraternity to open their doors to a proposed R.C.A.F. entry. With the increased numbers arriving daily at the Airport the "Flyers" are believed to have a surplus of softball material and may enter teams in both the Trenton and Belleville leagues. Incidentally an R.C.A.F. softball entry would be most welcome in Belleville, we'd imagine.

The major league baseball clubs generally took a beating in the matter of opening day crowds, only three of the eight games scheduled being played yesterday, one in the American League where Detroit beat Chicago and two in the National League where the Giants beat the hated Dodgers 7-3 and the Cardinals beat Pittsburg. The best pitching performance of the day went to the veteran Tommy Bridges of the Tigers, who limited the Chisox to seven bingles and a single tally. The International League opens tomorrow with Canada's two entries, Toronto and Montreal at Syracuse and Baltimore respectively.

Did You Know twenty nine Canadians are entered to compete in the annual Boston marathon today, with Leslie Pawson, last year's winner, and Walter Young the Verdun policeman, as the favourites .... Toronto Maple Leafs signed four Ontario youths to their baseball roster, Babe Marchildon being the most promising....It's about time the Leafian management refrained from letting Canadian diamond material slip through their fingers... Art Calhoun, former Belleville moundsman, is with the Leafs and will be farmed out to a class "A" league....Joe Louis received $370.00 per second for his sojourn in the ring with Jack Roper, not a bad remuneration....We expect Herbie Mitchell in town any day now, Herb is manager of the Hershey club of the International League and is seeking hockey talent in Ontario, he will doubtless visit his native haunts in Trenton soon....Don't be surprised to see the N.H.L. expand to an eight or nine teamed circuit in 1940.

Surely spring must be close at hand. Homer "Red" Townsend 'phoned us this morning to announce his junior softballers would hold their initial season's practice at the Collegiate grounds Thursday evening. 'Teen aged boys desirous of playing softball will be welcome as the local junior softball squad must be completely rebuilt, several of last year's Eastern Ontario champions having advanced to a higher classification owing to the junior age limit.

For Thursday, April 20

By GENEVIEBE KEMBLE

THE LUNAR transits for this day point to very lively and probably exciting conditions in which there may be fundamental issues at stake. These demand rather drastic action. There also are many minor impediments or anxieties which call for vigilance. With the mind under excellent stimuli there may be fair progress.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a very lively year. Important matters may arise which call for clever if drastic action. There also are omens of subtle, crafty or tricky situations. Good fortune depends on wise management.

A child born on this day may be versatile, clever, lively and of fine mentality, which it may have to exercise judiciously to wrest good fortune from doubtful and tricky assaults.

TWO KILLED

Warned of Sabotage

Two days ago Le Surete National, the secret service, warned both the French Line, owners of the Paris, and the Ministry of Merchant Marine that an effort at sabotage would be made at Le Havre.

The Paris was destroyed despite precautions taken in response to that warning.

With her superstructure eaten away by the fires that started at 10 o'clock last night, the Paris began to list heavily at dawn and a little later was straining at her ropes at a 30-degree angle.

Suddenly, with a great groan, the liner wrenched loose from her moorings, turned on her side and sank. The starboard side bellied out of the water, with smoke still pouring from the hulk.

French Line experts expressed fear the hulk would have to be broken up to clear the port and permit the liner Normandie, French Line flagship, to be taken from drydock where she was undergoing a propeller change.

PROSPECTS

The unemployment debate took a new trend yesterday. In earlier stages it consisted largely of a wide range of suggestions for relief of unemployment ranging from public works of various kinds to a complete change in the economic system. Yesterday criticism of the government for failure to deal with the problem became more acute and centred chiefly on the plight of single unemployed transients.

Conservative leader Manion said the efforts of Labor Minister Rogers had been largely a failure and it was a national calamity that more had not been done to cure unemployment which was certain to destroy the present political and economic system if not remedied. At the same time Dr. Manion accused the Social Credit and C.C.F. parties of trying to claim they alone were concerned with the plight of the unemployed and their pet theories contained the only remedies.

"This government is at least part and I think largely to blame for the fact that we have demoralization among our young men which should and could be largely eliminated if those young men were given a chance to earn their living. Many of them have lost ambition and it is getting worse."

Call Leaders in

A pooling of the best brains of the country in order to obtain a remedy was suggested by the Conservative leader. He said he had made the same suggestion when he was in office and thought it was not yet too late to call to Ottawa leaders in industry, in organized labor, in the churches and in other fields and set them to work devising a plan.

Dr. Manion spoke of the "abuse heaped upon us" when he was a member of the Bennett government and many of those now on government benches were in opposition. The Bennett government had tried and failed to solve the economic problem but during its term the world passed through its greatest economic depression.

With world conditions improving the present government had failed to make any headway.

It was not surprising some Liberal members were suggesting there was no cure for unemployment. Even Prime Minister Mackenzie King was reported as making a statement to that effect.

"The Prime Minister is reported to have made such a statement at a Liberal gathering; I attended every Liberal gathering and he made no such declarations," said Finance Minister Dunning.

Accepted Statement

"I accepted the Minister's statement," said Dr. Manion, "but it is a report which might well have been denied by the Prime Minister himself before this."

Two rural Ontario members, Dr. J. K. Blair (Lib. Wellington North) and R. M. Warren (Lib. Renfrew North) aroused the ire of opposition members when they suggested many of the transients did not want to work. Dr. Blair spoke of some transients as "spineless" "yaps, and "pap-fed." He emphasized he was not speaking for the Liberal party and his remarks were based on his experiences, particularly with men from Toronto.

"The trouble is the young men today are lacking in spine," he said.

"That is a slander," said J. C. Landeryou (S.C. Calgary East).

Makes Direct Charge

"Yes and you fellows are encouraging them in a lot of nonsense," retorted Dr. Blair. "I have tried to get men time and again to work. I have one farm idle and I want someone to work it. I am offering to equip it and supply it with grain and whoever works it can make half the profits and I will give him part of his wages as he goes along.

"I have asked many men in the last two weeks to take the farm but when I approach some capable fellow I find there is beer on his breath. Then I try another fellow to see if his breath is free of beer. These fellows are out licking up beer and smoking cigarettes and I cannot have them around my barn smoking cigarettes."

Pointing directly at members of the C.C.F. and Social Credit groups Dr. Blair said:

"I doubt if many of you have hired men working for you. I doubt if many of you need a hired man. I doubt if many of you are working yourselves. I work on the farm myself and I have many men working for me but I can't get any of your city bummers to work for me and I don't want them."

Should Talk to Men

Instead of encouraging men to become transients, "spineless creatures wandering up and down," members of parliament should "talk sense to them, tell them to get a job, to be men and if they can't get one job to get another."

"Why didn't you talk that way in 1935 " asked a member.

"I always did," said Dr. Blair.

"I must confess when I hear the member for Wellington North (Dr. Blair) insulting the young men of this country by calling them 'spineless creatures,' I am somewhat shocked," said Mr. Manion.

"Anybody who stands in this House and says the young men out of work are 'spineless creatures' shows either a complete ignorance of conditions or a narrowness of vision I cannot comprehend.

"That sort of attack will lead to what my friends on the left want and I don't want—an upset of the system."

Denies Allegation

"Then I will change it to 'turn the system over,'" Dr. Manion said. "I believe in the Democratic system under which we live and I want to preserve it."

Mr. Warren said many transients were that way from choice. In his own community men left the farms and went to work in the lumber camps. He never knew of one who could not return at any time and find some farmer who would employ him at least for his board and enough wages to provide clothing.

Douglas Ross (Cons. Toronto St. Pauls) urged the government to initiate forestry and reforestation projects as a means of putting young men to work.

These and other schemes making use of and conserving Canada's many natural resources should be developed, he said.

Asks Question

J. C. Landeryou (S. C. Calgary East), asked Labor Minister Rogers if he thought it possible, under the present economic system, that Canada could ever absorb all the employable.

Mr. Rogers said if there was a normal resumption of international trade it was quite possible the annual increase of employable persons could be absorbed. Lacking that it might be impossible unless Canada became a self-contained economy and placed the unemployed under conditions of regimentation which would mean a lowered general living standard and a sacrifice of liberty.

C. Grant MacNeil, C.C.F. Vancouver North, who made a special appeal to the government to improve the situation of the floating population of young men, said the situation he complained of was in British Columbia where he knew there was not enough work to absorb the transients.

There were undoubtedly some "misfits" in the ranks of transients, Mr. MacNeil said, but in the main they were eager and anxious to get work. Mr. MacNeil made special reference to those who have been without work so long they had not the proper clothes to wear at work nor were they properly nourished. The unemployed group which marched to Parliament Hill a few days ago was an instance.

Mr. Rogers asked Mr. MacNeil if he knew whether Harold Mason leader of the Transients' Organization in Ottawa, had registered at the local employment office.

"I do not know," Mr. MacNeil replied.

Mason had not registered up to a few days ago, the Minister said, although he had been in Ottawa two months. Mason and the nucleus of the organization came from a camp in British Columbia where they had refused to work and had devoted their time and efforts to disorganize the camp..

For two months in the British Columbia camp these men had carried on "a concerted effort to do as little work as possible and to make things as difficult as possible for the officials during and after working hours," the Minister said.

Interests Prejudiced

"The vast majority of single unemployed are ready and willing to work but I submit the interests of this vast majority have been prejudiced by the agitation of a limited few whose interest is in the organization and exploitation of these men."

The government is prepared to present legislation for a national unemployment insurance scheme as soon as the necessary constitutional amendment has been obtained, Labor Minister Rogers told a questioner. So far three Provinces (Quebec, Alberta, and New Brunswick) had refused to agree to this constitutional amendment. The question was raised by T. L. Church (Con. Toronto-Broadview) who asked whether the changed attitude of the Ontario legislature had brought any change in the federal policy on this subject.

To See Rumanian Minister

Foreign Minister Alexander Cinca-Markovich of Yugoslavia will come to Venice Saturday to see the Italian Foreign Minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano. Arrangements were being made to receive Foreign Minister Grigore Gafencu of Rumania, now on a tour of European capitals.

(Political circles at Belgrade believed Italy was about to make fresh overtures to bring Yugoslavia into the Rome-Berlin camp to counter the system of guarantees against aggression which Great Britain and France were building in eastern and southeastern Europe.

Capitalize on Conquest

The exact nature of yesterday's Italian-Hungarian conferences remained secret but observers in Rome assumed they touched on Hungary's desire for growth like that of Italy and Germany.

Having tasted of expansion by her absorption of Ruthenia (Carpatho-Ukraine) and part of Slovakia in the dismemberment of Czecho-Slovakia, Hungary's main claims are centred now on western Rumania and northern Yugoslavia where lie territories once part of the Austro-Hungarian empire.

BUDDY O'CONNOR READY FOR DUTY

Slim Centre Ice Star of Royals Will Play in Third Game

Montreal, April 19—(CP)— Slim Buddy O'Connor probably will ask why all the fuss, but to Montreal Royals supporters he is just about the most important hockey player in the city today.

Royals — and their followers — count on Buddy to put them back into the Allan Cup race from which Port Arthur Bear Cats all but eliminated them by winning the first two games of the best-of-five series.

O'Connor rated the best amateur centre in Quebec, missed both games because of a shoulder injury, but he will be back for the third tomorrow and if he can hit his stride Royals may well score their first victory.

Leading scorer in the Quebec senior hockey league this season, O'Connor has a habit of popping in goals when they are most needed, and his great team play boosts the effectiveness of his linemates 100 per cent.

Associations

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

Mary was very keen on anything bordering on associations, whether it was her sister's baby's first rattle or an erstwhile sweetheart's old Christmas gifts. She was always collecting material mementoes as also she harbored a hundred and one little brain memories.

It was quite natural, then, when Mary had the pleasure of her first trip to England that she should make a straight journey to the little Sussex village where her parents had courted and wed. For Mary was that somewhat choice blend of the human tree which divided its characteristics nicely between English parentage and American birth.

Her parents had rather a sweet romance in the fact that they had as young members of the village circle each laid a cornerstone in the parish church in which later they were married. Their names carved in the dull red stones were as plain as the day upon which they were cut, and Mary was so thrilled when she saw them that she nearly wept.

"Laid by Mary Anne Smith, July 9, 1897," was on the base of one pillar, and "Laid by John Cromer, July 9, 1897," was on another. That was the day they had met, and from then on the world for them had been a wonderful place, for love encircled them with its glorious wings.

Mary dropped onto her knees in one of the pews and felt a tremendous wave of emotion spread over her. After her prayers she sat back and could picture how dainty her sweet mother must have looked in her bridal dress standing beside her handsome young husband—there at that lovely altar.

She wondered if there was a chance that the same rector would be in charge. She supposed not.

However, Mary heard the gentle steps of an elderly minister padding along the small corridor and she went out to chat with him.

He beamed at her out of kindly eyes.

"I remember all young lovers whom I have married," he said upon hearing her story, "and I've been here thirty odd years. Come my dear," he said, "and I'll show you your parents' names."

They were standing inside the tiny vestry room with their heads close together over the great register when a young fellow bounded in from the fine old rectory gardens.

"Oh, Dad!"! he shouted, then stopped swiftly. "I'm sorry — I didn't know there was anyone with you." He stood half smiling and half wonderingly, for Mary was indeed a lovely person to discover in close proximity to one's own father.

"This young lady," said the old rector beaming at his big son, "is Miss Mary Cromer. She has come all the way from America to see the church in which her parents were married. Miss Cromer, this is my son, Tom Walker."

The two young people shook hands shyly but apparently very warmly.

"I was wondering," said Mary wistfully, "if there was the slightest little thing I could have from the church—as a memento. If there isn't anything, I will just take a tiny stone from the gravel path or a few leaves from one of those lovely trees."

A moment that might have become awkward was interrupted by the approach of the rector's wife—a sweet, white-haired mother whom Mary loved at once.

"I sent Tom to bring you in to tea but—" she too then noticed the stranger. "I'm so sorry—I thought you two were alone."

The rector again went through the ceremony of introducing Mary—this time to his wife, and added, "This young lady is wanting some small memento from the church to take home to her parents, but I don't know what it could be."

"My dear," smiled Mrs. Walker, "only last night you and Tom were speaking of having new offertory bags. I'm sure Miss Cromer would love to have one of the old ones—they were in use when her parents attended service together."

"Oh, exclaimed Mary joyfully, "I should simply love it. Is it one of those sweet little bags with handles on each side? We don't have that kind in America—I think they are so quaint.

The big son was silent all this time but his heart leaped joyfully when he heard his mother insisting on Mary coming in to share the tea hour in the old manse drawing room.

"Tom dear, you take Miss Cromer and get her one of the old collection bags. We might forget it later."

It took Tom a long while to produce the gift for Mary, but, as a matter of fact, Mary didn't mind in the least. When they entered the drawing-room for tea the old rector and his wife exchanged happy glances.

When Mary mailed the lovely old memento to her parents she told them all about her visit and how she had been taken right into the family as if she had always known them. And her following letter confirmed this state of affairs. The next was full of joy, for Mary was going to stand beside young Tom at the very same altar at which her parents had taken their holy vows.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, April 19—(CP)— Narrow gains showed on Toronto exchange boards today. Western oils and industrials showed a few gains but golds were down slightly. Early afternoon trading left prices at their improved levels. Naybob selling of 18 cents, had a volume of 30,000 shares.

In the absence of news of importance from Europe traders adopted a watchful-waiting attitude. Nickel, Smelters and Noranda firmed small fractions. Weak spots in the gold group included Teck Hughes, Wright-Hargreaves and McIntyre.

Steel and utilities were the strongest of the industrials while senior oils, liquors and foods were steady. Western oils showed slight improvement.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, April 19 (AP)—Buying flurries lifted stocks today in a quiet market which seemed to find increasing peace hope in the latest news from Europe.

The market stirred from a sleepy period of drift on reports England's Ambassador would return to Berlin and hints of a more conciliatory attitude in British official circles toward Germany. Gains of fractions to around two were numerous near the final hour. Transfers were about 400,000 shares.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, April 19.—(CP)—Cattle trade failed to pick up in early afternoon dealings on the Toronto Livestock Market today but prices were about steady at the week's decline. The calf division continued slow. No hog price was set. Cattle holdover from Tuesday was 1,300 head.

Receipts reported by Dominion Livestock branch were—Cattle 390, calves 460, hogs 1,120, sheep and lambs 20.

Butcher steers and heifers brought $5.75 to $6.75 and a few weighty steers sold from $6.25 to $7.25. Butcher cows ranged from $3.75 to $5 and canners and cutters $2.50 to $3.50. A few fed calves made $7 to $8.25.

Choice veal calves traded at $8.50 to $9 and common grades sold downward to $5.

Previous close on off-truck bacon hogs was $8.90 to $9.

One lot of heavy lambs sold at $8.50.

Graded Eggs Show Firm Price Trend

Toronto, April 19—Graded eggs showed slightly firmer prices on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Butter maintained former levels.

Fresh receipts arrived in fairly heavy volume in the afternoon on the egg market, but offerings cleared well throughout the day and prices were stiffened on graded shipments as other divisions ruled steady. Graded eggs closed at 20c to 20 1-2c for grade A-large, 19c to 19 1-2c for medium, 18c to 18 1-2c for pullets and B's, and 17c to 17 1-2c for C grades.

Enough demand appeared on the butter market to keep offerings moving. Fresh receipts cleared steadily at 21c in the morning session, with some sales reported at 21 1-4c. In later trading, however, buyers were not willing to pay the higher figure, and the market closed out the day at 21c, basis first-grade Ontario solids. Offerings were not heavy at any stage. Ontario creamery solids closed at 21c for No. 1 grades and 20 1-4c for 38 score.

Montreal Eggs Improve

Montreal, April 19—(CP)— Egg prices firmed fractionally, but offerings generally held steady on open produce markets here, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22 1-2c-23c a pound and solids for 22c-22 1-2c.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 21 1-2c a dozen for A-large, 19 1-2c-20c for A-medium, 18 1-2c-19c for A-pullets, 18 1-2c for B-large, and 18c for C. Receipts: 2,262 cases.

TARZAN BROWN R. I. INDIAN WINS MARATHON

Joins Small Circle of Two-Time Winner of Boston Race

Boston, April 19—(AP)— Tarzan Brown, a Narragansett Indian from Alton, R. I., ran away from the field today in the Boston Athletic Association's 26 mile, 385-yard marathon, to repeat his victory of 1936, and join a small circle of two time winners in the 43-year-old event.

Brown smashed all existing records for the course, finishing in two hours, 28 minutes and 51.8 seconds.

Walter Young of Verdun, Que., was third, finishing behind a comparative dark horse, Don Heinicke of Baltimore, Md.

Heinicke's time was two hours, 31 minutes, 24.6 seconds and Young's was two hours, 32 minutes, 41.2 seconds.

The dusky skinned Brown, a stone mason by trade, literally ran 180 other competitors into the ground, taking the lead during the early stages of the race and sprinted across the finish line before his nearest pursuer was in sight.

Toronto, April 19—(CP)— Mrs. Ira Parker, who as Mae Arvilla Mulligan was crowned "Miss Toronto" in 1924, died last night in hospital of disseminating sclerosis, which four years ago left the former beauty queen almost blind, paralyzed and in constant pain.

Mrs. Parker's death was hastened by pneumonia but doctors knew of no cure for the rare disease with which she was afflicted. Her husband and little daughter visited her yesterday.

At the age of 17, she was named Toronto's most beautiful girl. A swimming star, she never was ill until attacked by the fatal malady.

GLENORA FERRY NOW IN OPERATION

With the reach in that part of the Bay of Quinte near Glenora entirely free from ice, ferry operations between that point and the Adolphustown side officially opened on Saturday

Ice however is still massed from the tip of Glen Island for some distance westward into Picton harbor—and from a point well below where the ferry makes its crossing.

While the boat used that which has been in operation for the past years, the new steel constructed vessel capable of transporting a much larger number of passengers and vehicles will go into operation as soon as ice-clearance in the bay permits of its arrival.

The ferry is not running on proper schedule due to ice conditions but it is expected that by the end of the week, this barrier will be removed and the regular time schedule adopted.

KIWANIANS HEAR INSURANCE TALK

Life Underwriters from the Bay of Quinte District were guests of the Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon at the Queens Hotel on Tuesday, when W. S. Laird, President for Canada of that organization addressed the members on "Some Slants of Insurance." Guests were present from Picton, Napanee, Kingston and other points and a warm welcome was extended the guests by the President Dr. R. A. "Dick" Flynn. The speaker of the day was introduced by Kiwanian James A. Barclay, President of the Underwriters in this district and Kiwanian appreciation was expressed by Eddie Logan.

In introducing the speaker, James Barclay stated Mr. Laird was born in Cobourg but at an early age journeyed west and after graduating from Toronto University served overseas and went to London in 1919 and was later moved to Toronto as District Superintendent. "Bill" Laird has had a varied career in hockey tending goal for the Regina Patricias and Victorias as well as playing professional hockey with Dick Irvine, Rabbit McVeigh and many others" said the speaker. Mr. Laird is a fluent and interesting speaker and his timely talk on insurance was much appreciated by the members. He told the members that Kiwanis and insurance salesmen were working towards the same end, trying to help the underprivileged. "Every man is seeking security, when he comes to old age" said Mr. Laird and "the insurance companies have a plan at hand, which will give him security of principal, a fair rate of return on his money, a known future value his money will be free from creditor's claims, money has an ease of transfer and can be scientifically liquidated.

Mr. Laird stated there were eight billions of dollars of insurance in force in Canada held by three and one half million policyholders and that Canada, the United States and Britain were the best contributors to this form of saving money. "Since 1930" said Mr. Laird "$1,400,000 has been given to policyholders in Canada." He praised the type of salesman that was now selling life insurance and he guaranteed the audience that all would be given a square deal and sound advice in choosing the proper type of insurance.

DYNAMITE STOLEN FROM MAGAZINE

100 Sticks Taken from Crushed Stone Plant at Dundas

Dundas, Ont., April 19.—(CP)— Employees of the Canada Crushed Stone Company's plant here discovered early today a box containing 100 sticks of dynamite had been stolen from the company's magazine.

Provincial Police at Toronto, who have been reported alarmed at thefts of dynamite in various parts of Ontario, were notified immediately of the theft. The police are understood to have enrolled the aid of the Department of National Defence in an attempt to discover if the crimes are part of a sabotage plot.

More Thorough Investigation

Toronto, April 19.—(CP)— Plans were understood to have been laid today at a conference of Dominion and Provincial government officials for a more thorough investigation into possible sabotage plots aimed at Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission plants, public buildings and key industries in the event of war abroad.

Want Name 'Butter' Used Only for Dairy Products

Quebec M.P. Says Sale of Butter Substitutes Hurts Dairy Industry

NEED MORE MARKETS

Ottawa, April 19 (CP)—Butter which is not produced from cows milk is not butter and the use of the word in describing such products as peanut butter, orange butter, chocolate butter, caramel butter, and cocoa butter should be prohibited. the House of Commons was told last night by a group of members, chiefly from the eastern townships of Quebec.

They spoke in favor of the bill sponsored by J. H. Leclerc (Lib. Shefford) to make it illegal to sell any product which does not conform to the definition of butter in the Dairy Industry Act as butter.

As Mr. Leclerc spoke he displayed eight or 10 jars of products sold as different kinds of butter which, he said, were used as substitutes for real butter and cut down the market for the products of the farm. Last year, he said, 15,000,000 pounds of such products had been imported and considerable quantities were also made in Canada.

"What about butter nuts?" asked Harry Barber (Con. Fraser Valley) as R. M. Warren (Lib. Renfrew North) said the dairy cow should have a monopoly on the term butter.

"I contend the dairy cow was first in the field and has a monopoly which ought to be preserved," said Mr. Warren. "It should not be infringed by people who would give us a mixture of white sugar and axle grease and call it butter."

Mr. Leclerc said a pound of sugar butter, consisting of sugar, water and some flavoring, sold for 25 cents while a pound of sugar was worth only five cents. Such products not only injured the reputation of butter but cut down on consumption.

All food products should be required to carry an analysis of their content so that the public would know what they were getting, said George Wood (Lib. Brant). He thought the Department of Agriculture could accomplish good results by advertising the food value of products such as butter and was concerned about the effect of synthetic foods on national health.

J. A. Blanchette (Lib. Compton) supported the bill and urged the government to try to obtain export markets for Canada's surplus butter in making future trade agreements. He thought more Canadian butter could be sold in the United Kingdom which imported large quantities from foreign countries.

R. G. Davidson (Lib. Stanstead) said the large producers of fluid milk had been aided in recent years by provincial legislation but the small dairy farmer who sold cream or butter has received no help. The bill would bring farmers of this class a measure of protection and help to preserve and perhaps enlarge their markets.

"Members from the eastern townships want protection for butter but they oppose protection for manufactured goods," said T. L. Church Conservative - Toronto-Broadview. "The Conservative party believes in protection and a proper policy of protection would solve all the economic ills of Canada."

Mr. Church talked the bill past the end of Private Members' hour and Agriculture Minister Gardiner failed to obtain the floor to state the attitude of the government.

Sock and Mitten Of Drowned Man Found in River

A tattered sock and mitten said to be part of the wearing apparel of Percy Knox, lock-keeper of Dam No. 3, Trent River, believed to have been swept to his death while clearing snow from the raceway of the dam some time ago, was found yesterday floating in the swollen waters of the river near Dam No. 2, according to an unofficial report from that district today.

Discovery of the articles, the report states, substantiates the early belief of searching parties of police and residents that the body is being retained by large stones on the river-bottom.

Racing flood waters of the Trent River make present resumption of the search for the body of Knox, impossible it is reported. The missing lock-keeper was last seen sweeping snow from the raceway of the dam, and was missed when cleaning apparatus was discovered floating in the water some two hundred feet below the dam, by relatives. Knox's automobile and coat were found on the riverbank near the dam. Days of search and dragging by provincial and local police, assisted by residents of the district proved futile, and the search was finally abandoned in the belief that the body was caught in the large stones that cover the river bottom near the dam.

CLOUDS HIDE ECLIPSE

Low clouds which covered the Belleville area this morning caused a disappointment to many residents of the city and district who had hoped to observe the season's first eclipse of the sun which, weather permitting would have been visible at eleven o'clock. The eclipse was a scheduled to last two hours, commencing at eleven, and was expected to be only partially visible to sections of the North American continent. It was not of any importance from a scientific standpoint.

The Hon. J.E. Michaud, Dominion Minister of Fisheries, with V. P. Reid, Toronto industrialist who organized the national service clubs fish luncheon in which over a hundred service clubs participated. Addressing a joint meeting of the Progress and Lions clubs in Toronto, the Minister's speech was heard over a coast to coast network, and told co-operating clubs how per capita consumption of fish had increased from 21 to 30 pounds per annum.

This evening Mr. Reid will speak before a sales conference in the Quinte Hotel.

The stolen plan would assist enemy aircraft in dropping bombs on a vital point in the great factory, causing "untold havoc and loss of life," said G. Paling, prosecuting.

It was alleged Kelly arranged to get into contact with the German secret service through the German Consul at Liverpool. The prosecutor said Kelly went to Cologne, Germany, to deliver the secrets. One of the documents has been recovered but another is missing.

The name of the German Consul was not given in court and it was understood he no longer is in this country.

Trying to Increase Income

The prosecutor said Kelly lived at Rigby Bolton and was employed in constructional work. He was in financial straits and allegedly conceived the idea of stealing the documents and selling them for the purpose of increasing his income.

Mr. Paling alleged that March 1 Kelly broke into the factory and stole the two plans. The following day he applied for a passport which was subsequently issued with a German visa.

The accused then received a letter from a "gentleman in Holland" who, Mr. Paling added, was a German secret service agent. This letter suggested a meeting at Osnabrueck, Germany, for March 17 or 18.

Met at Frontier

The prosecutor charged Kelly left England for Hook of Holland, and on March 17 crossed into the Reich, a German agent meeting him at the frontier. They proceeded to Osnabrueck and then Cologne, where he received instructions and allegedly was paid the sum of £30.

He was given the name and address of a woman with whom he could correspond on the piece of paper which was found when he was arrested by British police March 20, the prosecution claimed.

London, April 19—(CP-Havas) — Four Irishmen appeared in Bow Street police court today on charges of illegal possession of explosives. They were remanded in custody for seven days.

One of them, John Joseph Keane, 37, described as a porter, was alleged to have stated at the moment of his arrest: "For every one of us pulled in 20 will step into the breach." This testimony was given by Inspector William Whitehead who said he searched Keane's house in Camden Road yesterday, along with another officer, and found a quantity of explosive substances.

Unexpected Bomb

Meanwhile a work-crew discovered an unexploded bomb in Catesby Tunnel near Daventry. Police opened an investigation.

The other three who appeared at Bow Street were Joseph McGillicuddy, 27, Dennis McGillycuddy, 25, and John Murphy, 24, all laborers.

The McGillycuddys were accused of having in their possession a stock of gelignite and other articles, including a metal fuse and alarm clock. Murphy was charged with having a hand grenade in his possession.

SHELL IS FOUND IN MAIL BOX

Hamilton, April 19—(CP)— Discovery of an 18-pound shell—a time worn dud—in one of the post office's collection boxes here today, caused W. M. MacLean, Postmaster, to issue a stern warning that the department regarded such offences as meriting stiff penalties.

Only reaction felt in postal circles when the ponderous shell was discovered among a number of parcels in a street collection box, was that a practical joker hoped to get a laugh.

The time-worn shell obviously had never reached armament stores. It resembled more one of the rejects that found its way to the scrap heap when munitions were being manufactured here during the Great War. There was no indication a cartridge case ever had been attached.

International At a Glance

sent, however, Germany holds the exclusive privilege.

London, April 19—(CP-Havas)—Robert Boothby, Conservative, today announced he would ask in the House of Commons "whether in view of the international situation arrangements can be made to have H.M.S. Repulse retained as a unit of the Fleet in European waters."

The Repulse is to take the King and Queen across the Atlantic on their visit to Canada next month.

London, April 19 —(AP)— Exchange Telegraph, a British News Agency, reported from Stockholm today that the Swedish Government had decided to call up the 1935 class of army recruits—approximately 14,000 men —for a month's "preparedness service." The precaution will cost approximately $1,625,000.

Chungking, April 19—(AP) — General Chiang Kai-Shek says that "under existing circumstances peace is impossible" in the Chinese-Japanese war, now in its 22nd month.

"In less than 22 months Japan has been reduced to a second rate power," the Chinese leader told newspapermen yesterday. "The moment surely is coming when she no longer can bear the strain—then will the hope of peace dawn.

Niagara Falls, Ont., April 19 — (CP)—It was learned here today from a reliable source a guard of 60 or 70 war veterans will be thrown around Queenston and Leaside power stations, immediately. They will work 24 hours, wear khaki uniforms, carry rifles and will be paid $4 a day.

7 YEARS GIVEN ON ARSON CHARGE

18-Year-Old Youth Pleads Guilty to Setting Barn on Fire

Guelph, Ont., April 19—(CP) — Because "something came over me and I needed excitement" Frank Edward Clark, 18, of Toronto, set fire to the dairy barn at the Ontario Reformatory on April 13, He admitted in police court today.

Clark pleaded guilty to a charge of arson and was sentenced by Magistrate Watt to seven years in Kingston Penitentiary.

ARREST BY ROOKIE EXCITING AFFAIR

Constable Gets His Man After Thrilling Series of Adventures

Toronto, April 19—(CP)—Rookie Constable Cyril Cole made his first important arrest early today, but had quite a time doing it.

Cole apprehended Leonard Thompson, 21, a shopbreaking suspect, as he climbed down a fire escape. Taking Thompson to a police call box, he was telephoning headquarters when his man broke for freedom. The officer overtook him but Thompson escaped again after a brief tussle in which a plate-glass window was broken.

They played hide-and-seek around a parked automobile for a while, and when the fugitive ran away again the Constable halted him quickly by firing a revolver shot into the air. But again the man dashed off through the downtown area as Cole came up to arrest him.

This time pedestrians tried to aid the officer and a Chinese managed to snatch a piece of the fugitive's trouser-leg. He wasn't halted, though, until he ran short of breath and Cole caught up.

The rookie marched his man to headquarters, where he was charged with breaking into the premises of Airways, Limited, and stealing $8.99 in excise stamps and $1.39 in cash.

SAYS HE HEARD NO SOUND OF SIREN BUT HE IS FINED

Port Credit, Ont., April 19—(CP) —H. J. Pendlebury of Toronto, who claimed he didn't hear the siren of Provincial Traffic Officer W. E. Herman during a four-mile chase, was fined $18 and costs when convicted by Magistrate W. E. McIlveen yesterday of reckless driving.

Herman said he signalled Pendlebury with a flashlight and pursued him with the siren of his motorcycle "wide open" along No. 2 Highway March 31. The officers said Pendlebury speeded up his car to 68-miles an hour at a railway crossing.

"I always speed up when going over a railway level crossing and get over just as fast as I can," said Pendlebury, explaining: "I've always figured that slowing up so often causes the engine to stall and has been the reason for many of these railway crossing fatalities one reads about."

DEFENCE DEPT. ASKED TO HELP

Ontario Gov't. Wants Recent Thefts of Dynamite Investigated

Toronto, April 19 —(CP)— The Ontario Government yesterday appealed directly to the Department of National Defence for immediate co-operation in the investigation of recent thefts of dynamite from construction firms in the province.

Later it was learned the director of military operations and intelligence and one of the Department's operators would be sent to Toronto from Ottawa.

Appeal to Ottawa was made shortly after a conference participated in by Premier Hepburn, Attorney-General G. D. Conant, Conservative Leader George Drew and J. Albert Smith, member of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission.

It is understood the Ottawa officials will consult today with Brigadier R. O. Alexander, officer commanding military district No. 2 From the conference they will go to Queen's Park to meet Mr. Hepburn and those who conferred with him yesterday.

Possibility of Sabotage

The possibility of sabotage against large power and industrial plants in this province, in the event of war, was discussed at yesterday's meeting. The Attorney-General then telegraphed Defence Minister Ian Mackenzie for assistance.

Whether Great War veterans who have signified their willingness to do guard duty will be posted on Hydro plants within the next day or two will depend on the result of today's conference with the Ottawa officials.

There is said to be a feeling on the part of the Ontario Government that special guards that might be posted because of sabotage fears should be enlisted by and paid by the Federal Government.

Dynamite thefts in the Toronto area, it is reported, would not have been considered as serious by the Ontario Government had not the Royal Canadian Mounted Police received information concerning them.

Mr. Mowat stated that he was writing another book which will deal in part with the history of the Bay of Quinte district. MANY TOURISTS EXPECTED TO RETURN

Pleased with the courtesy and service given them at the camp last year, dozens of tourists who visited Belleville and the city tourist camp last season will make a another visit this season, it is indicated by a sheaf of postcards and letters received during the winter by Geo. Wilder, caretaker of the camp last year and again appointed for the coming season. During the winter months follow up letters had been sent last year's visitors to their home addresses by Mr. Wilder asking the favor of their visit again this year, and many complimentary return messages have indicated their readiness to do so.

THE GOLDEN GIRL

—by—

Agnes Louise Provost and Ladbroke Black

CHAPTER IX

Two hours later Gorham came out to Miss Endicott's sitting room at the Benham with a cool little smile on his lips. It vanished when he saw Miss Dalton at her desk, composedly writing. There was a flicker of curiosity on his face that was not lost on the astute Sara. She guessed that he, also, had expected to see Gloria. Men of Gorham's type didn't usually bother to look at Sara at all.

Within five minutes he was in a public telephone booth. "Hello, Parsons? I think I've found out just what we want. We'd better meet and talk it over . . . Yes . . . Suppose we meet at that hotel near you, the Grandon, in half an hour."

In a quiet corner of the grill at the Hotel Grandon two men talked long over their luncheon. One of them was Gorham. The other might have been a prosperous miner or planter loitering to see the sights of a big town.

Gorham was doing most of the talking.

"That is how it stands, Parson. I'll float the thing for you if you don't lose your head and push matters too fast. We can easily clear forty to fifty thousand, which isn't bad on one deal."

"Maybe not," growled Parsons. "But I notice that you've fixed it to hand me most of the work and all the risk. What's going to happen when the dividends don't came in?"

"We can pay dividends out of principal for a while. But suit yourself about taking it up. I'll do it my way or not at all. I can get plenty of other investments for my client."

"It goes," he said briefly and pushed back his chair.

Gorham and Parsons did not leave the hotel together. Parsons went first leaving Gorham to finish his coffee and incidentally to settle the check. A little later the broker also arose and made his way toward the hotel lobby.

He was satisfied to observe that apparently there was no one here whom he knew.

A little way down the nearest corridor the lights of an elevator shot down to the ground floor stop. Gorham noticed it chiefly because it was his habit to notice things. As the door slid back a girl in a plain blue suit came out. A splendor of gold shone beneath the blue straw, a clear little profile and eyes that were wonderfully, meltingly blue. It was not a face that one would forget easily.

She went directly to the desk, apparently asking for mail. Gorham caught the negative movement of the clerk's head and she turned away.

There was a suspicion of uncertainty in the way she strolled through the lobby as if debating whether to go or stay. Then she bought a paper at the news stand and wandered off to one of the small writing rooms off the main corridor. Gorham watched her go in. He strolled over to the desk.

A new arrival was registering and Gorham, standing at his elbow, let his eyes run quickly back over the closely written page. Near the top something caught his attention.

"Mrs. John Moreland, New York City."

For an instant Gorham's eyes widened in surprise. "Mrs. John Moreland!" And no Mr. Moreland there.

He caught the glance of the waiting clerk.

"Single room with bath, please. I will go up later."

He took the pen which the clerk handed him, and registered in an easy, flowing hand:

"J. Y. Parsons, Lincoln, Nebraska.

It amused him to sign Parsons' name. He might not use the room, but if anything interestnig was happening he would be on hand.

In her hurried planning Gloria had fixed on the Grandon because there she would feel safe from recognition. At first there had been only delicious comfort and relaxation painted hazily with dreams. There were so many wonderful things she would soon be able to do!

Then the waiting, at first eager, became impatient. She strolled into the quiet writing room and tried to read the paper. Two days ago she had opened it first to the "Help Wanted" pages. Now—she let the paper slide into her lap and dreamed. She would travel. And give Sara a lot of things. And build a big apartment hotel for girls, with plenty of air and light in every apartment and private sitting rooms, and endow it so that girls with their livings to earn could afford to live there instead of in boarding houses or dingy tenements!

Gloria's heart seemed to give a convulsive leap and then stand still. In the doorway stood Wayne Gorham, suavely smiling. He came across the little room with hand extended as if they had been old friends. Her instinct had always been to hold this man at arm's length and it stood her in good stead now.

"How do you do, Mr. Gorham." The response was pleasant, but impersonal. For the moment Gorham looking into the eyes of sweetly cool composure was willing to admit the possibility of mistake. There might be more than one John Moreland in New York and coincidence was not proof. Still—

"Didn't I see you at Beechwood the other day?" he asked. "I merely caught a glimpse of someone on the stairs, but I was sure it was you."

"Yes. I was Miss Endicott's secretary for a time. I am not there now."

Gorham's mind sped back to the brief tableau of a man and a girl glimpsed through a break in the shrubbery, the girl with averted face, the man bending toward her, ardent, pleading and tender. And framed in a long French window a rigid old woman with the face of a wrinkled mask.

"You were wise to break away," he said blandly. "There is no advancement in a place like that. Are you back with the old firm? I am hoping that you would be willing to change, because I have a vacancy in my own office."

Far down the corridor came the monotonous chant of a bellboy paging someone. In the distance it was only a nasal drone.

"Thank you, but I am not looking for a position now."

The nasal voice sounded nearer. Gloria listened with pricking anxiety unaware of the intent look which had crept into her eyes.

"Fortunately it is not necessary any more," she added. "The uncle with whom I used to live died recently and he remembered me in his will."

The nasal chant was now quite near.

"Mrs. Moreland! Mrs. Moreland!"

Gloria sat very still. Gorham's eyes were on her watching the rising color in her cheeks.

"Delighted to hear of your good luck," he said smoothly. "I congratulate you, Miss Staunton."

Gloria arose schooling herself to move deliberately. The net was close around her now, hampering her honest freedom of movement and tangling her in meshes of deceit.

"Oh, but you will let me see you again, won't you?"

"Perhaps. Who knows? For the present, good-by, Mr. Gorham."

He watched her go out through the revolving door and pause for an instant while she drew on her glove. It was the right glove. He had not failed to notice that the left had not been removed.

Gloria's appointment merely led her around the block and into the hotel by another entrance. She went directly to her room by way of the nearest and least conspicuous elevator. Once safely there she seized the telephone.

"Has any message come for Mrs. Moreland?"

"Just a few moments ago, Mrs. Moreland. I had you paged, but you were out. I will send it up immediately.

"Please do. And send my bill at the same time. I am leaving at once.

In a few moments she had them both. With the closing of the door she tore open the telegram.

"Coming on to settle details in person. Arrive Thursday afternoon.
"John Carver."

Gloria stared at it stonily. He was coming! And she would not, could not be at the Grandon. She turned to the telephone again and then dropped her upraised hand. It would not be wise to call Jack Moreland over a Grandon telephone.

CHAPTER X

An hour later Gloria was back in the dim little apartment that she had never expected to enter again. The rent had been paid to the end of the month and Sara had not yet had time to dismantle the place and pack. Gloria dropped her suitcase thankfully and went out again to the telephone.

A strange voice answered when she called the number Jack had given her. No, Mr. Moreland was not in. He would not return until sometime after six. If the message was important, she might get him at 1439 Bryant.

She called 1439 Bryant and this time the voice at the other end of the live was gruffly curt.

"Moreland? Yep, I guess so."

There was a long pause during which she heard a distant crossfire of voices and a curious clanking sound. Then Jack's "Hello" in distinct contrast to those other voices.

"This is—Gloria. I have left the hotel. Something happened. And Mr. Carver is coming on Thursday."

"Where are you?"

"At my old address."

"I'll be there in a few moments."

His voice sounded unexpectedly capable. Gloria was conscious of a distinct feeling of relief.

She did not know that coming at once involved getting the rest of the afternoon off and changing from overalls and old clothes into expensive tailoring which seemed an inseparable part of Jack Moreland. He apologized for the condition of his hands.

"I've been messing around in automobile grease," he explained when he arrived at Gloria's hotel "I was at the garage when you called. Now tell me what has happened."

He listened without comment, but his lips tightened when she told of Gorham and the paging incident.

"I don't think he suspected anything," she concluded, "but I did not dare stay when I found that he was there."

"Of course not. It's unfortunate especially with Carver coming, but you can locate elsewhere and get a wire to him."

"Yes, I must see him somewhere, but I am afraid now to go to another hotel. Oh, I hate all this slyness and subterfuge!" she finished with a burst of vehemence. "I am ashamed of it."

"Perhaps it would be better to rent a furnished apartment," he suggested. "You need not live there, but just keep it as an address for your business mail."

"It won't be easy to do that in time to telegraph him a new address before he starts."

"Suppose you leave the preliminaries to me? I know this town pretty well."

Still she hesitated. vexed and baffled that she must continue to ask favors from him.

"If they want the rent in advance," she confessed, "I coulnd't take an apartment. I am going to ask Mr. Carver to advance some money, but—"

"Of course you must not be without funds. Just consider that I am Carver until he comes across."

Already his hand was in his pocket and he brought out a well-filled wallet. In one side of it lay a thick sheaf of bills. In the other, among various papers, was a little yellow envelope. He reached for this, dexterously turning the wallet so that she could not see him draw out its contents.

"Suppose you take this for current expenses and we will fix the rent as soon as we know what it will be. Now I will start out and do some scouting. Good-by."

"Good-by and thank you for this. Of course you will let me consider it a loan."

"Anything you please," he said briefly.

When he had gone she looked doubtfully down at the bills. Already she was accepting money and help from the husband that she refused to recognize. Life was playing ironical tricks with her

She caught a glimpse of something small and yellow under the table. It looked like a pay envelope. Perhaps the janitor had been here during her absence. The thought annoyed her and she picked up the small thing and carried it out to the kitchenette.

A little later Gloria's husband of a few days sat in the lounge of the nearest hotel reading over the columns of "Apartments for Rent." in the evening paper. It was absorbing. He found himself weighing advantages and disadvantages like a prospective householder. And by his side like a luminous mist a figure grew, leaning close to him with one hand on his shoulder and a lovely intent face near his own. Gloria, his wife, choosing her home.

X X X

Gloria sat in a sort of dream listening to the steady tones of Mr. Carver's voice and stealing glances about the room with a wonderful sense of proprietorship and delight. It was her own in spite of that embarrassing little card just over the bell with the single word 'M'oreland" on it.

It had all come about so smoothly. Not a detail had been overlooked. Books and magazines were lying on the table and an expensive box of chocolates beckoned temptingly just within reach.

Now the ordeal was almost over and tomorrow her uncle's executor would return to Chicago. She suspected that since he had met Jack and her the day before, the lawyer had taken a swift trip to the little town where they had been married; but however that might be he had apparently seen fit to accept her as Gloria Moreland, married somewhat hastily, to be sure, to meet the requirements of his client's will.

She meant of course to tell Mr. Carver the truth about her strange marriage but at first she had been prepared to distrust anyone whom her uncle, shrewdly grasping and none too scrupulous, had chosen for this man of business. Already her uneasy fear was changing to respect for this dry, noncommittal man. She would tell him now instead of waiting for things to work themselves out.

Figures! Figures! She had not dreamed that her uncle Robert was so wealthy.

"Of course it will take time to settle the estate, but meanwhile I will advance whatever sums you need within reason," Mr. Carver said.

"I wish to settle a certain share on my husband—say a third of the income."

Carver's brows raised slightly at the urgent earnestness of her tone, but before he could answer there was the sound of a key in the latch. A moment later Jack appeared. He carried a florist's box under one arm and dropped it in Gloria's lap.

"How do you do, Mr. Carver. Sorry to be late, Gloria."

He was playing the devoted husband. For a breathless moment she thought he was going to kiss her, but he merely dropped a lightly caressing hand on her shoulder and moved away while she quickly opend the box and buried her face in the cool fragrance of violets.

"Oh, beautiful!"

The lawyer suddenly looked at his watch. "I am expecting a long distance call and must get back to the hotel. Oh, yes, there is one thing more." He turned to Jack.

"Mrs. Moreland tells me that she wishes to make a settlement of one-third of her income on her husband. I will arrange that as soon as matters will permit."

"I prefer that Mrs. Moreland's fortune should remain entirely her own. I appreciate the generous intention, but I cannot allow it to be done."

Gloria's gasp was buried in the violets. The lawyer nodded briefly, arose and extended his hand.

"Good-by. I congratulate you — both."

When the door had closed on him Jack came back and stood in front of her.

"So you really thought that I would let you pension me off like that?"

"It isn't a pension!" she flamed back at him. "It was part of our agreement— the only consideration that made it possible for me to ask you to marry me."

"I don't think I agreed to be paid for marrying you. Besides, if we must have things on a business basis I owe you something for having lost you your position at Beechwood through my too obvious admiration for my aunt's secretary. So let's call it square."

His hand went into his pocket and brought out the little key with which he had let himself in. He tossed it on the table.

"Good-by and once more, good luck. If anything happens the same old number will get me."

"Good-by—and thank you. That is all I can say."

The door closed. She stood alone in the little home that he had made for her, finished and daintily luxurious in every detail. Violets were beside her, books of his choosing were on the table, but he had kept his word. She was alone and her new life lay before her.

An hour later a message brought her a note from Carver. He had been called back to Chicago and she had not yet informed him that she did not intend to acknowledge her marriage before the world.

CHAPTER XI

Miss Endicott was making her first visit to that mysterious hinterland which she knew vaguely as "downtown," to call on Mr. Gorham. A taxicab took her through bewildering mazes of streets and she found herself at last in his office. A clerk came forward. Would Miss Endicott step into the inner office? Mr. Gorham was engaged, but would see her in a moment.

It was a luxurious suite with every outward evidence of prosperity. She was alone in this inner room, but there was another one beyond with the door slightly ajar and voices could be heard, one of them Gorham's.

"Well, Parsons, you know your own business, but I think you are making a mistake to market your stock in this small way. Of course it is safe enough, but there is always a delay in selling small blocks of stock until you assemble enough capital to operate. With your proposition you could go to any of the big bankers and float a loan."

"Sure I could!" The other was heavier, but crisp and decisive "But they'd make me hand over sixty per cent of the stock for it and just as soon as things got going well they'd vote me out of my own company and pocket the profits. That's what they did to Tom Potter—froze him out of the Mariposa just over the county line. And Mariposa today is paying forty per cent on what they put into it. No, sir; I'm going to interest the private investor, and the people that buy Rosario today will net thirty per cent the first year she operates. And then some."

A telephone rang. Gorham's voice came again.

"Miss Endicott here? Why didn't you tell me before? You will have to excuse me, Parsons, I have an appointment."

He appeared in the doorway with apologies for a clerk's carelessness Miss Endicott listened absently, not in the least suspecting that the clerk had been instructed to place her there.

"I overheard what your visitor said. It was interesting."

"Oh, Parsons?" He raised deprecating brows. "Yes, it is interesting He is a mining engineer, rather a rough diamond, but he knows his business and he has a wonderful property that he is getting ready to work. Copper, an incredible lot of it. I am going to buy some of the stock myself while it is low. After it gets on the market it is certain to soar. Now, Miss Endicott, let's come to your affairs. I have a very good bond here, five per cent, selling at 106 which will net 4.72 per cent. Not a very large return, but—"

Miss Endicott interrupted him impatiently.

"I do not wish it. What is this copper stock of which you were speaking? The one that will net thirty per cent?"

Gorham shook his head. "Great fortunes have been made in copper, but mining stock is scarcely a woman's investment." He seemed to hesitate. "Still if you insist, I will see Mr. Parsons is still here."

HITLER DISPLAYS NEW AIR DEFENCE GUNS

'Errors of Geography' Must be Considered—Mussolini

Ten-Year Peace Pledge Impossible Reply by Il Duce

Mussolini Declares Axis Policy is 'Peace and Collaboration'

UNARMED MOBILIZATION

Expansive Conference of Nations Requested by Italy's Premier

Rome, April 20—(AP)—Premier Mussolini, answering President Roosevelt's appeal to himself and Chancellor Hitler for non-aggression pledges, declared 10-year peace guarantees were impossible without consideration of vast "errors of geography" of which he contended Europe was the victim.

He inferentially rejected any "expansive" conference of nations, but declared nevertheless that the Rome-Berlin axis stood for "peace and collaboration."

Mussolini suggested Italy might not make any other reply to the United States President's message of last Saturday than the indirect one he made today in a broadcast speech reviewing the progress of preparations for Rome's 1942 world exposition.

But he said that whether or not a reply was sent, he desired to reaffirm that "the policy of Rome and that of the axis is a policy inspired by criterions of peace and collaboration."

Why the Weather!

Windvanes! As so much weather depends upon the direction of the wind, we constantly consult the windvane, probably the first weather instrument. "Vane" signifies a banner, and originally meant a metal representation of a flag. Windvanes first appeared in England as easily as the 11th century. In their development all sorts of designs have been worked into them, such as initials, badges, dates, heraldic devices, etc. The earliest example of a heraldic device appeared at Etchingham, England, dates from 1375. Some windvanes have devices alluding to some local circumstance, such as a ship or fish, signifying a seaport. A noted one, on St. Lawrence Church, London, has the form of a gridiron. It is a reference to the manner in which the martyr St. Lawrence met his death.

NEWS ODDITIES AND BRIEFS

FREAK CALF HAS TWO MOUTHS AND FOUR NOSTRILS

New Liskeard, Ont., April 20—A freak heifer calf, born nine days ago, is the centre of attraction these days on the farm of Ered Maille near here. The oddity has two mouths and four nostrils and the head is blunt-shaped like a bullfrog. The mouths are one above the other in the centre of the head and each has a perfectly-formed tongue and set of teeth. On each side of the mouths, which converge into one throat, are two nostrils. The eyes are where the ears normally would be while the latter are set back almost on the neck.

OLD WOOD SEWERS FOUND

Amherstburg, Ont., April 20 —(CP)—Workmen digging on the site of old Fort Malden here to prepare for a museum have uncovered something that ranks as a museum piece in itself. Diggers found the wooden sewer system that served the British fort. Although more than 100 years old, the wood was well preserved.

Presumably to quiet rumors that the new ministry would not have full powers over the supply of munitions, the Prime Minister announced that the new ministry would be a ministry of supply "in the full sense."

A bill will be introduced soon, the Prime Minister said to establish the ministry.

Russian Ambassador to Berlin Leaves for Moscow

Berlin, April 20—(AP)—It was disclosed today that Russia's Ambassador to Germany, A. T. Merekaloff, left for Moscow Tuesday. An Embassy spokesman declined to comment on the purpose of the trip. The German foreign office mouthpiece, Deutsche Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz, said the present series of German-Italian-Rumanian-Hungarian-Yugoslav diplomatic talks meant that "after a century-old period of errors a new era of cooperation is desired by all nations in Central Europe."

The foreign office organ said the nations of the Danubian basin wanted only to "reach the same unanimity as the States of the American continent."

WRITER OF LETTER SOUGHT BY POLICE

Advance Warning of Fire Aboard Liner Sent Two Days Before

Le Havre, France, April 20.—(AP)— French authorities, working on a theory that foreign agents might have started the disastrous fire aboard the liner Paris, today sought the writer of an anonymous advance warning of sabotage. They also continued a close questioning of the ship's crew.

Officials denied a rumor a bomb had been found aboard the French Line Flagship, Normandie, two days ago. Minister of Merchant Marine Louis de Chappedelaine, however, acknowledged there had been threats to blow up the great liner.

The Normandie, ringed by a cordon of mobile guardsmen, was in drydock for a propeller change, only a short distance from the partly submerged wreck of the Paris.

Two men were killed in the 13-hour battle with flames, ended yesterday morning when the 34,000-ton Paris listed and half sank at her dock.

Police said the author of an anonymous note posted at Nice, two days before the fire, apparently was a woman.

The letter, signed "VVBC-32" and received by the Mobile Guard, reported a conversation overheard in r Nice hotel in which two persons were said to have plotted sabotage against vessels at Le Havre.

Sections of the French press laid the fire to foreign agents, charging they wished to break down the prestige of the French line.

Unidentified Undersea Craft Seen in Halifax Harbor Report

Halifax, April 20—(CP)—Presence of an unidentified submarine in Halifax harbor was reported by Captain William Latter last night. The veteran members of the pilot service said he had notified naval authorities he had seen the craft enter the harbor early yesterday.

Captain Latter said he was aboard the pilot boat when he saw the undersea craft, partly submerged and with lights showing, entering the harbor shortly after midnight yesterday. It was moving slowly near "Neverfall Buoy" within the harbor when he lost sight of it.

"I watched it moving slowly ahead into the harbor from Chebucto Head", he said, "as it neared our pilot boat it speeded up and went quite lively across our bow, I could see two side lights and a light in the conning tower and it was easy to hear its underwater exhaust."

The pilot estimated the time of the ship's appearance was 12:10 a.m. Ten minutes later the freighter Cornerbrook, outward bound, had reported to him of sighting a submarine on the way in. Captain Latter said Pilot Patrick Sullivan, who was with him, had also seen the submarine.

(It was the third report of a submarine within a week.

Captain Vernon Goodick, South Shore fishing skipper, said Friday he had seen what he believed to be a submarine off Lockeport. Tuesday night Royal Canadian Mounted Police on Cape Breton Island said they were investigating a report by St. Peter's fishermen they had seen a low-lying object which might have been a submarine.)

The pilot said the craft was running with about 100 feet of its hull above the surface. The lights on either side and in the conning tower were distinguishable. It had cut across the pilot boat's course when the pilots could hear the throb of its engines. They were unable to distinguish any markings about the craft.

Belleville Man Given 14 Days

Picton, April 20.—(Special) —C H. Gibson, Belleville, was sentenced to serve fourteen days in the county jail after being convicted of drunken driving when he appeared before Magistrate Butler, of Belleville, in county police court here yesterday. His Worship impounded the accused man's automobile and suspended his driver's permit for three months. Other sentences imposed for lesser charges ran concurrently with the more serious sentence.

Arthur C Norley, Toronto, appeared on a charge of the illegal possession of liquor, contrary to the L.C.A. At the request of Mr. Fred Ward, counsel for the accused, the matter was enlarged until the 26th instant.

Several minor cases concluded the proceedings late yesterday afternoon.

LORD TWEEDSMUIR CONTINUES OFFICE WHILE KING HERE

TO THUNDER SALUTE

Ottawa, April 20—(CP)—Governor-General Tweedsmuir will continue his functions as official representative of the King of Canada even while King George is touring the Dominion, according to the interdepartmental committee in charge of arrangements for the royal tour.

A brochure issued by the government committee last night made interesting comments on that and other constitutional points. "The Governor-General will not cease to represent the King while His Majetsty is in Canada," the committee said. "Except upon His Majesty's express desire, it would not be appropriate, however, for the Governor-General to perform the royal functions in the actual presence of the King, who, when he is present, assumes the royal functions in person and has no need to be represented."

UNEMPLOYMENT BILL INTRODUCED

First Reading Given Bill After Five Days of Debate

Ottawa, April 20 —(CP)— Governments dealing with unemployment must proceed by trial and error and decide to what extent they will create increasing dependence upon the State and to what extent they will rely on private industry, Labor Minister Rogers told the House of Commons last night as his bill to provide for the 1939-40 unemployment program was finally advanced a stage after five days of debate.

The bill received first reading and will be up for second reading today. After it passes the Minister has still to obtain approval of his estimates for unemployment relief and works projects and his bill to extend the youth training program.

Showered with questions from Opposition speakers Mr. Rogers said the Governmen was not wholly satisfied with the result of its effort to reduce unemployment but was prepared to stand on its record. He charged critics with ignoring what had been done in order to emphasize things which had not been done.

Equipment Used To Lighter Cargo

Brockville, Ont., Apr. 20 (CP) — The Collier Valley Camp, stranded yesterday on a reef five miles west of here in the St. Lawrence, today awaited the arrival of equipment from Kingston which will be used to lighten her cargo of 2,600 tons of soft coal and thus permit her release. Units of the Pyke Salvage fleet are reported to be on their way to the scene of the grounding from Kingston with pumps coming by road from Port Colborne, where they were used recently in attempts to float the sunken freighter Northton.

BRITAIN AWAITS GERMAN REACTION TO PLEDGE OFFER

British Gov't. Willing to Give Guarantees of 'No Encirclement'

HENDERSON TO BERLIN

Will Resume Post at Berlin as Soon as His Report is Finished

London, Apr. 20 (AP) — While Great Britain pushed forward defence measures she waited for reaction to the offer yesterday by Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax of a "no encirclement" pledge to the Rome Berlin axis.

The foreign secretary offered to "give a most solemn undertaking" to Rome and Berlin that "encirclement" would never find a place in British policy.

Chancellor Hitler in a Reichstag speech a week from tomorrow is to answer President Roosevelt's proposals for German non-aggression pledges to 31 nations, and the chancellor's reaction is expected to point the way to future events in Europe.

Mr. Chamberlain already had declared his guarantees of independence to such nations as Poland, Greece and Rumania were not intended to encircle the axis powers.

Henderson To Go Back.

Lord Halifax' announcement Sir Nevile Henderson, would return to his post as Ambassador to Berlin as soon as he finishes his "report" also was believed aimed at easing the tension.

LIBERAL MEMBER PROTESTS FILM

Wants Film of Life of Alexander Bell Revised to Include Brantford

Toronto, April 20—(CP)— Louis Hagey, Liberal member of the legislature for Brantford, has protested against the showing in Ontario of the motion picture of the life of Alexander Graham Bell unless the picture is revised to show the work Bell did on the telephone in Brantford.

O. J. Silverthorne, Censor Chief, said today no decision has been reached on the showing of the picture. Mr. Hagey and deputation from Brantford will attend a private showing of the picture today. The censor board will then consider the matter further.

The picture would convey the impression Bell's experimental work on the telephone was done entirely in the United States, said Mr. Hagey. It shows the first conversation from one room to another as taking place in Boston. This is accurate, but the first time the human voice was carried any distance was between Brantford and its neighbor, Paris. No mention of this is made in the film.

Mr. Hagey said a compromise might be reached by the inclusion for Ontario showing of a prologue or epilogue referring to Bell's Brantford experiments and showing the Bell memorial in that city.

U. S. TO AWAIT HITLER REPLY

Will Then Decide Whether to Return Ambassador to Berlin

Washington, April 20—(AP)—The United States government will await Chancellor Hitler's Reichstag speech next week, it was learned today, before deciding whether to return the American Ambassador, Hugh Wilson, to Berlin.

Wilson was called home by President Roosevelt last November for "report and consultation" after anti-Jewish outbreaks in Germany. He has remained here on "temporary assignment" as an advisor on German relations in the State Department.

Great Britain decided yesterday to send back to Berlin its Envoy, Sir Nevile Henderson, summoned to London after the dissolution of Czecho-Slovakia. Informed persons in Washington said, however, that the United States government wants to hear Hitler's reply to Mr. Roosevelt's peace proposals before taking similar action.

Garbage Man Finds and Returns Wallet

Stratford, Ont., April 20—(CP)— Edward Johnston of Goderich today rejoices in the fact that it was an honest man who found his wallet containing $65 in cash and some cheques, on a Stratford street. The honest man is Adam Reade, a city garbage collector.

Last week the Goderich resident was in Stratford on business and when he got to Mitchell on the way back home, he discovered his loss and sped back to Stratford, but was unsuccessful in picking up any traces of the wallet.

Mr. Reade was riding along the day after the loss when he noticed the wallet beneath the wheel of the garbage wagon. He rescued the wallet and bills from the roadway and then waited for an advertisement. It appeared and soon he got in touch with the rightful owner.

LIVELY ARGUMENT BETWEEN HEPBURN AND HENRY HEARD

Ontario Legislature Will Not Prorogue Until Week from Friday

HEAVY AGENDA

Toronto, April 20—(CP)— Hope of early prorogation of the Ontario legislature faded today as the members considered the heavy legislative program yet to be dealt with—the estimates, several contentious bills and possible debates on relief and Hydro matters.

Premier Hepburn told the House last night it would be lucky to be through its business by April 28, just a week later than the date tentatively set for the end of the session. Night sittings were begun last Monday in the hope of prorogation tomorrow, but all hope of this is gone.

In an effort to conclude debate on the budget tonight, the legislature will if necessary sit until 3 a.m. tomorrow, the Premier said, adding: "I am beginning to agree with my friends of the opposition that they were right when they shortened the debate on the Speech from the Throne."

Germany Stresses This Phase of Military Science

Guns Exhibited Never Seen Publicly Before and Spectators Were Instructed Not to Photograph Equipment

MIGHTY AIR ARMADA

Strong Movement in Nazi-Dominated Free City for Return to the Reich and May be Birthday Present

Berlin, April 20—(AP)— Chancellor Hitler proudly showed off mammoth new types of long range air defence guns under the keen eyes of the world's military observers today as part of Germany's celebration of his 50th birthday.

There were no real clues as to the calibres of the new weapons, which included types never seen publicly before in Berlin. Authorities enforced strict orders against photographing them.

So large were some of the guns that four trucks were assigned to carry the parts of each. A dozen or so of these weapons had the words "fifty-five atmospheres" on them, others the words "fifty-eight atmospheres."

From the length of the air defence section of the parade it was evident Germany was stressing this phase of military science.

GERMAN FLEET SEEN BY AIRMAN

Part of Navy Sighted 50 Miles Off Netherlands Coast Today

Amsterdam, The Netherlands, April 20—(AP)—A pilot of the Royal Dutch Airlines reported today he had sighted part of the southbound German fleet this morning steaming off the Netherlands coast 50 miles northwes tof Amsterdam.

While flying at 6,000 feet at 10 a.m. (4 a.m. EST) he said he saw two cruisers, four destroyers and eight other vessels whose type he could not determine.

The German fleet, on its way from Kiel and Wilhelmshaven to Spanish waters for manoeuvres, previously had been unreported.

Defence Forces National Insurance Says Brigadier

Toronto, Apr. 20 (CP)—The defence forces of Canada do not exist with any idea of glorifying war, Brigadier R. O. Alexander, District Officer commanding No. 2 Military District told the Empire Club of Toronto today.

"We who have seen war are its bitterest opponents," he said. "But it is no use burying our heads in the sand and not being prepared to face realities."

Brig. Alexander compared military establishments of the dominion to a form of "national insurance" against a day which "we hope may never come". Keeping a trained fire brigade, he asserted did not indicate a desire to have a fire.

'Crusade of Prayer' for Peace Among All Nations Urged by Pope

Vatican City, April 20—(AP)— Pope Pius today asked for a "crusade of prayer" throughout the world during the month of May on behalf of "greatly longed-for Christian peace among all nations and people."

The Pontiff made his appeal in a letter to his secretary of state, Luigi Cardinal Maglione.

He recalled that immediately after his election as Pope and again in his Easter homily he had exhorted "all nations and their governments to sentiments of justice and charity in order to consolidate profoundly and permanently great longed-for Christian peace among all nations and peoples."

His Holiness then expressed the wish that in all the dioceses and parishes public prayer in this cause should be made to the Virgin during the coming month. He said he desired that prayers be said especially by children, "who radiate innocence, gentleness and grace."

The Pope said he was confident the prayers would be heeded and that "the heavenly mother will intercede, obtaining from her Divine Son liberation from present anxieties, the peace of hearts and fraternal concord among peoples."

The Pontiff's letter concluded with expression of a hope that "better times may arise for humanity once mutual rancors are appeased, minds pacified and dissension among peoples controlled."

The early-morning departure of the big vessels was in compliance with the Navy Department's sudden order of Saturday—an order not yet officially explained.

Brussels, April 20—(AP)— Belgium today ordered the demobilization of about half the 4,500 technical experts called to the colors from the military reserve April 12, apparently indicating that the Government considered international tension relaxed.

Vatican City, April 20—(AP) — Premier Paul Teleky of Hungary and his Foreign Minister, Count Stephen Csaky, had a long talk today with Pope Pius and his Secretary of State, Cardinal Maglione. A Vatican news service did not disclose the nature of the talk but foreign observers thought it not improbable the Holy Father had used the occasion to inform himself on conditions in Central Europe.

BAD ROADS HOLD UP OPENING OF MANY CHEESE FACTORIES

Difficult land and road conditions in the Belleville and Prince Edward County areas at the present time are believed responsible for the slow starting of cheese factories of the district this season. This week it is not believed that over three or four factories in the Belleville area are in operation, according to James Irwin, local Dominion dairy grader. Nearly all factories in Kingston district are on the season's first make, it was stated.

Plenty of milk is reported in the county, but the difficulty lies in the transportation of the milk over the boggy and muddy roads to the factories.

SEASON IS LATE AT MARMORA

"Spring in our part of the country is as far away as it was in December, as far as appearances go" Reeve William Linn of Marmora village stated today. "In some places we still have from two to three feet of snow and prospects for early seeding look exceedingly dull."

GREAT FLOCKS WILD DUCKS SEEN ON BAY

More wild ducks than have been observed in any spring in the memory of the oldest resident have visited the Bay of Quinte during the past week or so, and are apparently arriving in greater numbers daily. Yesterday in the open water of the bay near the old lighthouse off the government dock a flock of whistlers and blue bills, with fewer black ducks, estimated at well over two thousand birds, paddled and fed during the afternoon hours. Flights of from fifty to one hundred birds in single flocks have not been uncommon lately, it is reported by Harold Kellar, attendant of the yacht, Edamena at the dock. Not for many years have wild Canada Geese been as common as observed in the bay this year, it is also reported.

Police Blotter

Ralph Frederick, Picton, reported the theft of a radiator cap from his parked automobile off Pinnacle Street yesterday afternoon. The vehicle was parked directly in the open, but nervy sneak thieves lifted the radiator cap in broad daylight.

W. B. Moore, local stone cutter, 405 Front Street, complained to the police today, that some mischievous person had pushed over a blue granite tombstone some time last night. The stone was found lying on its face when Mr. Moore came to his place of business today. Whether the face of the stone was damaged by the marauders was not stated, however.

No arrests were reported last night, leaving the cell block available for the 27 transients, who sought shelter from the cold blasts last night. City police today revealed a marked increase in transients passing through the city of a late date. "There are more transients on the road today than one year ago, according to our records at the police station, one police official announced today.

Life in West Vividly Pictured By Mrs. Delve

The joint Thankoffering meeting of the Women's Missionary Society and the Mission Circle was held last evening in the Sunday School auditorium of Tabernacle Church. Following the opening hymn and Scripture reading, Rev. Campbell of Trenton, offered prayer.

Mrs. Towell presided and welcomed the guests, including several from Trenton.

The devotional period was based on the parables dealing with "Man's Co-operation with God" they were given by Mrs. Cecil Lent, Miss Jane Smythe, Mrs. G. C. Shorey and Miss R. Fox.

A poem "Thirty-three Years" was read by Mrs. W. Dougherty.

Miss Phyllis May sang very beautifully "Make Somebody Happy To-Day".

Rev. D. T. McClintock introduced the speaker Mrs. Delve of Ivanhoe.

Mrs. Delve told in a very interesting manner of the experiences of Mr. Delve and herself while serving in the Peace River District. The difficulties and hardships of the people, some who were formerly prosperous in Southern Saskatchewan, but were forced by the drought to trek north with the few belongings they had salvaged. She paid tribute to the faith and courage of these people who are pioneering in this district. In her inspiring address, Mrs. Delve gave a vivid picture of conditions in the West, her impressions reflecting her keen understanding and sympathy with those who have undergone trying times. Her own experiences of homesteading were described with wit and a sense of fun that captivated her audience. In concluding her address she appealed to the people of Ontario to continue sending help to the West where such assistance was valued beyond the realization of the donors.

Mrs. P. Cornell sang the Church of All Nations version of "O Canada" very effectively.

Mrs. T. G. Bell expressed the appreciation of the audience to Mrs. Delve for her very interesting address.

After the last hymn Rev. Delve closed with prayer. A social time was enjoyed and refreshments served.

Belleville is Asked To Locate Historic Site For Permanent Marking

Belleville has been asked to contribute an historical location for suitable marking and recognition by the Historic Sites and Monuments Board of Canada, in a letter received by Mayor Jamieson Bone from the Dominion Department of Mines and Resources, Lands, Parks and Forests Branch, Ottawa.

It is pointed out in the communication received by Mayor Bone that the Bureau has for some years been engaged in the work of preserving and marking historic sites of national importance throughout the Dominion which have been recommended for attention by the Historic Sites and Monuments Board, an honorary advisory body composed of recognized historians from various sections of the country.

"The Board has recommended that an effort be made to compile a list of all historical monuments, tablets and other memorials existing in Canada, and although some progress has been made in this connection, we have anything but a complete list.

"It would be very much appreciated if you could assist in compiling such a list by letting us have information respecting memorials in your municipality, together with details respecting each," the department requests Mayor Bone in the letter.

A request has been made by the Mayor for citizens of Belleville to assist in this work of locating a suitable site for permanent marking.

VIOLENT LANGUAGE OF GERMAN PRESS

The vehemence of the attacks of the German press, dominated by the Nazis, on Britain and President Roosevelt, are proof of the intense reaction the government of Mr. Chamberlain and the attitude of the American President and other leaders of the democracies have made on the German government

What Britain is trying to do and what President Roosevelt is advising is what the Nazi dominators of Germany want to keep from the German people.

There is no people's voice heard in Germany through the press, which is muzzled by the Nazis, who are running Germany for their party, the National Socialists. Hitler and his party decide what is good for every phase of the life and for the soul of the Germans.

Free speech is gone, free press is unknown, everything is Naziism.

There is only one inlet—radio news from foreign countries, spoken in German, may get in though it is said there are restrictions on the use of short wave sets in the Fatherland.

Yet, behind all the lack of knowledge and the stolidity of the German people there must be some who wonder what is going on in the world outside Germany, and why Hitler has made a world of opponents. Probably to some must come a glimmer in the darkness of suppression. Is Hitler always right and the rest of the world always wrong, always selfish, always bitter? If they believe the former then so much the greater the credulity now and so much greater the enlightenment to come.

POPULATION GROWS

Ontario's population is growing. That means that there are more people carrying obligations of making this province one of the finest lands in which men and women and children may live.

The population is given in Legislature figures as 3,377,832 as against 2,966,468 in 1937. The Dominion Bureau of Estimates set this province's population at 3,371,000 for 1938 There is a considerable difference but there is proof that the population is rising.

This is what such a development of the northern Ontario mines is helping to do for this province in bringing in people and wealth. Other factors are at work in the progress of Ontario.

The Dominion Bureau gives an estimate of 11,208,000 for the Dominion at the end of last year. Ontario and Quebec together have a population of 6,903,000 according to the Dominion Bureau. The progress of the latter two provinces has been steady and all signs point to a steady development with rise in population.

These populations are, however, small, but they accord with the size of the populations in the other Dominions, New Zealand and Australia. All these have the problem of building up their populations for the sake of protection and for the progress of the people.

It is estimated by the Montreal Gazette that the population of Canada will be well over 12,000,000 by 1941, the time of the next Federal census.

DID NOT YIELD TO TEMPTATION

Twelve boys who found 900 circus tickets in New York City proved themselves superior to temptation. At first however they planned to divide the prize and later returned it.

Boys love circuses. A group gathered Monday at the circus entrance and were told by a cop 'Next Monday'. That was free day. They wanted to make sure and so asked others, who mentioned Saturday and some said Tuesday was the free day. Suddenly on the floor of Madison Square Garden one saw a letter with footprints all over it. "I thought may be it might be passes to the circus", said he. Actually it was a letter with the words "please give the bearer our allotment of 900 tickets." It was addressed to Room 1028 in the Fisk Building and was for the tickets allotted to a charity federation for a special performance next Monday. The finder presented the message and received the package. He and the rest of the group of boys went to Central Park and found the package contained 900 free tickets. The distribution was to be; four of the boys were to get 100 each, three 12 each and others only 11 each. The 320 left were divided. The boys decided to go into the brokerage business and sell the tickets at $1.10 and make . . . But one boy felt sorry. Another didn't think it right to keep them on the orphans. So the "Big Circus Ticket Monopoly" marched back to room 1028 and handed over the tickets. The boys all spoke in gushes and torrents of words.

They left, giving credit all to one boy for leading them to return the tickets. They had been given carfare and they spent their spare nickels on hot dogs.

They may get to the circus yet, may these thwarted circus-goers. If they do, they will see the orphans there.

Anyway they beat temptation and rounded out an honorable day.

SOME NEWSPAPERS ARE OLD IN EXPERIENCE if young in years and some newspapers may be old in years and yet young in useful experience, but one newspaper which keeps its youth while retaining many years of experience by which it has profited is The Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph which proudly and bravely nails to its mast the challenge, "Quebec's Best Newspaper". On June 21 next the Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph will celebrate the 175th anniversary of the Quebec Gazette which was incorporated with the Chronicle in 1874, its existence being continued as a weekly edition until 1924. The Gazette was founded by two Scotchmen Messrs. Brown and Gilmore, with the encouragement of Brigadier General James Murray, first British Governor, June 21, 1764, five years after the Battle of the Plains of Abraham. It was bilingual anl served for the publication of official announcements, as well as news. The London Times is an infant compared to the Quebec Chronicle Telegraph, which claims to be the oldest surviving newspaper in Canada and the world and has only one contemporary The Courant of Hartford, Connecticut. The first newspaper published in this country was, of course, The Halifax Gazette, but it has long since ceased to be a newspaper, continuing as the Official Gazette of Nova Scotia. Hence the 175th birthday celebration of The Quebec Gazette on June 21 next is an event worthy of more than passing mention and this column has been delegated to extend the hearty congratulations of this newspaper to the publisher of The Quebec Gazette Chronicle-Telegraph, old in years but ever youthful in spirit.

MAIL CARRYING ON THIS CONTINENT BEGAN EARLY, with men and horses and stage coaches, and the wide plains of the west gave birth to the Pony Express which, defying scalp-seeking Indians kept communication open from coast to coast. Finally the mail service graduated to the railway express service and fast planes and speed were added to efficiency. So, after all this progress when mail delivery leaves the railway express service and returns to the stage it's news. The motor car competition caused railway service to North Hastings to be curtailed and hampered the daily delivery of mail including newspapers with a twice-a-week service. Hence the stage gets back its mail delivery business. Of course modem stage travel means motor driven busses and speed of which horses would not be capable, but there is a similarity which intrigues. Mail now leaves Belleville only by motor bus and, by the way, by the same motor busses daily goes the Ontario Intelligencer so that our friends in all the north country can get the paper the same day, every day, when the ink is hardly dry on the paper. The world do move—remember the time when folks waited all week for their paper and if it was a day late, Gosh All Hemlock; what's a day or two among friends.

SPRING IS A LAGGARD THIS YEAR but come it must and we are entitled to a great deal of fine weather to make up for the tardiness of the real warm-hearted spring. Folks are already planning improvements about the home and are studying the Home Improvement Act as to government loan provisions. It is surprising the variety of home improvements possible under the act and all home owners should give the act close study. It is noticeable that the banks are co-operating in advertising loan assistance to all who wish to take advantage of the provisions of the act, and indications are that many will make home improvements this spring in this manner.

MODERN YOUTH

The model husband arrived home one evening and found his three-year-old son lighting up a cigar. He raced into the kitchen where his wife was preparing dinner.

"Margie," he announced, breathlessly, "this is terrible. I just caught our boy lighting a cigar!"

"I'll put a stop to it right now," she cried. "That kid is altogether too young to be playing with matches!"

Grass, The Poor Man's Carpet

Sir: From my window high up in a building at the southern end of Central Park, I can see that the grass in the park is getting really green. "That", says the cynic, "happens at about this time every Spring." So it does, and nearly every Spring poets write verses — some of them splendid — about the flowers of Spring. Nobody mentions grass. Any library can give you volume upon volume of prose or verse about flowers, but when you want to find out something about the plant that furnishes more beauty to the surface of the earth than any other, if not more than all of the others put together, you have a task ahead of you.

Grass, as somebody in a speech said, is the carpet on which men play in childhood and it is their shroud in death. It is the universal beautifier of the surface of the earth, where the surface is not tenanted by trees. Flowers, plants, shrubs and trees of different kinds are found in most parts of the world, but grass is found in every place where anything at all can grow. The war scars in France are covered from view by grass; nature attended to that. What a bleak, barren surface this earth would present to mankind but for the universal crop of grass that beautifies it everywhere!

How many different kinds of grasses there are on the surface of the earth probably is not known to anybody. Grass grows in every zone, including the Arctic. It is the principal food of the herds of wild animals of Africa, was the only food of the herds of buffalo that once inhabited the plains of North America, is today the principal food, either as grass or as hay, of all of the cattle, horses, sheep, goats and other domestic animals in the world. Where fertile land is seeded for grass, the results are certain and satisfactory. Where no seed ever is sown by man grass grows anyway.

Webster's lists 923 different kinds of grass. I counted column after column of the names myself, and I know that the count is at least somewhere near correct. But it is all grass of one kind or another, all devoted to the task of beautifying, unostentatiously, the surface of the earth. Grass—a carpet of green spread over the earth to soothe the spirit and rest the weary eyes of man. Just grass.

E.S.L.—

Mr. Chamberlain and His Job

St. James' Park, which lies in the heart of London's West End, has now a new attraction for tourists and Londoners alike. Almost every morning, at a little after 10 o'clock, an elderly gentleman with a black hat and coat may be seen walking, usually with his wife.

Even if his face were not familiar to millions, he could easily be identified by his famous umbrella. And no matter how tense the international situation may be, Neville Chamberlain, Prime Minister of Great Britain, leader of the House of Commons and First Lord of the Treasury, rarely misses his morning walk.

At 70, Mr. Chamberlain carries on his thin shoulders as large a burden as any man in the world. His job of guiding the destinies of Great Britain is one calling for tremendous energy and application.

In addition to being the executive head of one of the largest administrations in the world, the Prime Minister is in and of the House of Commons. He must keep his Cabinet colleagues in sympathy and also keep his backbenchers happy. He must face questions of the Opposition daily.

Roughly, he must combine the job of President of the United States with those of the majority leaders of the United States House and Senate.

When to this tremendous load is added the job of steering the British Empire through the storm which is at present troubling the world, the burden laid on Mr. Chamberlain seems almost more than one man can possibly bear.

x x x

Yet Mr. Chamberlain appears to be standing it well. He can still joke while discussing the terms of Britain's history-making treaty with Poland; his face, though lined and worried, does not show any new sign of strain; though irritable, and at times bitter with his opponents in the House of Commons, he still holds the respect and affection of those who work for him.

Perhaps one clue to the manner in which the Prime Minister stands the strain — his doctors say he has never been better and he has not been troubled by his gout for almost a year—is to be found in his power to throw his worries off his mind.

Like President Roosevelt, Mr. Chamberlain can shut his mind to one subject while turning to another. Like the President again, the Prime Minister can concentrate upon fishing to the exclusion of all other matters just as easily as he can concentrate on foreign affairs.

x x x

Mr. Chamberlain's day starts about 7 o'clock. First, he breakfasts and reads the papers, some of them very closely. This is succeeded by an hour or so with his private correspondence. Then comes a walk in St. James' Park, sometimes with a colleague, but more often with Mrs. Chamberlain.

On his return Mr. Chamberlain settles down to work. He uses the famous Cabinet room where most of Britain's historic decisions have been taken. It is a light and airy room facing the Downing Street garden, and it is lined with books. A portrait of Sir Robert Walpole, Prime Minister from 1721 to 1742, looks down at the long table at which the Cabinet sits. The Prime Minister's seat is in the middle of this table, as also is his working desk.

Unless it is Wednesday, when the Cabinet meets, Mr. Chamberlain's morning is taken up with callers. The strictest sort of punctuality must be followed by those who wish to see the Prime Minister. His engagements run right to the time designated and one minute before an appointment his bell rings for a secretary to show the preceding caller out.

A man who has seen many Prime Ministers says he has never known one so methodical as Mr. Chamberlain. According to his staff the Prime Minister not only runs his interviews exactly on their scheduled time but generally has finished the business within that time. All papers necessary to any discussion are digested before it takes place and decisions are taken immediately. After the calls are finished or the Cabinet departs, Mr. Chamberlain has luncheon, usually with Mrs. Chamberlain or some member of his family. The Prime Minister may take a whisky and soda with his lunch or dinner, but little more.

After luncheon, Mr. Chamberlain leaves for the House of Commons, a cigar, of which he is very fond, in his mouth Perhaps the most trying time of his day comes during question time, for then he must answer not only the usual queries addressed to the Prime Minister but all important questions on foreign affairs as well.

After question time, which lasts from 2.45 p.m. until about 4, Mr. Chamberlain goes to his office in the Houses of Parliament. He remains there conferring with colleagues, Ambassadors, or other callers and studying reports and documents until dinner time. After dinner, he usually returns to the Commons and remains until it adjourns about 11 o'clock. On returning home he works until the day's grist of reports and memoranda are cleared up. This may mean that he is at his desk until 1 o'clock in the morning.

The foregoing represents his routine, varied by an occasional public appearance and an even more occasional fishing trip. His week-ends are spent at Chequers, the country place of all British Prime Ministers. But even on holidays telegrams and red boxes follow Mr. Chamberlain.

The Prime Minister appears to thrive on all this. His step still is light, his eyes are clear and his hair, though liberally sprinkled with grey is still mostly black.

There are many opinions as to the efficiency of his government. But even though he has reached the Biblical threescore years and ten, he still takes full responsibility for his government and holds the helm in his own hand.—Robert P. Post in New York Times.

CASTLE AT BARGAIN

Would you like to buy a London mansion right in the West End near the Hyde Park, with ten bedrooms, three bathrooms, and five reception rooms, in one of London's fashionable squares, for 1£? You would? Well, the agents for No. 29, Hyde Park Square will be pleased if you will call and sign the contract.

And then—well, you don't wake up, but you find there is a snag about it—several snags in fact. The ground rent works out at about £280 a year, the rates (at present) at £154, and the lease is a full-repairing one, which means that it will cost about £100 to paint the front of the house alone! So, if you are not prepared to spend some £700 or 800 a year on your prospective home, you'll have to look elsewhere. Perhaps, after all, you'll take that thirty bob a week flat—constant hot water, and if the plaster off the ceiling hits you when it falls, you're unlucky.

Still a notice outside No. 29, which is empty at present, says that 30 years unrequired lease is for sale at the cost of £1. Until Christmas No. 29 was the town house of Frederick R. H. Millar, assistant private secretary to the Foreign Secretary, Lord Halifax, and now First Secretary at the British Embassy in Washington. —Overseas Daily Mail.

ALGOMA'S CHARMS

In Algoma there are beaver houses close to its only highway, a Hudson's Bay Company block house, the first canal on the Great Lakes, built in 1797, the famous Soo rapids, and probably the finest swimming beach in the world on Batchawana Bay.

We have Lake Superior, the greatest body of fresh water in the world, at our door, an Indian tribe that plays "Hiawatha" in its own language outside the city, and a great primitive wilderness behind us.—Sault Ste. Marie Star.

TAKE A NUMBER

Here is an ingenious little thing to play with in an odd five minutes:

Write down your telephone number, double it, add five, multiply by fifty, and this year (1939), add the number of days in a year (365), subtract the year of your birth, subtract the number of M.P.'s (615), and you will find the answer gives you first your telephone number and then your age this year.—New Statesman and Nation.

Diet Can Increase Growth and Prolong Life

When a diet—both quality and quantity (meat, eggs, fish, milk, certain cereals, fruits and vegetables)—has been used in a family for a number of generations and the family has thrived on it, generation after generation, it might quite properly be called an adequate or sufficient diet. But the only way it could be learned whether any improvement could be made on this diet would be by adding or taking away from it, in quantity or variety. It would then be found whether the members of the family improved or failed in health by the changes made.

"Prof. H. C. Sherman kept rats for twenty-seven generations on a uniform diet, thus showing that the diet was entirely adequate or sufficient. Yet it was shown upon enriching this apparently adequate diet by increasing the proportion of milk in it that an improvement resulted in the general condition of the rats.... There was more and efficient growth, lower death rate, higher mentality for all ages, an increase of ten percent in the average life span of the adults and a greater extension of the 'prime of life', that is, they developed earlier and yet old age was delayed."

In referring to Dr. Sherman's experiment, Prof. E. W. H. Cruikshank, Aberdeen University, in his book 'Food and Physical Fitness' says,

"Heredity does and always will play an important part in determining stature (growth) and health; climate also plays a part, even if a small part, in determining physical and mental characteristics, and it must now be accepted that diet also plays a part, in fact, some believe a more important part than both heredity and climate combined."

I have spoken before of the two African tribes, living side by side, one vegetarian (cereals, tubers, peas beans, green leaves) and the other meat eaters —meat, milk, blood, bananas, beans, maize and millet. At every age the meat-milk-banana eaters are taller and heavier than the vegetarians.

"These experiments on animals and the experiments unconsciously performed by various races upon themselves show clearly how important are first class proteins (meat, milk), vitamins, and mineral salts (green vegetables)."

If a little more milk, and perhaps a little more meat, eggs, or fish are added to the diet of the growing child or the adult who works, or plays hard (doesn't sit at a desk all day) it might be all that is needed to give the optimum diet (best diet for the individual).

TYRONE POWER TO WED ANNABELLA

Hollywood, April — (AP) — Handsome Tyrone Power, whose studio wanted to keep him one of Hollywood's most eligible bachelors, may wed the glamorous French actress, Annabella, next weekend.

Exhibiting embarrassment which bordered on stage fright, the two motion picture favorites filed notice of intention to wed a few minutes before the marriage licence bureau closed yesterday. Under California's three-day law, the ceremony can take place Friday.

Power, whose father and grandfather carried the same name, Tyrone to stage triumphs in the United States and Ireland, had been urged by his studio (20th Century-Fox) not to marry, being told that such a step might reduce the interest of feminine moviegoers, who have established him in the heart-throb class as a challenger to such notables as Clark Gable and Robert Taylor.

His answer was his appearance at the licence bureau, where both he and his beautiful blond bride-to-be signed the application with shaky hands and he tendered the clerk $4, but got $2 back. He explained he thought the fee was $2 apiece, "like theatre tickets." He gave his age as 24. It will be his first marriage. Annabella, born Ann Carpentier in Paris, said she is 25. Wed in 1935 to Jean Murat, French actor, she was divorced last year.

Silver Tea Service, Gift of Aiken's Congregation to Miss Johnson

Mrs. Stanley Spafford and her daughter, Miss Ruth Spafford, were hostesses at a delightful tea on Tuesday afternoon at their home 2nd concession of Sidney arranged in honour of the approaching marriage of Miss Margaret Johnson of Sidney Parsonage.

Surprises were in store for Miss Johnson, the first one being a profusion of confetti falling upon her (that had previously rested quietly over the living-room door) and the next one as she entered the living-room to find the ladies of the Aiken's congregation assembled with Mrs. Lee Grills at the piano playing "Here Comes the Bride".

A pleasant hour was spent in social intercourse interspesed with piano music by Mrs. Grills and an appropriate solo by Mrs. Perry Hamilton.

Mrs. Everett Hubble read the following address and the silver tea service was presented by Mrs. Fred Moon.

Dear Margaret—

This informal gathering has been planned with two purposes in view. We wish to extend our very best good wishes for your happiness and prosperity in the new life upon which you are soon to enter.

Then too, we are glad of the opportunity to express our pleasure in having known you.

This last year when you have been at home has made it possible for us to enjoy a closer acquaintance and to appreciate better your charming and unassuming personality.

We thank you too, for the willingness and winsomeness with which you have used your gift of song to enrich our various gatherings.

It is our hope, that you will long remember this gathering and your friends of the Aiken's Church. With this thought in mind we ask you to accept this silver tea service as a pledge of our friendship for and goodwill towards, you and yours.

As you leave us to make a new home of your own, we wish that the best of happiness, of honc and of fortune may always keep with you.

Signed on behalf of Aiken's congregation, April 18, 1939.

Spring flowers adorned the living-room and the tea-table where the Presidents of the Woman's Missionary Society, Mrs. Thos. Irwin, and the Woman's Association, Mrs. Fred Westover presided. A cleverly dressed miniature bride graced the centre of the tea table.

Miss Grace Joy, who is a guest of Miss Ruth Spafford at the conclusion of their term at Kemptville Agricultural College, Miss June Aikens and Mrs. Chas. McKenzie of Belleville, assisted in serving the delectable lunch that had been provided by Mrs. Spafford, assisted by Mrs. Fred Moon and Mrs. Lee Grills.

Popular Rawdon Couple Showered

Stirling, (Special)—Well over one hundred friends gathered in the Orange Hall at Wellman's Corners on Monday evening, April 17., for a surprise party and shower given in honour of Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Rowe. Rev. James E. Beckel acted as master of ceremonies and introduced the various numbers which made a most interesting and entertaining program. Among those who assisted were Gerald Clancy, Dorothy Hinds, Carl Johnson, Betty Hulin, Mrs. Watson and James Watson, Charles Carter, Arthur Duncan of Stirling, was also present to lead in community singing and some humorous stories and songs. The greetings of the district were expressed to the honoured couple in short addresses by C. Clancy, Roy Walker, G. Watson, and George Pollard of Stirling, District Cheese Instructor. Midway through the program the honoured couple were called to the stage where after the reading of two addresses they were presented with a handsome studio couch and smoking stand. Both Mr. and Mrs. Rowe expressed their gratitude for the kindly gesture and also for the lovely gifts presented. Lunch was served by the ladies and the evening closed with the singing of the National Anthem. The address was read by Lorne Wilson and the presentation made by the young people of the district in a group. The occasion also marked the birthday of the groom who is the successful and popular cheesemaker of Plum Grove Cheese Factory.

The Addresses

Happy Birthday to You

Not very often do two such important occasions fall on the same date. It is indeed an added pleasure to have this opportunity to wish you many happy returns of today and to hope that you may have increasing happiness through many more.

Please accept this little gift token as a birthday remembrance. And just to insure this, may we present you Mrs. Rowe, as Captain of the ship with a brand new paddle for use on such occasions.

Signed Wellman's Folk.

In addition to the aforementioned gifts presented to Mr. and Mrs. Rowe there was displayed a large birthday cake gaily decorated with candles.

Dear Viola and Delbert

Happy shower gatherings are occasions for delight
We have all looked forward to our meeting here tonight.
We were glad to hear that Delbert had joined the married race
We know he's very happy by the smile upon his face.
For three years you've been with us just six days of the week
But on the seventh you went away an attraction for to seek.
Now we fully understand and don't blame you a mite,
Viola we do welcome you, we know you've chosen right.
As yet you are a stranger to most of Wellman's folks
We hope you'll soon be one of even sharing all the jokes
We're so glad of this new home begun in Wellman's town
You'll find us all true neighbours as among us you settle down.
We give you both our wishes true for a future ever bright
We hope your sorrows will be few and clouds keep out of sight.
Our gift is but a token, of the esteem we hold for you
Every wish not spoken is carried with it to you

Signed on behalf of the community —Robert Wallace, Clifford Sharpe, Wilfred Sine, Charles Dunham.

GILEAD W.M.S.

The April meeting was held at the home of Mrs. O. Bertrand on the 12th. Mrs. J. Huffman read the Scripture lesson and also gave a very fine explanation on the Easter lesson. A letter was received stating the allocation, which is considerably higher than former years. The supply secretary asked for two quilts from the auxiliary. Mrs. Pitt gave an Easter reading. Mrs. Clare read a poem, "Just Another Day". Little Miss Georgina Huffman a raeding "A Living Jesus". Mrs. Balcanquel a solo "Near to the heart of God" and also a reading "An Easter Bunny". Mrs. J. Huffman closed with prayer and Mrs. Bertrand served lunch. Attendance 14; collection $1.35.

On Sunday evening, 16th., a meeting was held in the church. Mrs. Ralph Sills gave an excellent report of the Presbyterial held in Picton in February.

Owing to adverse weather conditions our women were unable to attend that convention and Mrs. Sills brought it before us very efficiently in her address.

Following this an Easter pageant was put on by the school children assisted by some of the young people. Much credit is due the school teacher, Miss Sweetnam, for the very fine way they were trained.

The Easter thankoffering was taken and amounted to $7.50.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Gold-Digging Fiancees

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm engaged to a very lovely girl who says she loves me and I'm devoted to her. However, she thinks that I ought to spend most of my salary on taking her out. I've given her an expensive diamond ring, and now she wants more money to be spent on her. She likes going to night-clubs and that runs into money. If we keep on, I do not see how we can ever marry, do you?

James R.

I think you would do well to consider seriously and delay this marriage until you know your fiancee a little better. A girl who allows a man to spend most of his salary on good times is thoughtless or ignorant and greedy. Such a girl would never make a good wife, and it's possible that she isn't even interested in marriage, but only what she can gain from a man's devotion.

Why don't you tell her your income and try to get her to help you make out a budget, including what should be set aside toward the expenses of a future home? I think she will either meet this suggestion reasonably, or break the engagement, thus releasing you.

Maintenance of One's Mother-in-Law

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Can a son be compelled legally to support his mother-in-law? It happens to be my own problem and my mother-in-law and I do not get along well together. If I must support her, it would mean giving her an allowance, as we cannot live under the same roof. My salary is $49.00 a week, but I am under heavy expense incurred by constant doctor's bills owing to my wife's ill health.

I feel that my mother-in-law is not a blood relation and as I cannot afford to make a definite allowance to keep her, I would like to know the legal side of it. Please remember I did not marry her. For my wife's sake, I should like to support her mother, but I cannot afford to keep up two homes.

Constant Reader

I've never heard of a law which compels a man to be responsible for his wife's mother's maintenance. There is, however, a sentiment not well to disregard, and if this lady, who you say is unwelcome in your home, is sent to a charitable institution, probably you would be subjected to criticism, first of all from your mother-in-law's blood relative——your wife.

What Price Cynic?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Perhaps it was because my mother and father were divorced that I seem to have been a born cynic. Mother worked and did her best for me, her health failed and she died. I spent a wretched childhood going from grandmother to aunts and to cousins. They saw me through high school, business college, and then I had to root for myself.

I used to make love to girls and then drop them. I actually enjoyed seeing them cry. I had lots of girls and some of them were mighty good to me, but I never cared for any of them. Then fate threw a hand grenade in my direction and I fell deeply and ecstatically in love with a girl who just laughed at me. She knew about my affairs with other girls and called me "Phil", short for philanderer. The deeper I fell in love with her, the more fun she got out of it.

She's a fine girl, straight, clean, wholesome. I'd give anything if she would only let me be her sweetheart, but she won't hear of it. Her latest name for me is "St. Elmo". What does she mean by that?

Reformed Cynic

St. Elmo was a novel over which our grandmothers shed enough tears to float a battleship. Like you he was a cynic who broke young ladies' hearts, going around the world and breaking a few in each port. When he came home and discovering that a girl named Edna was so lacking in curiosity that she didn't open a certain little cabinet, the key of which he has entrusted to her, he began falling in love with her which seems priggish to modern standards.

But in the end St. Elmo got his Edna. And perhaps after this young lady, of whom you write me, has finished paying off the score of all these other girls you turned down, she may consent to accept your serious attentions.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

That "Twenty Guests at Your Party" Quiz Starts Discussion of "What is an Ideal Guest?"

Mr. Louis Sobel, famous columnist, started us all making lists, either on paper or in our minds, when he proposed this stimulating question to his readers: "If you knew every one in the world, and could invite any one you liked, what twenty persons would you ask for a party?"

Naturally in a list of this kind, the names of the proposed guests would have to be those of famous people. We may or may not agree with the personnel of the list, or with at least some of the members of it. But what Mr. Sobol's quiz has stimulated, is I judge from the violent pros and cons about the list that I hear, some very definite thinking on that important question "What are the qualities that make a person most desirable as a guest?"

What are some of these qualities of the ideal guest?

Fundamentally, the simple virtues that make a pleasant person go to make the pleasant guest. In our list of friends, there are certain people whom we would like to invite to every party we give. They are natural, delightful—eager to co-operate with people and circumstances. They always do their share, not expecting the hostess or host to have them constantly in mind; they have a sure sense of social responsibility.

One of the most valuable of human qualities, one of the most engaging is adaptability. This pleasure-giving quality makes for an outstanding successful guest. The adaptable guest is a good mixer, blending easily with people, forgetting himself in his interest in other people, always ready for anything—or nothing. Very valuable he is to a hostess, for is always considerate of others around him.

An ideal guest is a good conversationalist. Everything is grist to his conversation mill . . . current events, magazines, books, movies, dramas, sports. He can always be depended on to keep the conversational ball rolling, whether serious discussion is in order or the facile use of small talk. He is quick to pick up some idea or hint dropped by another person, gives it a new twist, and toss the conversation ball back to the sender or to another person. He doesn't want to do all the talking. He doesn't hold forth on his own interests only, he isn't opinionated, doesn't know all the answers.

Along with the art of being a good conversationalist, is the art of being a good listener. Give us grace to listen well should be the prayer of everyone of us who strives to be a perfect guest.

In short, the ideal guest has good manners. And the test of this is, "whoever makes the fewest persons uneasy is the best bred in the company".

Manners of the Moment

When two people who have heard of each other for a long time, are introduced, they usually shake hands. This is a cordial way of indicating their special pleasure in the meeting at long last.

Standard Butter Cake with Icing or Sauce
Coffee or Tea

THIS CAKE recipe may be used as the foundation of a number of different cakes. It is a basic recipe.

Standard Butter Cake—Required are one-fourth cup butter, one cup sugar, one-half cup milk, two eggs, one-eighth teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon flavoring one and one-half cups pastry flour sifted before measuring. Cream butter until soft, then gradually work in sugar. Separate yolks from whites of eggs, beat whites until stiff and yolks until thick and creamy, add beaten yolks to creamed butter and sugar. Sift dry ingredients together, and add to mixture alternately with milk, then add flavoring. Beat together for one or two minutes, then fold in stiffly-beaten egg whites and pour into greased pan which was prepared before the cake making was commenced. If you bake the mixture in a loaf, better use greased paper; if as cup cakes, greasing the tins will be enough. Light oven five minutes before the cake will be ready to bake. For thermometer at 350 degrees F.; if baking the loaf cake set the oven in layers or cup cakes, at 375.

An Adventure In Lands Of Shadows

Punch Loves April Showers

"Isn't it a lovely thing?"

By MAX TRELL

"YES," Mr. Punch was saying to Knarf and Hanid, the shadow-children with the turned-about names, "it's very pleasant to think that in a very little while we shall be having showers. I love April showers."

"Why, Mr. Punch?" Hanid asked.

"I like April showers, too," Knarf broke in. "I like them because they don't last long and the sun always comes out after them."

Mr. Punch smiled. "Well, those are two of the reasons why I like April showers. But there is a third reason. It's the best reason of all."

"I know what it is!" Knarf exclaimed. Then he added: "April showers bring May flowers."

A Lovely Thing

"That's right," said Mr. Punch, nodding his head. "And isn't it a lovely thing? The April showers fall and water the ground. They water the ground everywhere: the fields and the meadows, the hill-tops and hill-sides, the woods and the gardens and even the tiny little cracks in the rocks where a bit of dirt has fallen. And then the May flowers spring up, the violets and the apple blossoms and the lilacs. How beautiful it all is! I can hardly wait for it to happen." He sighed.

"You won't have long to wait, Mr. Punch," Hanid said.

"No, my dear. I won't have long to wait at all. I shall be patient never you fear. And when the May flowers come, you will find me walking among them, picking a bouquet for Judy."

He Can Talk—

"But Mr. Punch—" Knarf started to say. "It's very well to talk about walking but you—"

At that moment Hanid took her brother by the arm and said quickly: "Come Knarf, it's getting very late. We must go and see whether the children need us. Good-by, Mr. Punch, I'm sure you'll be very happy when May comes and you can pick a bouquet of flowers for Judy."

"Oh, thank you. I know I shall", he answered. He smiled quite contentedly as the two shadows slipped out of the playroom.

As soon as they were outside the door, Hanid turned to Knarf. "You were about to tell Mr. Punch that he isn't able to walk by himself. But you shouldn't remind him of that, Knarf. It would spoil all his fun of thinking about the flowers."

And Knarf was glad he hadn't said it.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

IT LOOKS LIKE a colorful season, for the entirely dark dress is hard to find. A useful frock is a two-piece model with skirt of royal blue woollen and a fitted, slide-fastened top. Gold thread embroideries outline a simulated yoke. Belt is of blue leather with yellow enamel buckle.

At least one flower toque seems necessary to the comprehensive hat wardrobe. A neat little affair as long from front to back, and narrow. It is fashioned of light and dark bunches of heliotrope surrounded by shiny green leaves, and is veiled with light heliotrope.

Out of the season is one of those soft, very wearable dresses that always look right. It is of black crepe de chine with the fullness falling in front gathers. Fine embroidery of tiny white china beads and white crepe pipings mark the high rounded neckline, the slit pockets on the skirt and the tight cuffs of the long full sleeves and the shoulders.

Our choice for the suit of the week is a frock of sheer wool in pale cyclamen, its full skirt set off by a trig jacket of dark cyclamen tweed.

Still on top of the smartest heads is the brimmed hat of felt. A colorful model is of chartreuse green with dark green edge and emerald green felt appliqued all round in zig-zag pattern.

Hot Bath Will Quiet Tired Nerves

DOROTHY DEARING

Bathe regularly for health and beauty

By HELEN FOLLETT

MRS. HURRY has had a rush day. One date after another and a lot of shopping crammed into the schedule. She tears into the house dog-tired, can't lift a finger, life is bitter and the world out of gear. She looks into the mirror and is so discouraged at what she sees there that she makes faces at herself. But Mrs. Hurry is wise, so she decides she'll have a hot bath, pull herself together, be herself again.

There's something cheerful in the song of the water as it flows out of the faucet. It's restful. She fills the tub top-full, gets in and relaxes. What better beauty treatment can she find? Howling nerves are hushed. Her head stops aching. Muscles untie themselves.

Not only for the sake of cleanliness should one have a daily bath but because of the refreshment it brings to body and soul. The skin is an eliminating organ, sends out waste substances. It can't function properly unless the surface is cleared of dead skin scales and debris left by the sweat glands. The demon bather has a good complexion. She scours with a heavy brush, sends the blood streams dashing hither and yon. Be a bathing beauty and lessen the number of your pulchritude worries.

Before giving yourself a shampoo, brush the hair vigorously. Take it strand by strand, holding each lock up and away from the head. Groom the other way of the parting, swish the hair up from the back.

Spread out fingers and thumbs, give the scalp a brisk mauling. Lift the flesh, roll it, dig in your thumbs.

Have the soap melted; it is more easily rinsed away if it has been standing for several days. If tresses are oily, add a salt-spoonful of borax. Rinse before applying the suds which should foam up in a rich and crackling mass. Have three soapings, as many rinsings.

LIVELY ARGUMENT

Lively Argument

Lively argument on the status of Mackenzie and Papineau, leaders of the 1837 rebellion, ensued last night during a five-hour budget address by former Premier George S. Henry (Cons. York East). The issue was whether they were just "plain rebels" or the "men who struck the first blow for liberty in Canada."

It arose when Mr. Henry criticized Highways Minister McQuesten for expenditure of public funds on an arch at the entrance to Queen Victoria Park at Niagara Falls, on which the names of the 1837 rebels and those who fought them are engraved. The arch, in memory of Niagara district pioneers, was dedicated by Prime Minister Mackenzie King last summer.

Before the debate ended, Premier Hepburn commended William Lyon Mackenzie, leader of the Upper Canada rebellion, and criticized his grandson, Mr. Mackenzie King, saying:

"I only wish the present Prime Minister of Canada possessed to a small degree some of the qualities which I attribute to his illustrious ancestor."

Mr. Henry contended it was a "disgrace" to put the names of United Empire Loyalists on the arch beside the names of the 1837 rebels. The memorial should not have been placed at the entrance to Queen Victoria Park nor should it have Mackenzie's name associated with the names of those who fought against him.

Mr. Henry also observed that close together on the arch were the names of Mr. Hepburn and Mr. Mackenzie King.

"That's the closest we've been together in three years," interjected Mr. Hepburn. "I'm not happy in having my name engraved on a tombstone."

Fought For Right

Premier Hepburn declared he came from a section of the Province where live descendants of men hanged for their part in the 1837 rebellion. These men had fought for the right to elect their own representatives to parliament and to control the disbursements of their own taxation.

The family of Thomas Edison, "the greatest inventor the world has ever known," was driven from Canada by the torch of 1837. It was a shame that Edison had not been born in Canada, said the Premier.

"I am delighted to hear the Premier express these sentiments," said Conservative leader George Drew. "It was not so long ago the Premier was equally loud in praise of Mackenzie's grandson." It was here the Premier said it was to be wished the grandson had the qualities of his grandsire.

Mr. Henry declared there was no objection to the raising of a memorial to Mackenzie. It could quite properly be done. But it should not be at the entrance to Queen Victoria Park, nor should it have Mackenzie's name associated with the names of those who fought him.

It was Aurelien Belanger (Lib. Prescott), who described the 1837 rebels as the fathers of responsible government in Canada and the pioneers of liberty.

Reductions Criticized

Mr. Henry criticized the reduction in university grants, declaring the universities to be the keystones of Ontario's education system. He condemned the government for reducing grants to the University of Toronto, Queen's University and the University of Western Ontario.

It ill-became a Premier to boast of cutting university grants, said Mr. Henry. In them were trained the secondary school teachers who in turn played a large part in training the primary school teachers.

Development of Ontario's mining industry had been greatly accelerated by Queen's mining graduates and thus the whole wealth of the Province had been increased.

University of Western Ontario at London filled a real need for a higher educational system in the western part of Ontario. The province had an obligation to aid Western and Queen's.

The province had aided McMaster University, Hamilton, in purchasing at a generous price the property McMaster formerly owned in Toronto.

Should the province starve research work at University of Toronto—work such as Sir Frederick Banting had done? asked Mr. Henry. This university was ranked the world over for the benefits to mankind ensuing from its research departments.

There might be some justification for increasing fees to extra-provincial students, said Mr. Henry, though he wouldn't favor excluding bright students from any other jurisdiction.

Wouldn't Hit Well-to-do

Increase in university fees wouldn't hit the well-to-do, said Mr. Henry. It would affect many rural students. It was not a fact in any case that university students came mostly from well-to-do families.

Mr. Henry tangled with Premier Hepburn on the question of whether there had been a reduction in the absolute total of the province's debt charges.

In 1933, the last year in which the Conservatives had complete charge of administration, debt charges were $16,600,000, said Mr. Henry. In 1936 the first full year of Liberal administration they had risen to $21,000,000 and in 1938, because of refunding operations, were down to $19,600,000.

There was a deliberate attempt to mislead the public in the oft-repeated government statement that in 1934, the year in which the Conservatives went out of office, debt charges took 47 cents of every dollar revenue, and now took only 26 or 24 cents, said Mr. Henry.

Premier Hepburn said that under any proper system of bookkeeping, debt charges in 1934—and Conservatives were responsible for them—would have shown as $21,282,000. They had never been so high since.

TAKE 5 p2Manp

Defended Administration

Ordinary revenues which in 1933 were $51,000,000 rose in 1938 to $86,000,000 and the government was budgeting for $103,500,000 in the present year, said Mr. Henry. No more was heard from the Liberal benches about debt reduction.

Mr. Henry defended the issuance by his administration of bonds payable in Canada, New York or London. There had been provision for conversion of the bonds to lower interest rates. The Ontario Hydro had benefited even after the present government came in by this conversion right.

Premier Hepburn said that T. Stewart Lyon, then Chairman of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, had notified bondholders six months in advance of intention to convert an issue but had not provided for the new financing of it. The Premier at that time threatened to dismiss Mr. Lyon.

It was wrong to exercise the option without the approval of the government, said Mr. Henry, but Mr. Lyon's action proved his point that convertible bonds could be retired when the market became more favorable.

In 1933, said Mr. Henry, Agriculture Department estimates had taken 3.3 per cent of total provincial revenues. In the fiscal year ended March 31 last they had taken only 2.2 per cent. and yet the government posed as the friends of agriculture.

One of the reasons why expenditures were less, interjected the Premier, was that the entire staff of the Agricultural Development Board had been transferred to the Treasury Department when it was decided to make no more farm loans and to liquidate the present ones.

Made to Stock Broker

Reference to a loan of $7,000 on an island off Prince Edward County, mentioned by Premier Hepburn in his budget address, was made by Mr. Henry who said the loan was a proper one under conditions existing at the time it was made.

The Premier called for the file on the loan and told the House the $7,000 loan was made to a man named Lamb, a Toronto stock broker who had his summer home in the island.

Angus Dickson (Lib. Perth) said never before had a government done so much for the farmers as had the Hepburn administration. Many costs had been taken off the municipal taxpayers. Hydro service had been made cheaper for rural users.

Perth had no debenture debt. It had paid its way, and its people appreciated the pay-as-you-go policy of the provincial government. Mr. Dickson's home township, Elma, had only $89 taxes on the 1938 roll uncollected. The adjoining township collected 100 per cent.

Governments had been generous to the universities, said Mr. Dickson. It was all very well to talk of the poor boys going to university, but there were thousands of young people who would like their own farms or businesses and the government didn't help them.

Too Much Education?

Mr. Dickson wondered if too much education wasn't at the root of many of Canada's troubles today. Character was built by work and those who worked hardest for education would do themselves the most good and benefit the country most.

T. A. Blakelock (Lib. Halton) commended the elimination by the present government of the fee system for magistrates and urged that the fee system now be eliminated in respect to Crown Attorneys. The reform was long overdue.

Standardization of relief schedules as between urban and rural municipalities, was urged by Mr. Blakelock. He said the provincial government was quite justified in refusing to subsidize Toronto's duplicate sewage disposal system. There was no reason why purely municipal projects in Toronto should be aided by the provincial treasury.

There were five or six hotels in Toronto in which most unsavory conditions prevailed, said Mr. Blakelock. He had visited them to verify reports that had reached him and subsequently had given their names to the Liquor Control Board which now was making an effort to clean up the situation.

ATTEND "PREVIEW" OF BALLOON BARRAGE

FRIENDLIER VIEW SHOWN BY RUSSIA

Editorial in Moscow Paper Aproves Anti- Aggression Bloc Steps

Moscow, April 20 (AP)—Indications of a more benevolent attitude in Moscow toward British and French foreign policy were seen today in the editorial of a high-placed journal.

Le Journal De Moscou, a French language publication which frequently reflects the attitude of the Foreign Office, even conceded that recent moves by Great Britain and France to form an anti-aggression bloc were steps in the right direction.

The editorial aroused particular interest among foreign observers because it contained the first kind words published in Moscow about Prime Minister Chamberlain and Premier Daladier since long before last September's crisis over Czecho-Slovakia.

As one diplomat put it, "Moscow has apparently quit throwing stale eggs at Chamberlain and has begun tossing bouquets instead. But she has not yet taken off her coat and jumped into the arena."

Scene is Clarifying

Others pointed out that this editorial, coming yesterday after four days of extreme reserve in the Soviet press, certainly looked more like British-Soviet cooperation than anything seen here for months. The next few days, it was believed, might clarify the situation further.

What Le Journal de Moscou said was this:—

"The recent speech of the British Prime Minister and the declaration of the French Government also constitute a step forward for clarification of a problem which agitates all peaceful people."

(On Thursday Chamberlain announced pledges of protection to Rumania and Greece.)

"The policy of several states is evolving in a direction corresponding to the interests of peace.

"The U.S.S.R., powerful and peaceful, always has worked for consolidation of peace. She always has pronounced herself for a clear and precise position on the most important international problems."

The publication said all states of east and southeastern Europe, as well as of the near east, were "directly threatened with armed attack."

Painful Piles

Can be Quickly Relieved

If you think there is no way to relieve the misery of piles it's because you don't know of HEM-ROID, an internal medicine, from a prescription written by Dr. Leonhardt, a western physician.

The real cause of piles is on the inside—bad circulation of blood in the lower bowel, with the tiny rectal veins full of stagnant, impure blood.

Dr. Leonhardt decided the way to relieve piles was internally, with a medicine which would ease the congestion of blood in the veins of the lower bowel and help to heal and restore the sore, tender spots. After many tests he wrote the prescription which has been so successful in giving quick relief from pile misery, it is now offered to you with our promise that you may have your money back if you are not completely satisfied after using one bottle.

No matter what kind of piles you have or how long you have had them, HEM-ROID must show you the quick, clean way to get rid of your pile misery or your money will be given back to you. J. S. McKeown or any other druggist can supply you with HEM-ROID and will back up this promise.

AT THE BELLE

"IDIOT'S DELIGHT"

Norma Shearer and Clark Gable demonstrate their remarkable versatility in "Idiot's Delight", which is now on the Belle screen.

Miss Shearer, whose most recent roles starred her in "Marie Antoinette" and "Romeo and Juliet", now becomes an obscure acrobatic performer with a cheap vaudeville troupe. Gable, the hero of "Too Hot to Handle' and "Test Pilot", is a devil-may-care hoofer on the midwest circuit, who meets her in Omaha, where they fall in love. The emotion, at first blush, appears to be about as deep as the grease paint on their faces, but it turns out to be the real thing.

"Idiot's Delight" won the Pulitzer prize as a stage play, with Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt in the roles now played by Miss Shearer and Gable. Robert Sherwood, the author, wrote the screen play and took adroit advantage of the greater range afforded by the screen. On the stage that delightful Omaha adventure was established only in retrospective dialogue. In the picture, we joint the troupe at Omaha and observe the technique of the hoofer and the girl in the trapeze act. The story begins where it really began in the mind of the author and this is as it should be.

After the Omaha meeting, the girl and the hoofer part to follow divergent routes. They meet again in Europe. In the interval, she has acquired a munitions maker as an "angel" and poses as a countess. The hoofer is still doing his stuff according to the program. He recognizes her instantly. They renew old acquaintance and each of them knows, without admitting it, that the light love which was born in Omaha has never died.

War closes down over Europe. They are trapped in a border town as enemy planes dive from the clouds, dropping bombs. A shell crashes into the building where they have taken refuge. They are singing in each other's arms, aware at last that nothing really matters beyond their love. The audience is left with the deep conviction that somehow the hoofer gets her out of the debris and they go on together in a partner act to become great stars.

The supporting cast is one of the best seen in films. Edward Arnold is the suave munitions dealer. Charles Coburn has the role of a scientist. Joseph Schildkraut portrays the commander at the frontier post when war breaks out. Burgess Meredith is convincing as the idealist in the group of travelers who are caught in the conflict.

The distinguished direction of Clarence Brown makes itself felt throughout the picture. "Idiot's Delight" will charm millions as a picture where it delighted thousands as a stage hit.

"Streamlined Swing", an entertaining Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer miniature and "The Miracle of Salt Lake," a historical novelty precede the feature attraction.

AT THE McCARTHY

"TRADE WINDS"

Night, the air laden with the chill of death; a girl, wanted for murder, sits nervously in her roadster on the front end of a San Francisco ferry; a police car is driven onto the boat, and two officers alight to peer into every car; without a moment's hesitation, the girl drives crazily into the water—and the darkness; the swirling fog silently covers the splash.

This is one of the first thrilling scenes in "Trade Winds", Walter Wanger's adventure romance now on the screen at the McCarthy Theatre, with Fredric March and Joan Bennett in the starring roles. The girl who seizes this daring chance to escape is Miss Bennett herself. A few days later the San Francisco police are notified that she has pawned a ring in Honolulu.

Thus begins a chase that extends half way around the world, with March, debonair private detective with an inordinate fondness for beautiful girls, in close pursuit of the fugitive. Another exciting romance is contributed by Ralph Bellamy and Ann Sothern, who also do their sleuthing on the run.

Clever "Circus" Featurette

Preceding "Trade Winds" the program presents an ideal family treat in the form of screen "Circus Acts" presented by some of the foremost entertainers of the sawdust ring who are to tour the country during the summer of 1939. See this attraction entitled "Circur Co-Ed." Also Popeye in a great cartoon entitled "Goonland" and another episode of "Flying G-Men" are more treats, everyone will enjoy.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, April 20—(CP)— The Toronto market today took a hopeful view of the day's tranquility in the axis countries and prices were marked up generally but buyers were not attracted in numbers. Only 181,000 shares traded in the first three hours. All indices were up at noon, the golds leading with a gain of 1 1-2 points in the index. Other groups firmed about half a point.

Nickel led the base metals, adding a point and Noranda, Waite-Amulet, Smelters and some of the cheaper issues were a bit firmer. Nearly all the secondary golds advanced 3 to 5 cents and Teck Hughes and MacLeod-Cockshutt added 10.

Industrials and western oils moved in small volume. Utilities, steels and senior oils were slightly stronger. Royalite, Home and Calgary-Edmonton posted gains.

Produce Generally Remains Unchanged

Toronto, April 20—With the exception of further slight improvement in graded eggs, prices remained at previous levels during yesterday's session of the Toronto open produce market, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Fresh receipts were not heavy on the egg market as Montreal was reported to be taking on supplies, but they were sufficient to meet the demand. Offerings were readily absorbed at steady to firm prices. Graded shipments strengthened 1-2c per dozen to close at 20 1-2c for grade A-large, 19 1-2c for medium, 18 1-2c for pullets and B's and 17 1-2c for C grades.

Unchanged prices ruled on an not overly active butter market. Buyers were interested in covering only their immediate requirements and receipts were inclined to move slowly with the light demand. Ontario creamery solids traded at 21c for No. 1 grades and 20 1-4c for 38 score.

Montreal Produce Quiet

Montreal, April 22 (CP)—Generally steady prices ruled through another quiet trading session on open produce markets here yesterday, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22 1-2 to 23 cents a pound and solids for 22 to 22 1-2.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 21 1-2 cents a dozen for A-large; 20 for A-medium, 19 for A-pullets; 19 1-2 for B-large, and 18 to 18 1-2 cents for C. Receipts, 2,805 cases.

Constable Captures Furtive Wanderer

He made his way quietly across the footbridge. It was past midnight, and Front Street traffic and pedestrians were gradually thinning out. At Front Street he looked furtively up and down the thoroughfare. A young couple came down the street laughing. He shrank back in the darkness huddling against the friendly security of the C.D.S. building until they had passed.

Slowly he made his way to the street again. His eyes suddenly lighted up. His sensitive ears picked up a similiar sound, the tread of heavy feet on the pavement. Fright seized him. His eyes flashed around for a safe hiding place. Then he dashed into the comparative safety of a store doorway. Again he shrank in a corner to avoid prying eyes. But he was too late. A firm hand grasped him by the body and jerked him unceremoniously back into the street.

Kicking and struggling, but uttering no sound, he threshed his body about in a futile effort to free himself.

But Constable William Evans, took a firmer hold of the young rabbit he had discovered huddled in the doorway and marched it triumphantly off to the police station.

MAY BUILD NEW WING AT COUNTY HOME

Advisability and possibility of the erection of a new wing adjoining the west end of the Hastings County Home was discussed today at a meeting of the County Council Advisory Board of the House of Refuge, under the chairmanship of Reeve William Linn of Marmora.

The committee visited the buildings and farm and will later bring in recommendations for approval at the June session of the County Council.

The new wing erected last year at the east end of the institution, and that serves as a dormitory and includes sun-rooms for women inmates has filled a long-felt want, the committee pointed out, in discussing the erection of the west-end addition. Nothing definite, however, was arrived at, at a late hour this morning.

Squirrel Routs Dog

A female black squirrel, fired with the furious daring and recklessness of maternal love, fought and put to rout a small fox terrior on George Street yesterday after the dog had attempted to molest one of three of her babies which trailed her across the lawn.

The unusual sight was reported by Charles Thompson, Dundas Street, who declared that the mother squirrel had been herding the three little ones across a lawn when the terrier gave chase. Shoving the kittens aside, the mother squirrel darted directly in the path of the dog, showing every indication of attacking with tooth and claw. The terrier, surprised by the ferocious attack of the mother squirrel was confused enough to allow all four to escape in some shrubbery.

First Survey For Hospital Made in 1930

Toronto, Apr. 20 (CP)—First survey respecting the possible location of a mental hospital near St. Thomas was made in 1930, four years before the government of Mitchell Hepburn was elected, Public Accounts Committee of the Ontario Legislature was told today.

George Williams, architect in the Department of Public Works, said that in 1930 the Ross report on Ontario's mental hospitals had foreshadowed the abandonment of the Ontario Hospital, London, and he shortly after the report was made, inspected the territory between London and Port Stanley, looking for a new site.

It was by Mr. Williams' advice the present government, before deciding to proceed with the construction of new mental hospitals in southern Ontario, had looked over two or three disused Toronto factory buildings with the idea that money might be saved by the conversion of these into hospitas for mild cases.

Decision was made against this policy however and in 1937 Mr. Williams resurveyed the London-St. Thomas area and then recommended the site on which the new hospital is located.

BAY LEVEL HIGH

Highest water level of the Bay of Quinte in several years is now registered on the water guage of the government dock. At the present time the steadily increasing level has covered the majority of shoals with a deceptive depth and created excellent cover for spawning pike which have already arrived in the bay marshes in heavy numbers.

A second letter from the Canadian National Railways received by council has corroborated this and stated that the matter of abandoning the spur had been deferred.

Vincent Reid Addresses Tire Dealers of District on Salesmanship

LOYALTY NEEDED

"It doesn't take brilliance, magic, trickery or even a college education to make a success of business, just sincerity plus a lot of intestinal fortitude and hard work," Mr. Vincent Reid, Toronto, General Manager of the General Tire Company of Canada, declared here last night.

Speaking to a large gathering of tire salesmen, distributors, service station owners, transport executives, garagemen and automobile dealers of Hastings and Prince Edward Counties, the dynamic thirty-five year old executive who "doesn't possess a college degree nor did I go to high school" told his listeners that money was not made by, "crap games, horse-racing or the stock market, but by conscientious labor, application to the job at hand, loyalty to your employer or company, and work."

In the deepest, darkest depths of the depression, some business was going on, he said. "There is a lot of business available today, but we are too busy wasting time. Why worry about Hitler, Mussolini or the war. It isn't here yet. It may come, who knows, but in the meantime we have to eat, so why waste time worrying over something that has not yet arrived.

There is no miracle in salesmanship, the speaker pointed out, but knowledge of your product, enthusiasm, the will to work, and above all confidence in the knowledge of the financial stability of your employers, will pave the way to success.

Company Made Progress in Lean Years

Proof of the success of hard work and initiative in the face of odds was evidenced in his own company, Mr. Reid said. Entering Canada unsung, unknown, and in the face of bitter opposition, in the unstable days of the depression, it had steadily progressed until sales last year amounted to upwards of twenty millions of dollars.

Business today, however, he asserted, especially the rubber business, was becoming partly demoralized, "because we are becoming too price-conscious." Large companies are more or less responsible for this tearing down of the price-structure because of their willingness to deal with roadside distributors who operate for a slim margin of profit.

Organizations should realize the important part every employee, no matter how humble, plays in the organization's business, Mr. Reid declared, adding that the smallest man employed can tear down the business structure built by its heads. "More can be accomplished by a small well-organized organization than a badly organized large one. You will find out that if they grow too fast they will finally topple over and fail.

Invariably one hears on every side that "business is terrible" yet our company did over 45 per cent more business for the first three months of the year than in the corresponding period of a year ago, he said.

Must Have Co-operation

Business, however is not run on theories alone. Everyone within the organization should put their collective shoulders to the wheel of progress, and only in this manner can any success be achieved.

"Yet no matter how bad business is, there is always business for someone if they have the will to get out and dig it up. My company has proved that," Mr. Reid declared. In closing he appealed to the distributors for their cooperation in working with Mr. J. B. Boyce, newly appointed distributor of General Tires for this district.

Mr. Boyce occupied the chair during the meeting and at the conclusion expressed the appreciation of the fine educational address given by the speaker.

A fine sound motion picture depicting the manufacture of tires, their use and abuse, and comparisons between good and faulty products was shown, following Mr. Reid's address. Refreshments were served in the basement of the Hotel Quinte where the function was held.

Robbers Enter Holland Warehouse

Robbers broke and entered the Holland warehouse, Pinnacle Street, last night and stole a 68 pound caddy of tea, valued at $40, city police were notified early today. The tea had been shipped to Frank Windsor, Belleville, wholesaler, and arrived at the warehouse late yesterday.

Entrance was gained by breaking a lock on the south side of the building and forcing a rear door. The caddy contained 34 two-pound tins of Ocean Blend tea. Although persons reside above the warehouse in an apartment, no disturbances were heard, police were informed upon investigations this morning. Only one caddy was stolen, six others being left behind by the robbers.

OBITUARY

HAROLD C. McKINNEY
(Formerly of Melrose)

Harold C. McKinney passed away suddenly at the family residence in Lachine, Quebec, on Friday, April 14th.

The late Mr. McKinney, who was in his 45th year, was born at Melrose, Tyendinaga Township, his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. John McKinney. Old friends in this district will regret to learn of his death.

The deceased commenced his career as florist in 1912 with the Montreal Floral Exchange of which he became general manager. He continued in that capacity until December, 1915 when he joined the Canadian Forces and went overseas with the 148th Battalion. He transferred to the Royal Flying Corps in Sept. 1917, obtained his commission as lieutenant and saw active service in France. He was invalided home in 1918.

Mr. McKinney remained with the Montreal Floral Exchange until 1929 when he started his own wholesale florist business known as H. C. McKinney Ltd. He was a member of the Montreal Florist and Gardeners' Club and the Canadian Order of Oddfellows.

The funeral took place on Monday afternoon April 17th, at 2 p.m. from the funeral chapel of Joseph C. Wray & Bro., 1234 Mountain Street, Montreal, Que., and was largely attended. Over two hundred floral pieces banked the chapel. Interment was made in Mount Royal cemetery.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Grace Boyd, and one daughter, Miss Jean, at home.

Possession of Old Gun Brings Victory to Khan

New Delhi, India, Apr. 20 (CP-Reuters)—The north-west frontier's one-gun war is over and the Khans who started it have signed a perpetual peace pact.

The Khan of Nowagai won the war, waged sporadically over the past five years. He obtained the only available gun in the region. His vanquished opponent was the Khan of Khar.

The gun—an ancient field piece—is owned by a neighboring chieftain, Badshah Gul. He has found it a useful bargaining weapon in his dealings with the quarrelsome Khans. In the war just ended the Khan of Nowagai persuaded the chieftain he needed the gun more than his rival.

The Khan of Khar's forces resisted stoutly in their hilltop fortress. But Nowagai finally compelled surrender when he borrowed reinforcements from Badshah Gul.

Peace was declared at a great tribal rally where, at the request of the gun-owning chieftain, the two Khans embraced and promised to to live in future "as brothers".

Floating Hatcheries To Aid Propagation Of Muskellunge Fry

Peterborough Fish and Game Association is sponsoring a novel attempt to restock the Kawartha Lakes with 'lunge. Floating fish hatcheries are to be built and placed in several lakes of the chain, for which permission has been obtained from the government. The floating hatcheries will be about seventeen feet in length, fifty-four inches wide, and three feet deep. They will be constructed of wood and have three sections, with eggs placed in each section. Wire netting will separate the divisions, but will not interfere with the free flow of water through the box which floats part way out of the water. The eggs will thus be given every chance to hatch because of the fact they are in their natural element under carefully supervised conditions.

In the past all 'lunge fry for the lakes have been shipped from the Belleville hatchery for distribution by the association, but the mortality of the fish has been reported exceedingly high.

N. Toronto Girl Found Wandering

Attempting to evade questioning when found wandering at large at 6.00 a.m. today, 13-year-old June Cumming, 59 Erskine Ave., North Toronto, led P.C. Taylor a merry chase along Front Street, Victoria Avenue and Pinnacle Street, before she was subsequently apprehended on Patterson Street early today.

Constable Taylor was patrolling the city in the police cruiser when he observed a lone girl wandering nonchalantly along Front Street. When the officer attempted to question her, however, the girl ran easterly on Victoria Ave., and had reached Patterson Street, by the time the police car was turned about.

At the police station the lass admitted she had run away from her North Toronto home. Later Sergeant Harman notified her parents of their daughter's whereabouts. The girl was detained at the police station until the arrival of her father this afternoon at which time she returned home.

TRANSPORTATION BY RAIL CHEAPEST

S. W. Fairweather of C.N.R. Testifies Before Senate Rail Committee

Ottawa, April 20—(CP)— Lack of understanding of the value of railways by the community in general was deplored by S. W. Fairweather, Chief of the Canadian National Railways Research Bureau, before the Senate Railway Committee today. People failed to appreciate what the railways meant until the roads had been lost to them.

The railways were still the cheapest means of transportation, Mr. Fairweather said. They would have to go to some lengths to accommodate themselves to changed conditions and to get a new concept of the services they had to perform in the light of scientific developments.

'Lean Traffic Lines'

Practically all of Mr. Fairweather's evidence today dealt with the "lean traffic lines" of the C.N.R. He began at the Maritime Provinces and cited individually those branches which did not pay their operating costs, those which paid operating costs but had a deficit on fixed charges and finally those that were profitable.

Of the 21,972 miles of road operated by the Canadian National Railways in 1137, 4,034 miles were profitable, 4,087 miles paid operating expenses but failed to earn sufficient to fully meet taxes and interest charges, and 13,851 miles were unprofitable, he said. The profitable lines had a surplus over operating expenses of $26,000,000 and a profit after taxes and interest charges of $9,000,000.

Colonization Line

The line from Garneau Junction, Que., to Nakina, Ont., was a colonization line, he said. It did not pay but was valuable in the light of potential development. It was 838 miles and lost $500,000 yearly in operation. The prospects of eventual profit were promising.

In Ontario the 60 mile line from Hawkesbury to Hardman, near Ottawa, was proposed for abandonment, but the transport commission turned the plan down, said Mr. Fairweather. The C.N.R. management had under consideration a re-application to the Board.

POLICE OBTAIN FULL CONFESSION

Baltimore, April 20—(AP)—Police Commissioner Robert Stanton announced today police had obtained a confession from a man held in the Baltimore torso murder.

The Commissioner said Inspector Stephen Nelson telephoned him the prisoner had given complete details of the killing of the woman, parts of whose body were found in the man's backyard and parts in various sewers.

Commissioner Stanton said he was informed that Aurelio Marco Tarquinio, 45, a steel worker and former tavern keeper, had made a full confession that he murdered Evelyn Rice, a barmaid who formerly worked for him.

The young woman's head and other portions of her body were unearthed in Tarquinio's backyard early today. Evelyn Rice lived at Tarquinio's home and had been missing since Thursday.

Sofia, Bulgaria, April 20—(AP)—Bulgaria has notified Rumania of claims to territory, it was reported in government circles today after a meeting of the parliamentary foreign affairs committee which was addressed by Premier M. G. Kiosseivanoff.

It was understood Bulgaria wanted a small fraction of Dobruja, Black Sea region which Bulgaria lost in the Balkan and Great Wars. It was reported reliably that Bulgaria has made no new agreements with any state.

Free City Danzig, April 20—(CP Havas)—Thirty-one members of former opposition parties in this Nazi-controlled city were arrested yesterday and charged with a "plot" to stage a coup today, Chancellor Hitler's 50 th birthday.

Nobody took the "plot" seriously and it was generally believed the arrests were made to guard against the possibility of any anti-Hitler manifestation during the birthday celebrations.

BRITAIN AWAITS

Sir Nevile's recall March 17 to report on Germany's absorption of Czecho-Slovakia was interpreted at the time as a diplomatic rebuff.

The admiralty professed not to know where it was and no reports had been received by Lloyds insurance underwriters of the German warships having been sighted by ships at sea or in the English Channel.

WILL CONFIRM SIX INMATES OF REFORMATORY

Guelph, April 20—A ceremony unique in the history of Ontario Reformatory will be performed Sunday when Right Rev. L. W. Broughall, Bishop of Niagara, will visit the institution to confirm six inmates.

The prisoners were prepared for confirmation by Rev. R. M. Field, rector of St. Patrick's Anglican Church, Guelph, and the bishop's visit to the reformatory was arranged to coincide with confirmation services marking the twenty-eight anniversary of the first service held in St. Patrick's.

Rain and Cold Weather Plays Havoc With Major Schedules

DOUBLEHEADERS LATER

Boston Had Smallest Opening Date Crowd in Its History

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

The silver lining slogan salesmen in all the major league cities might make a good thing of pointing out to baseball fans today that every game postponed now means a doubleheader some summer afternoon.

Fourteen of the first 19 games in baseball's centennial season were sabotaged by rain and cold and the fans really are the only persons concerned who won't suffer as a result because sooner or later they'll see these games.

But the clubs are not likely to recover all the money this week's rain has cost them. Ed Barrow, President of New York Yankees, estimated "the rain, so far, has cost us about $40,000. Of course we'll play off the games in doubleheaders, but when you lose an opening day game or a Sunday game, you never get that money back."

Ball players don't like doubleheaders—and even if they did, they are still itching to get started immediately so the fans have exclusive rights to whatever benefits accrue from the delay.

While the Tuesday tussle in which Detroit nailed down its opener against Chicago White Sox remains the only game yet played in the American League, the National has managed to squeeze in at least one game a day.

Small Opening Crowd

Yesterday in Boston the Bees and Philadelphia Phillies managed to struggle through the first of a doubleheader to the satisfaction of 11952 spectators, smallest opening day crowd in Boston's history.

The solo was as homey as baked beans and brown bread to Bostonians because it lasted 12 innings and favored the Bees 7-6. Out of 75 games played at home by Casey Stengel's merry men last year, 34 were decided by one run and 17 of the others by two runs.

There was some justification for hopes that the season would swing out today on a grand scale. Forecasts were generally fair for most sections. The lineup is still the same, as that which was left at the post reading weather reports yesterday. In the National League Cincinnati is at Chicago, New York at Brooklyn, St. Louis at Pittsburg and Philadelphia at Boston. In the American Cleveland at St. Louis, Chicago at Detroit, Washington at Philadelphia and Boston at New York.

FRITZ TO COMPETE

Montreal, April 20 (CP)— Bill Fritz of Queen's University, Canada's top-flight middle distance runner, will take part here Friday in an indoor track meet, it was announced yesterday. The speedster from Kingston, Ont., will run a special 500-yard event.

The meet, sponsored by the Province of Quebec Track and Field Association, has attracted nearly 400 entries.

ENGLAND'S HERO

There were less than two minutes to play in the international football match between England and Scotland in Glasgow when Tommy Lawton, ABOVE, Everton centre forward, scored the goal that gave England a 2-1 victory, their first over the Scots on the latter's grounds in many years. Lawton is the English first division's high scorer and one of the main reasons that Everton captured the league championship.

Handball

A revival of handball resulted in some thirty players having entered a tournament at the Y.M.C.A. for a spring league with the first round play being completed by April 22nd.

Keen play has been assured in the game with the introduction of a four-walled court, which was erected in the old boys' recreation room. Handball is one of the most strenuous games of individual effort played and demands much speed and durability. The spring tournament is of the handicap type of play.

The series is under the charge of H. "Red" Townsend, physical director of the "Y" and handicaps range from one to 14 points, which included such seeded players as Jake Goodman, Bob Pringle, Art Cole, Alphonse Black.

TROLLEY LEAGUE TEAMS TO PLAY WITH STRATFORD

All Accept Higher Rating Providing Stratford is Rated Senior B

SPRING MEETING

Fees Reduced and Umpires Will be Hired from Association

Ingersoll, Ont., April 20 (CP)—The turbulent waters of the Inter-County Baseball Association were smooth today.

The storm of protest which arose when the Ontario Baseball Association raised members of the "Trolley League" to the status of senior clubs, and therefore competitors of the strong Stratford Nationals, was calmed last night when all concerned agreed to adopt the proposal—with certain modifications.

Arguments for and against the higher classification by former intermediate teams occupied most of the Inter-County spring meeting. The "Trolley League" teams, Galt, Guelph, Preston, Kitchener, Waterloo, and Brantford and Woodstock agreed to step up one class to form a loop with Stratford, provided all but Stratford were designated as senior "B". Stratford, if it finished in first place, would go into senior "A" playdowns. If second, it would playoff with the leading team, the winner to go into the senior "A". If Stratford finished in neither of these slots, it would have no playoff chance.

A special recommendation was made in Preston's case. Should the team stand last, it will revert to the intermediate "A" section of the O.B.A.

Re-grouping of teams in Western Ontario was forced this year when several of last year's senior clubs, including London and Strathroy, entered the newly-formed Michigan-Ontario League, leaving Stratford without competition.

The Inter-County agreed to reduce its senior entry fees from $25 to $20. Umpire fees were slightly reduced and it was decided to again hire only members of the Inter-County Association as officials.

Efforts Made to Include 'Airmen' in Softball Loop

Invitation Will be Extended to Join Local Organization

OTHER BUSINESS

Efforts to include the R.C.A.F. into the Belleville Softball Association were brought forward at an emergency meeting of the association held last evening after it had been learned that the "Flyers" were interested in entering Belleville softball circles earlier this week. The association went on record to invite the "Airmen" into the local softball set-up and officials will interview them relative to the expansion of the local softball loop into a six teamed league.

The original five clubs composing the Belleville Softball Association voiced unanimous decisions regarding the admission of the "Flyers" into a local softball set-up, but reserved the right to qualify the new entry as being on an equal basis with the charter clubs now consisting the loop. The matter of inviting the Air Force into the Belleville loop, was eventually left in the hands of the league executive.

The matter of the league schedule was also left in the hands of the league executive, but it was stipulated that the league should commence operation during the week of May 21st. With daylight saving coming into effect earlier this season the softball mentors felt their games should not be called before 7.00 p.m., while the matter of renovating the local diamond was left in the hands of President Clem Bowler.

In the matter of the association trophy, the meeting went on record as unanimously being of the decision that the cup would be awarded to the club finishing in first position, providing, however, that the league play-offs were not completed. Arrangements to extend the league playoffs were subsequently brought forward by the league executive, thereby minimizing the league schedule and assuring a league champion.

The clubs now included in the association are Corby's A.C., Dracup's Tires, Aajmaa-Shell in the intermediate "A" series, the O.A.S.A., Point Anne in the intermediate "C" and the Belleville junior squad, with possibilities of including the Air Force.

Considerable discussion was heard relative to the matter of umpires with the following names being submitted by the clubs: J. Maracle, Don Thomas, H. Bawden, G. Anderson, Geo. Clapper, "Pop" Robinson, Al Ethier. Later the executive added the names of Barney Smith and "Chuck" Barnett and also reserved the right to add further names if deemed necessary.

HARNESS HORSES BACK FROM SOUTH

Goshen, N.Y., April 20 (AP)—This capital of the harness racing world is alive with the sights and sounds and associated with Grand Circuit equine talent as the vanguard of the stables which have been training in the south swing back to their home quarters.

More than 100 trotters and pacers will arrive at Historic and Goodtime tracks here before the week ends in charge of trainers Billy Dickerson, Harry Whitney, R. Parker, Harry Pownall and Fred Egan. Most of the horses, which have been trained at Orlando, Fla., and Aiken, S.C., since before Christmas will be worked over the mile track, while the rest will be stabled at the half-mile oval.

Prominent Hambletonian candidates will be among the invaders, with Nibble Hanover, owned by Dunbar W. Bostwick, and his sister, Mrs. Ogden Phipps, both of old Westbury, N.Y., leading in interest. Bagpiper, another highly-regarded three-year-old owned by E. Roland Harriman of New York, also is arriving soon to continue his workouts under the veteran Dickerson.

39 ARE ELIGIBLE FOR PREAKNESS

Ciencia, Winner of Santa Anita Derby, Only Filly Entered

Baltimore, Md., April 20 (AP)—The Maryland Jockey Club announced today 39 three-year-olds representing 27 stables were eligible for the 49th running of the historic $50,000 added Preakness Stakes at Pimlico May 13.

The list included all the top-flight three-year-olds now in training, many of them also candidates for the Kentucky Derby May 6.

Lone filly named was King Ranch's Ciencia, winner of the Santa Anita Derby. Only two fillies, Rhine Maiden, in 1915, and Nellie Morse, in 1924, have been Preakness victors.

Open Meeting Called to Elect Officers and Discuss Plans

With all but one of last year's roster available and at least four promising juniors ready to take their place in the higher ranks of balldom, the Belleville Baseball Club will hold its reorganization meeting at the Y.M.C.A. Friday evening. Players and interested citizens alike are urged to swell the gathering in a concerted effort to bring back to its former status in this city the game of baseball.

In 1938 the Belleville Club made a splendid showing in the Bay of Quinte League race, winning eight of 12 league games played and finishing in first position, only to lose out in the league play-offs to Napanee. The Belleville team was handicapped through the lack of grounds in the league play-offs, however. Club officers feel the Belleville team will be much stronger in 1939 with the addition of several of last year's Belleville Kiwanis juniors, Eastern Ontario champions.

For mound duty the Belleville team will have "Speedy" St. Louis, Lefty Weeks, Joe Kelleher and Bert Noakes, all proven hurlers who have seen service in the O.B.A. ranks. The only absentee from last year's intermediate lineup will be Bud Johnson, who will show his baseball wares in Northern Ontario this season. With Vince Guay, Bill McQuaid and Jarrell, three promising junior infielders available for duty, it is felt Johnson's position will be well taken care of.

Secretary Lorne McDougall today announced an open meeting of interested players and citizens to be held at the Y.M.C.A. on Friday night during which the annual election of officers will be held and the future of the club discussed in open forum.

INTERNATIONAL READY TO START

Southern Half of Loop Will Entertain Four Northern Clubs

New York, April 20 (AP)—Given a boost by a promotion campaign that outdoes even the Dodgers' Larry MacPhail, the International Baseball League gets a new season under way today—weather permitting—with the southern half of the circuit entertaining the four northern clubs.

Drum-beater in chief for the International Leaguers in general but his home team in particular is Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City. So well did the Hague organization click in disposing of tickets for the little Giants' opener with the Buffalo Bisons that late reports from city hall revealed 41,756 tickets had been disposed of "with more precincts to be heard from." And that for a park with a seating capacity of 35,000.

The overflow of loyal Hague and Jersey Giant rooters will be taken care of mainly by standing room in the ample centre field section of Roosevelt stadium.

Despite the Mayor's successful efforts to surpass last year's minor league attendance record of 32,000 also set at Jersey City's opener, there will be considerable attention devoted to the three other inaugurals—the debut of Newark Bears, champions the last two years, before a home crowd of 14,000 against Rochester; Montreal's game at Baltimore before an expected 8,500 customers, and Toronto's game at Syracuse, where 7,500 fans were counted on.

Between the Lines

Ken I. Colling

Why teen aged Canadian boys, who are at all sport-minded, don't concentrate their efforts on a future of baseball is sometimes hard to understand. Today there are more possibilities for a successful future in baseball than in any other profession we can think of at present. The major leagues are hungry for talent and Canadians are being recognized as big league timber by all baseball scouts. A decade ago a Canadian was a novelty in the major leagues, but at the time of writing no less than five Canadians are holding their own in the major leagues, four of whom played baseball in the O.B.A. within the last decade. There's Joe Krakaukas, formerly with Hamilton, now a starting hurler with the Washington Senators; Goody Rosen, of Toronto, now lead-off man for the Brooklyn "Daffiness Men"; Earl Cook, the Lemonville fireball artist, now hurling for the Cincinnati Reds, Jeff Heath, of Port Arthur, now with the Cleveland Indians and George Selkirk now starring with the world champion Yankees; and all of these lads learned their baseball in Ontario, with the exception of Selkirk.

The monied baseball moguls have at last discovered the baseball bonanza in Ontario and aside from those players already mentioned there are several Canadians gracing the uniforms of many minor league clubs. Professional baseball is big business and pays fabulous salaries to those, who have more than average diamond ability. For instance the Toronto Maple Leafs took six or eight Ontario boys on their spring training trip, all of whom showed promise and will be playing professional ball this summer at a good salary. "Babe" Marchildon, the Barrie pitcher taken south, is still with the Leafs, while Dick Fowler, the 18-year-old Toronto hurler has great promise. Johnnie Heaving swears Fowler is the best looking rookie he's seen in a decade and Heaving has been around. Then there's Lefty Colman of London, Art Calhoun, former Belleville moundsman George Slinn of Hamilton, Wilkinson of Windsor and several others, who are to be farmed out by the Leafs to minor league clubs for seasoning. Baseball offers a great future to any young boy who is willing to work.

As the late Tim Hurst once said relative to baseball—"The pay is good and you can't beat the hours, from three until five." With major league players being paid anywhere from ten to forty thousand dollars per season (only six months work, count it up) we know of no better remuneration in any kind of work, and baseball isn't all work, there is some play attached to it. To the average teen-aged boy, who has some ability and the average amount of intelligence the possibilities in professional baseball are unlimited, if the boy is willing to work and when we refer to work we mean practice daily with only one object in view—to become a major leaguer. The road is hard and has no place for those who chose the easy way but the possibilities are greater than in any other profession of this day and age.

Why can't the citizens of Belleville provide that chance for our own boys? Who knows there may be another Babe Ruth, Joe Krakaukas or Lou Gehrig here in Belleville if he was but given the opportunity to play baseball as a kid.

Rumours to the effect the Trenton R.C.A.F. is interested in placing a softball team into competition in the Belleville League prompted the local "mushballers" to go on record as being in favor of admitting the "Flyers" last night. According to information received there is a surplus of softball players at the Air Station. Of course the Air Force will continue to operate in the Trenton loop as in former years, while a second team may be included in the local set-up. Incidentally the softballers were informed last night they were to have a new score board, the Coleman Flats diamond is to be renovated (and not before time) and generally the softballers were informed last The suggestion of an advanced date for daylight saving met with the general approval of last night's conclave, as such a move will give the team managers a chance to whip their teams into shape before the starting gun is fired along about the 22nd of May. Another step forward was advanced when it was decided to shorten the league schedule and have a more elaborate play-off system.

Walter Young, the Verdun policeman who won the Boston marathon two years ago, ran a strong race again yesterday, but was third when 'Tarzan' Brown, a young unemployed Indian from Narragansett R.I., won the classic and broke all existing records. It is queer, but not infrequently we see some deserving and unemployed person romp home to win the Boston marathon, glory and subsequently a job

Inclement weather has taken a terrific toll on the major league opening days, when the moguls hope for capacity houses which will tide them over the cooler weather of latter April. For instance yesterday at Boston less than 2,000 saw the opener and the Red Sox come from behind to beat Connie Mack's kids. Yea man, the weatherman is giving the majors quite a going over this year.

Did You Know Johnnie Pomorski, former major league pitcher, will manage the Lachine, Que., team this summer?....Buddy O'Connor returned to the ranks of the Montreal Royals in a last minute effort to halt the Port Arthur Bearcats tonight. The intermediate "B" championship in the O.H.A. may be decided tonight at Galt when Acton and Woodstock meet, the former having won the first game of the final series. What, no hockey in May? We just heard that Eric McNeely, of Flyers puck fame, has been moved to the Ottawa R.C.A.F. base "Nick" has been after that move for a year....Earl Caldwell was selected to hurl for the Maple Leafs at Syracuse today.

TEN-YEAR PEACE

Mussolini opened his speech, responding to Mr. Roosevelt's appeal for a system of 10-year non-aggression guarantees by Italy and Germany to 31 nations to be followed by a disarmament and economic conference, on a note of quiet irony.

'Mobilization Without Arms'

He said the meeting he addressed, called to review the progress of preparations for the Italian world exposition, was "the first act of great mobilization."

"Let not," he continued, "the few, the many, the too many who beyond the frontier abandon themselves to hysteria become alarmed at the sound of this word. It refers to a civil pacific mobilization without arms."

Referring both to Mr. Roosevelt's message and to the press reaction which it inspired in many countries, Mussolini said:

"We do not allow ourselves to be impressed by newspaper campaigns, or convivial vociferations, or by messiah-like messages, because we have a tranquil mind and both the men and means of defending the peace of all, along with our own."

'Errors of Geography'.

He termed "absurd" the proposal for "reciprocal guarantees for 10 years which do not take into consideration the pyramidal errors of geography into which individuals have fallen who have only the most rudimentary knowledge of European affairs."

Alluding to Mr. Roosevelt's proposal for a conference on military and economic matters in which the United States would take part, Mussolini said:

"As for the expansive conference which has been proposed and in which the United States effectively would limit itself to its customary role of distance spectator, experience teaches us bitter lessons on this score and they are that the larger the number of conferees, the more certain it is of failure."

Duce Says Policy is Peace

"Whether or not any reply is sent to the well-known message," the Premier said he could not pass up the opportunity to reaffirm the Rome-Berlin axis' policy of peace.

He said it was time to "silence the mongers of panic, the anticipators of catastrophes, the professional fatalists, who often conceal with a great banner their fear and their insensate hatred of their defence of more or less inadmissible interests."

He said it was "absolutely unjustified and unjustifiable to try to place the totalitarian powers on the seat of the accused."

Rome Exposition in 1942

Referring to the plans for the Rome exposition three years hence, he remarked "if we were cherishing obscure, aggressive designs, we would not be dedicating ourselves as we are doing to a work of such vast proportions as that of organizing a world exposition, nor would we have invited other nations to take part in it. Many of these in accepting our invitation have shown that they share our idea concerning the development of events."

Mussolini addressed the forum as the Rome-Berlin axis struck back at the anti-aggression bloc sponsored by Great Britain and France with a campaign to win new allies.

After two days of official conversations, Hungary was numbered by Italians among the axis' adherents.

Poland, which has received pledges of aid from Britain and France in any future crisis involving its independence, figured in the conservations.

Consultations With Yugoslavs

The Hungarian diplomats, Premier Paul Teleky and Foreign Minister Stephen Csaky, central figures in the negotiations which were reported to have involved Hungary's territorial aspirations, prepared to leave for Berlin tonight to carry on their talks.

Italian consultations with Yugoslavia were to start Saturday, when foreign diplomats expected, an attempt would be made to arrange a non-aggression pact between Hungary and Yugoslavia.

(Diplomatic observers in Budapest said an effort was being made also to draw Yugoslavia into the anti-comintern pact. Newspapers in Hungary headlined "Hungarian-Yugoslav rapprochement" reports.)

SUSPECTED NAZI AGENT

Dr. Otto Ritter, (ABOVE), has been arrested by authorities of El Centro, Calif., and held for New Jersey and U.S. federal authorities. Charles D. Winter, Ritter's secretary, allegedly informed authorities that Ritter was in the U.S. to distribute $33,000,000 to Nazi agents. He was arrested as he attempted to cross into Mexico.

LORD TWEEDSMUIR

"The practical necessity for a representative to act in the King's behalf arises only because it is impossible for His Majesty to be in several places at one and the same time. This necessity, of course, does not arise when the King is present in person.

"While it is true that the King, should His Majesty so desire, might, while in Canada, undertake to assume all the royal functions of government to the extent he does while in the United Kingdom it will be obvious, that practically the nature and duration of the royal visit would preclude any attempt of the kind.

Won't Assume Many Burdens

"During the time the King is in Canada His Majesty will be travelling almost constantly. Apart from the performance of certain symbolic ceremonial royal acts, His Majesty could hardly be expected to assume the additional burden of carrying on the ordinary royal functions of government. Such functions, which always have to be carried on from day to day, will continue to be discharged during the period of the royal visit by the Governor-General. His Majesty will actually perform only such functions of government as may be deemed advisable.

"The King, as is known, has already graciously signified his intention of giving the royal assent to bills should parliament be in session whiel His Majesty is in Ottawa, or to prorogue parliament should the work of the session have been concluded at that time. On either of these state occasions the King will be exercising in Canada in relation to the parliament at Ottawa an authority and function identical with that which His Majesty would be exercising in relation to the parliament at Westminster were he in the United Kingdom."

Greeted by Ministers

When the King and Queen set foot on Canadian soil at Quebec May 15, His Majesty, as King of Canada, will be officially greeted by his own responsible ministers in Canada just as the same ministers greet the King's representative, the Governor-General, on his arrival in this country. From the moment he disembarks from H.M.S. Repulse, the King of Canada will act in respect to Canadian affairs upon the advice of his responsible Canadian ministers, the committee said.

As minister bearing the chief responsibility, Prime Minister Mackenzie King will accompany Their Majesties throughout the Canadian tour. It has also been arranged for various cabinet ministers to accompany the royal party on different parts of the tour.

"Accommodation is being provided on the royal train in order that as Their Majesties visit each province, the Prime Minister may be joined by one of his colleagues from that province," the committee said. "In Ontario and Quebec, each of which has several ministers, an appropriate division in this respect will be arranged."

To Thunder Salute

Guns will thunder a royal salute when Their Majesties disembark at Quebec to be greeted by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, his entire cabinet, and representatives of the Province of Quebec, including Premier Maurice Duplessis and Lieutenant Governor E. L. Patenaude. After a welcome by the province at the provincial legislature buildings, the King and Queen will be guests of the Dominion government at an official luncheon at the Chateau Frontenac.

The King will deliver his first speech on Canadian soil and his words will be broadcast throughout Canada and the United States. Present to hear their monarch will be the 90 members of the Canadian Privy Council, their wives, and other distinguished Canadians including the Justices of the Supreme Court of Canada and their wives, and representatives of the church, Quebec province and the Dominion government.

It will be the first time since confederation that all members of the Privy Council of Canada, except those who were members of the first cabinet, have been brought together for any purpose.

Quebec Province will entertain Their Majesties at dinner that evening and the next morning the royal train will leave for Three Rivers and Montreal en route to Ottawa, where the King and Queen will be the guests of Governor-General and Lady Tweedsmuir for four days before starting a tour of Ontario and Western Canada.

LESLIE BURGIN

Although Mr. Chamberlain refused to set up such a ministry only several weeks ago, two factors changed his mind:

1. The decision to increase the independence of Poland, Rumania and Greece;

2. The decision to increase the territorial army to more than twice its present size.

Supporters of a ministry of supply have claimed that it would have a deterrent effect on Italo-German aggression in Europe.

Mr. Chamberlain said the new ministry would have three functions:

1. The problem of expediting the supply of munitions for the army;

2. To administer certain stores which the war office at present supplies to other departments;

3. To find and store reserves of essential metals and raw materials for use in time of war.

Branches to be transferred from the war office to Dr. Burgin's ministry are responsible for research, design and experiment, production and inspection and for the royal ordinance factories.

It will also be Dr. Burgin's duty, the Prime Minister stressed, to secure priority for government over purely normal business.

Minister of Transport

As Minister of Transport Dr. Burgin was constantly in the public eye. He drove from London to Brighton on a fine day to test the congested traffic conditions for himself. To get a first-hand picture of the problems of the truck driver he drove 70 miles in a seven-ton transport truck. He made an air survey of the trunk roads of the country and travelled on the Grand Union Canal in a barge. He visited Germany to inspect the Reich's new motor highways.

Before his election to the House of Commons 10 years ago Dr. Burgin contested constituencies without success on five occasion. He is 51 and before entefing public life had a brilliant career in law. The thesis with which he won a doctorate later was published as a text book and he became director of legal studies of the law society, the organization which supervises legal education.

Dr. Burgin is a Liberal. In 1931 he became a supporter of the National government and the following year was made parliamentary secretary to the Board of Trade, a post he held until his appointment in 1937 to succeed Leslie Hore-Belisha as Minister of Transport.

Branches Transferred

Branches to be transferred from the war office to Dr. Burgin's ministry are responsible for research, design and experiment, production and inspection, and for the royal ordinance factories.

It will also be Dr. Burgin's duty, the Prime Minister stressed, to secure priority for government over purely normal business.

The government announcement on deep shelters means that distribution of steel huts for erection in backyards, commonly known as "Anderson dog kennels," will be expedited.

Shelters

Sir John said deep, or bomb proof, shelters for the whole civil population were impracticable. No grounds had been shown for departing from the policy of blast and splinter-proof protection already announced.

The government, he said, would accordingly make every effort to assure its being carried out as speedily as possible in the vulnerable areas. An attempt to provide bomb-proof shelters on any general scale would prove impossible in practice and would be a mistaken policy, Sir John added.

He conceded there was a case for providing heavily protected shelters for certain key points and certain vital services. Technical advice would be afforded as speedily as possible to industrialists and others regarding the form such shelters might take.

It was disclosed in official quarters that Sir Nevile Henderson will return to Berlin to resume his post as Ambassador to Germany late this month or early in May. The Ambassador was ordered to return to London to report after Germany seized Czecho-Slovakia and has been "on leave" ever since. His return to Berlin definitely will not take place until after Chancellor Hitler addresses the Reichstag April 28.

OHIO EXECUTES THREE SLAYERS

Father, Son and Gangster Pal Die for Murder of Two Officers

Columbus, O., April 20—(AP)—In 28 minutes the State of Ohio last night put to death a father, son and their gangster pal for the murder of two Springfield, O., peace officers.

In the order of their death, the killers were Harry Chapman, 37-year-old Chicagoan; Henry Dingledine, 29-year-old Springfield "Bad Boy"; and Henry's father, Harry, a white-haired man of 56.

They overmatched police machine guns with pistol fire when their robbery hideout at a lake resort was surrounded Sept. 3, 1937. Patrolman Martin Randolph and Deputy Sheriff Edward Furry were shot dead, as was one of the bandits, Robert Cornette. Chapman and young Dingledine were wounded.

At 8:03 p.m., Chapman stepped into the white-walled death cubicle. Sitting in the chair, he nervously referred to a notation in his hand.

"I am not a murderer," he said. "A robber—I admit that—but not a murderer.

Sticks to Story

"The Dingledines are going to follow me here. They will probably slander me and say I did it. But what I said on the witness stand was true: I don't know who did the killings."

He was pronounced dead at 8:13. Several witnesses had collapsed.

Within two minutes, the younger Dingledine sauntered into the room. With a gesture of bravado, he flipped aside a cigarette, called goodbye, and shook hands with two clergymen. One had baptized him and his father earlier.

In the chair, Henry commented: "I am sorry for the officers' wives and their loved ones. I hope they are happy; I hope things will go all right with them. Goodbye, good luck, and God bless you."

Dr. Kell pronounced him dead at 8:29.

Chewing a cigar stump, Harry Dingledine entered the chamber at 8:32 to be pronounced dead eight minutes later.

vidual independence of each other and expressed their desire not to be disturbed by any outsider."

In the same way, Korrespondens continued, the states of southeastern Europe now want to establish "an advantageous community" despite the attitude of "certain powers which on the basis of the old tradition could not abstain from meddling in affairs from which they are so far removed and in which they have no right of control whatsoever."

Rumanian legation sources said they were completely satisfied with the Berlin visit of Foreign Minister Grigore Gafencu. They said the negotiations had proceeded throughout along the lines of better cooperation among Danubian countries. They added that the German negotiators at no point tried to impose any conditions.

RUMANIAN FOREIGN MINISTER WELCOMED TO BERLIN

Foreign Minister Grigore Gafencu of Rumania, LEFT, was welcomed upon his arrival in Berlin, to attend Chancellor Hitler's birthday celebration, by Reich Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop. No doubt Gafencu will hold conversations with Hitler and Ribbentrop regarding Rumania's recent anti-aggression pact with England and France. Rumania already holds an economic pact with the Reich. Not looking for trouble, but ready if trouble comes, sleek, speedy cruisers of Britain's "Southampton" class steam to sea during recent manoeuvres. GERMANY

Spectators Wonder

Spectators wondered how much of the new equipment shown for the first time originated in Czecho-Slovakia, whose great arms works passed to German control with the dismemberment of the republic.

Much comment was occasioned by the fact that Papal Nuncio Cesare Orsenigo headed the diplomatic corps in the grandstand directly opposite Hitler's canopied reviewing stand. The Vatican's representative was seen to use his binoculars frequently.

It was a triumphant day in the life of the Great War corporal who became "Augmentor of the Reich". He was made an honorary citizen of Danzig Free City in a ceremony at the chancellery before the parade started.

Fuehrer Had Many Guests

So far as Danzig, part of Germany's war-lost territories, was concerned, that appeared to be the only development. There is a strong movement in the Nazi-dominated Free City for return to the Reich and there had been rumors Danzig might be a birthday present for the Fuehrer.

Hitler greeted scores of guests, including high party leaders and military figures. Emil Hacha, the last president of the republic of Czecho-Slovakia, arrived last night.

Two Britons, Major-General John Frederick Fuller, retired, author of several works on military affairs, and Lord Brocket, a lawyer, were guests of the Fuehrer. They said they were not an official delegation.

Red, white and black swastika flags draped buildings and streets. Banners proclaimed Hitler "The guardian of our peace" and bore the legend, "We thank our Fuehrer —fidelity in return for fidelity."

Picture in Every Window

Hitler's picture was in nearly every store window. On one building a portrait two stories high was displayed. Another popular decoration was a shield bearing the figure 50, for Fuehrer's 50 years.

Forty thousand soldiers started marching down the "Avenue of Splendor" about 11:25 a.m. (5:25 a.m. EST) while a mighty armada of 162 warplanes criss-crossed the sky above them.

The parade was five hours long. On either side were hundreds of thousands of spectators whose heils when Hitler stepped onto the reviewing stand were drowned out only by the roar of aerial squadrons overhead.

Troops in High Spirits

Soldiers, massed for the display of Germany's military might, seemed in high spirits. A slightly overcast sky and cold breeze made marching easy.

The German Official News Agency announced guests included representatives of Italy, Japan, Spain, Hungary, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Bulgaria, Denmark, Finland, Greece, Yugoslavia, Lithuania, The Netherlands, Norway, Rumania, Sweden, Siam, Slovakia and Turkey.

As column after column marched by Hilter in rows of 24, goosestepping with the minutest precision, the grandstands were roused to ecstasies of applause again and again.

After one regiment each of army, navy, and airforce men had passed, a new formation hitherto not in evidence at parades passed the reviewing stand. It was a battalion of Italian aviators in greenish uniforms.

Hitler himself looked straight ahead at most of the passing troops with his hand outstretched in the Nazi salute.

But in the case of parachute men he gazed after them long and approvingly, even when they had long passed him.

PATROLS PROBE QUESTION OF 'SUB'

'Utmost Vigilance' Taken to Learn if Submarine Entered Halifax Harbor

Halifax, Apr. 20 (CP)—Commander H. E. Reid, Officer Commanding H.M.C. Dockyard here, issued a statement today asking crews of all ships which entered Halifax harbor Tuesday night to report to officials at the naval base here.

Text of the statement reads:

"It is requested that any vessel inward bound which passed the Halifax pilot boat shortly after midnight, 18th-19th, will communicate with the naval authorities at H.M.C. Dockyard. The pilot boat was in the vicinity of Neverfail Shoal."

Utmost Vigilance.

Ottawa, Apr. 20 (CP)—"Utmost vigilance" is being exercised to establish whether a submarine was sighted in Halifax Harbor yesterday, Defence Minister Mackenzie said today. Patrols have been established but so far the Defence Department has received no confirmation of the report by Captain William Latter, a pilot, that the undersea craft entered the harbor.

Mr. Mackenzie gave no details of the patrol but the destroyers Skeena and Saguenay are at Halifax and could be used.

Statement Issued.

Mr. Mackenzie's statement follows:

Certain civilian mariners reported to the officers of the naval station at Halifax yesterday that they believe they had seen a submarine in the entrance to Halifax harbor.

The most thorough steps to ascertain whether or not this could be true, were immediately taken upon instructions issued from national defence headquarters, Ottawa.

Up to the present moment I am advised that no additional information to confirm the impression received by these gentlemen has been obtaineld.

Patrols have been established, and the utmost vigilance is being exercised.

Washington, Apr. 20 (CP)—United States navy spokesmen said today they had received no report on the sighting of an unidentified submarine in Halifax harbor.

They said they had no information that any United States submarine was in the vicinity of Halifax.

French Gov't Urged To Suppress Deputy's Criticisms

Paris, Apr. 20 (AP)—French leaders today urged the government to take steps to suppress what they considered anti-British activities of Joseph Rosse, a member of the French Chamber of Deputies who sometimes is called the "Little Fuehrer" of Alsace-Lorraine.

Henri de Derillis, a right wing member of the Chamber of Deputies led the attack by declaring articles by Rosse published in Alsace newspapers violently attacked Britain. He said the attacks were exploited by German and Italian propaganda systems at a time when the closest collaboration between France and Britain was vital to the interests of both democracies.

Captain Molly To Give Father A Vacation

Yarmouth, N.S., Apr. 20 (CP)—Armed with a master's papers pretty 23-year-old Molly Kool of Alma, N. B., daughter of a sea captain, is going to tell "the old man" to take a vacation. She will operate his ship, she told friends here, until a better job comes along.

Captain Kool, believed the second woman in the world to obtain papers for master of steamships, in coastal waters, attended a navigation school here for several weeks under Captain Charles Waterhouse of Halifax and Captain A. W. Hilton of Yarmouth.

The blue-eyed captain, who wears a regular seaman's [illegible], has been going to sea for five years. During the last two years she was mate on her father's barge operating out of St. Stephen, N.B.

Captain Molly said she was too busy for romance but admitted it might come some day. She said she would never allow marriage to interfere with her sea-going career.

FEAR AXIS POWERS MAY GRAB PORTUGAL

Fears are being felt that the axis powers will attempt to stage another coup by having General Franco's Falangists stage a revolt in Portugal and then unite the whole Iberian peninsula under the Spanish Nationalists government, which owes allegiance and Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini for the support they received from the dictators in their recently concluded civil war. Reports indicate that if this happens, Germany hopes to take over the Portuguese colonies in Africa and the East Indies. If Portugal appeals to England for assistance, the latter is pledged to throw its whole force on the side of Portugal. In the case of internal trouble, however, such an appeal might not be made, and then the position of Great Britain, who has large interests in Partugal, becomes more complicated.

The Boomerang Cure

By MARIE SAMPSON

Nero was a lamb in the pasture compared to George. Nero only tortured the body. George tried 'Phelia's soul. Oh, but he was a mean, despicable, "low down," tyrannous, kitchen bully.

Kitchen bully? Exactly.

Imagine a man who, once a week, regularly, showed his wife how to cook coffee—who scanned the household hints as avidly as woman running a boarding house, who officiated at the preparation of the Sunday dinner, and who did all this with the bland assurance that he was assisting his hard working partner.

The whole difficulty in effecting a cure was that he was so pleasant about it, and actually thought that 'Phelia was benefiting immeasurably by his aid.

THE BOOMERANG CURE .....

Things couldn't go on like this forever, so 'Phelia did what a million of her predecessors have done in trouble, and what the tearful young wives of the generations to come will do—she wrote to her mother and explained everything. That was a week ago.

'Phelia poured George his steaming cup of morning coffee. George pulled his eyes away from the knockdown in the fifth round long enough to doctor it with cream and sugar to suit his very particular taste. He brought it slowly and carefully to his lips, tasted it critically, looked out of the window, set the cup down and delivered the verdict.

"Coffee isn't quite up to scratch this morning, dear. I'll bet you forgot the egg again, didn't you?"

'Phelia turned away half smiling. There was a sudden movement in the kitchen, and George turned around to see 'Phelia's mother standing in the doorway.

"Why, good morning," he finally said, "I didn't think you'd be up and around this early." His mother-in-law frowned, and pointed at the coffee.

"George, what's the matter with the coffee? I've been making coffee for 40 years, for my father, my grandfather, my husband and my sons, and this is the first time that my coffee has ever been criticized."

She went over and carefully sipped the coffee.

"I can't understand it. It's just as good as it always is. Is your coffee all right, 'Phelia?"

'Phelia nodded. "Fine, Mother." George just then discovered that the Battling Barbarian had regained his feet and had rushed his opponent to the ropes.

On Saturday he invaded the kitchen again. 'Phelia's mother looked coldly up from a lump of pie dough she was kneading. 'Phelia was engrossed with a pile of apples. 'Phelia's mother was painfully blunt.

"Sorry, George, we're terribly busy, and can't be bothered with a man poking around where he shouldn't be. The magazine has just come. Why don't you read that until we get lunch?"

Sunday breakfast ran off as smoothly as a soft wind on a June day. Biscuits were a golden brown. The coffee was a heavenly brew. The griddle cakes would have tempted Diana from the chase. And so George said.

'Phelia's been telling me how at 10. Her mother delivered the farewell address.

"'Phelia's been telling me how you delight to mess around the kitchen getting Sunday dinner. 'Phelia's promised to show me the new park, so go to it. We'll be back in plenty of time for the feast."

George, having no other course, manfully went to it.

'Phelia and her mother were evidently hungry after the walk, so with very little talk they sat down to the feast that George had labored hours to prepare.

"George," 'Phelia's mother fixed George with an accusing look after she had tasted the roast—"what on earth have you done with this roast? It's got no more taste than a pillow slip. And the potatoes—I thought 'Phelia said you were a cook.

"It's lucky that these cranberries are red, or I'd think they were apricots that you had tried to broil." She tasted lightly of the rest of George's handiwork, then got up.

"As a cook, George, you're a fine mortar mixer," she said scathingly.

'Phelia pushed away her plate, untouched. She turned to her mother. "Mother what do you say if we go out to eat? I'm hungry."

George was obdurate, and so they left him cheerfully. He walked through into the dining room. No one there. But at the front door someone was just going out. He heard Ophelia's mother talking.

"Well, 'Phelia, he's been treated pretty badly, but I think you'll find that he's just about through with poking in the kitchen, and he'll appreciate what's cooked for him. That should have been his own mother's job—but—no matter, if he needs another dose of his own medicine just call on me. Good-by, dear, don't forget to come home over the holiday."

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking and thinking in his private chair and ma said, I've been walking around in a cloud all day, Willyum, now I have a small inkling of how famous actresses feel. Can you imagine me with a real line to say in a real play? she said.

Meaning the play the Dawters of Cleopattera are giving for their aniversity, and pop said, A line, I thought you said you had 2 lines.

I did, I had, but it's been cut down to one, but it's one of the most important lines in the play, ma said, and pop said, Well of course it's true that a single line often has a strength and suggestiveness all out of proportion to its length. Take for instants the famous line, women and children first. You haven't got that line by any chance, have you? he said.

Certainly not, the play has nothing to do with boats or ships, ma said, Here comes Mrs. Updyke now, she said, and pop said, Heh? Who?

That's my line, silly, ma said, I said it so naturelly you thought it was real, that's a great feather in my hat as an actress, she said, and pop said, By gollies that's right.

If we knew anybody named Updyke it would be different, but we dont, we never even heard of a Mrs. Updyke and still you didn't catch on, ma said, and pop said, I never even knew a Mr. Updyke, it's almost uncanny.

Here comes Mrs. Updyke now, ma said, and pop said, You cant catch me napping again, that's you line in the play.

Well of course, I'm just rehearsing it, I dont expect you to be fooled again, here comes Mrs. Updyke now, ma said, and pop said, What's that knock, can it be Jeffry Bogmire?

What knock, who? ma said, and pop said, That's the time you got caught yourself, I guess I'm not so bad as an actor myself. Well well, Pauncefoote Eyedropper as I live and breethe, he said.

The result being ma went in her own room to rehearse.

Lindbergh to Survey Research Facilities To Improve Aviation

Washington, April 19—(AP) — Ordered on temporary duty as an army officer, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh began today a survey of United States aviation research facilities to help improve the country's warplanes.

Piloting an army plane, he probably will visit the most important of about 30 aircraft research centres during the next two to four weeks. Afterward the noted aviator, a reserve officer since 1925, will make a confidential report to Major General Henry Arnold, Air Corps Chief.

War Secretary Woodring's unexpected decision to have Lindbergh make the survey came just as the army was starting to build up its Air Corps to 6,000 planes. Aviation experts recently told Congressional Committees that Germany was building better planes than the United States because of better research laboratories.

The active military role is new for the trans-Atlantic flier, although in his capacity as a reserve officer and a member of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics he has supplied information on aviation developments in Europe.

Colonel Lindbergh's pay, with allowances, will amount to about $600 a month.

Some officers viewed Lindbergh's survey as likely to dramatize an appeal to Congress by the National Advisory Council for Aeronautics for a new $10,000,000 aviation research station at Sunnyvale, Calif.

The House of Representatives rejected the proposal after its military committtee said the Sunnyvale station would needlessly duplicate Langley Field, Va., facilities. The Senate, however, approved an initial $4,000,000 outlay.

THE GOLDEN GIRL

STORY—FIVE ETC. Aoo

Parsons had not gone. He came in armed with photographs of a strange and romantic country with bewildering figures and prospectuses. Despite his burliness he had a persuasive tongue. Miss Endicott listened intently.

Midway in a letter to Sara. Gloria laid down her pen and looked out of the window at the shining bay and the sea beyond. It was just three days since she had come to this hotel by the sea. For the first time in her life Gloria was luxuriating.

The calm bay winked and twinkled at her as she sat chin in her hand reviewing the breathless excitement of those first few weeks. the delight of a softly rolling motor instead of a strap in a crowded car. the exquisite wonder of florists' shops, the joy of being able to do whatever she fancied and give whenever she pleased.

Then there had been the delicious whirl of buying clothes. things smart and beautiful that Gloria frankly loved and had never been able to possess. By dint of much coaxing she had persuaded Sara to let her replenish the meager wardrobe which Sara had taken to Beechwood and the result had been a transformed Miss Dalton. Even Miss Endicott, Sara wrote, had indicated a gracious approval.

For the rest, Gloria's plans hung in abeyance save that she had begun negotiations with Alan Chase. a rising young architect, to carry out her dream of an apartment house for girls, the "house of little homes" she called it to herself. that was to be so different from anything of its kind.

A sailboat, beating across the bay with graceful wing, brought a vagrant memory of Jack. Gloria sighed a little. Not for Jack Moreland, but for human companionship. Just friend, real friends. She folded the letter to Sara with considerable emphasis. She did not feel like finishing it now.

It was mid-afternoon, and all the parties for golf and motor and sailing trips had gone, leaving only the indolent and elderly scattered along the long veranda. Near the great semicircle of steps at the main entrance a motor had stopped and a party of four had gathered around a stately looking woman with white hair.

One of the men turned his head as Gloria appeared. It was Alan Chase. He excused himself and came forward. As he did so Gloria caught a quick stare from one of the women. Then Chase's well-tailored shoulders came between and shut out Gloria's view.

"How do you do, Miss Staunton I didn't know you were staying at the Bluffs."

"Only for the past few days."

"Then you will like it well enough to stay longer. Everybody does Have you a moment to spare? I should like you to meet my sister."

A moment later Gloria found herself talking to a dark graceful girl who was Amy Chase, and acknowledging an introduction to Mrs. Daimler, whose eyes were appraising, but not unkind. There was a youngish man whose name she did not catch, and the young woman who had stared at her. Mrs. Payne, Chase had called her. She was quite beautiful with indolently drooping eyes. A malicious amusement crept into them as Mrs. Daimler spoke.

"Are you staying with friends?"

"No, I am alone."

There was the briefest of silences, but somehow it stung. Then there was a polite murmur from Mrs. Daimler, and Chase came to the rescue with airy flippancy.

She was glad to take up Chase's flippant diversion. And because she was quite human and did not like to be disapproved of, there was a little hurt defiance behind the bright inclusive smile that she turned toward them.

"So glad to have met you." Her gracious little nod would have done credit to Mrs. Dick Payne at her best, but Frances Payne, with certain memories of a neatly dressed girl who was not precisely a servant nor yet a guest, looked curiously after this beautifully gowned young woman and decided to keep her own council, for a time at least. Aloud she merely said idly:

"Who is your charming friend, Alan?"

"It's Alan's latest client," said Amy Chase promptly. "He has been talking about her for days. Enormously rich and arranging to build a huge apartment hotel for working girls—quite luxurious, you know—and charge them ridiculously low rents."

"Very interesting," Mrs. Daimler looked after the slight figure in white. "But with all that money someone should tell her that she is entirely too young and pretty to travel alone."

A thoughtful look came over Frances Payne's face as the others talked of Miss Gloria Staunton who had recently come into an immense fortune, and who was quite alone. A definite and promising plan was forming in her alert mind.

"I have an inspiration!" she said vivaciously. "Why shouldn't I offer to be a kind of social companion to the pretty heiress?"

Mrs. Daimler raised a deprecating hand. "My dear, you are not in earnest!"

"Indeed I am." Mrs. Payne looked pensively away for a moment, and then raised her effective eyes in pretty appeal. "I haven't told you before, dear Mrs. Daimler, but until that wretched estate is settled I simply must do something. I don't know the least thing about business, but I could do this. I shall certainly make a try for it. Perhaps you can give me a reference, if I need one?"

Mrs. Daimler smiled. "I shall be glad to speak of you to Miss Staunton," she said.

CHAPTER XII

Gloria wanted to get away from the hotel, and she chose a road which with sweeping turns led into the seclusion of pine woods. She strolled along slowly. Daimler! That name was familiar. The Daimlers were friends of Miss Endicott. Bill Daimler was a chum and classmate of Jack's. She wondered with rueful amusement what the Daimlers would think if they knew that she was Miss Endicott's discharged secretary—and Jack Moreland's wife!

Then she came upon Jack around a bend in the road.

At first she did not recognize him. She merely saw a long low car drawn up at one side of the road and a man half under it. He turned his head slightly, apparently catching a glimpse of slim black pump approaching, and then sat up and stared at her.

"Speaking of angels unawares, where did you fly from?" he said. "I am staying at the Bluffs. I didn't know you were here."

He seemed to hesitate. "I'm merely passing through. I'll be hitting the road for Maine before long."

"Oh, you are touring?" She glanced again at the car. Barring the dust of travel it looked fresh from showroom or factory. "Is that a new car?"

"Yes, it's new." His lips twitched with an odd little smile as if challenging her disapproval, as he stood up and wiped his hands on a bit of cotton waste.

"Won't you sit down?" he asked politely. "My drawing room isn't very formal, but that log has possibilities."

He reached inside the car, brought out his coat and laid it over a huge log near the roadside. It was almost uncanny to be on such casually friendly terms with an unacknowledged husband, but she went over to the seat he had prepared, not to be outdone in cheerful indifference to the situation. He sat down beside her.

"So you are at the Bluffs. How do you like it?"

"Very much. Some of your friends are there, the Daimlers."

"They often come up for part of the season. You will like them."

"I've met only Mrs. Daimler. Mr. Chase introduced us only a little while ago."

"Alan?"

"Yes." She felt impelled to explain. "He has been drawing up some plans for me."

"I see. Lucky Alan, to be your architect! Are you going to build a Long Island mansion?"

"Indeed I am not!" she retorted with dignity. "I don't expect to remain here long anyway. I want to travel. After that, of course I shall want a house somewhere. Not a silly show place, but a home of my own." She hesitated. "I haven't decided where. California, perhaps."

"You might let me know when you decide to leave," he suggested. "I suppose your affairs are still in Carver's hands, but before the property passes to your control I'd better give you the right to buy and sell real estate."

"Thank you. I will speak about it to Mr. Carver."

Silence again lay between them. The awkwardness of a common knowledge seemed to have crippled speech for both. It was Jack who first spoke.

"Well, is it all that you thought?"

"You mean—the fortune?" Gloria hesitated over the word. It suddenly seemed so vulgar and pretentious.

"The whole thing." He flicked aside a tiny shower of ashes which had fallen on her parasol. "I mean life generally, what money brings, you know."

"Oh, yes, it has been great fun." Gloria gave him a quick sidewise look, half defiant. "Perhaps some day the novelty will wear off and I shall grow blase and bored, like some of the stout old ladies in limousines. But thus far it has been wonderful except for one thing."

"And that?"

"That, I suppose, cannot be helped." Gloria shrugged her shoulders impatiently. "But of course I cannot ever feel quite comfortable at accepting so much from you. It is more than simply giving me the use of your name, because if you wanted to marry anyone else tomorrow you would be tied by that secret marriage. It puts me under an intolerable sense of obligation. It is humiliating to accept so much without any willingness on your part to share—"

"I am sorry that you find it so unpleasant," he said coolly, "but I am afraid I cannot oblige you in this instance."

Gloria did not answer. She was angry at herself for referring to it at all, and vexed at his cool mastery of the situation. She turned away disdainfully.

His expression changed quickly, hardening a little. For a moment more he looked down at her, this adorably flushed disdainful creature who was his wife. A reckless light came into his eyes.

"Then if I must be paid for marrying you," he said deliberately, "I'll take my pay now—this way."

Before she knew what he was doing she was in his arms, his lips were against hers, swift, flaming and inescapable. For a clinging moment she was held in that vise-like grip. Then he raised his head and slowly released her.

"Oh—I hate you!" It was only a whisper, but her eyes blazed at him.

He bent his head in ironic acknowledgment, a new Jack, a Jack that she had never dreamed of before. He had whitened under his tan, but he was smiling strangely.

"That is to be expected, I presume. But at least it may free you from the annoying sense of obligation."

He bowed. It might have been acceptance or farewell, or both. He went over to the new car by the road, slid into the low seat and raised his hat. Gloria watched him again.

He was gone, a flash and a whirl of dust. Far down the road where the pine woods ended she heard the roar of the cutout as he took a hill at headlong speed.

Gloria went quickly back to the hotel. She did not want to meet anyone, she could not talk to anyone and at the thought of Jack anger and shame burned in her cheeks.

Halfway to the elevator she remembered a letter from Sara Dalton lying unread in her bag and she turned aside into one of the many secluded rooms that lined the main corridor. There was a veranda just beyond the windows, half closed in from the outer world, yet looking out at it through latticed arches. Low chairs and little tables were here and there and a waiter was threading his way through with a tray. She heard the tinkle of teacups, the murmur of voices, and then a girl's voice so near that it made her start.

"And, Mother it actually was Jack Moreland! In overalls and with the most dreadfully black hands!"

"Give you my word, Mother, it seemed to be the real thing." Bill Daimler was speaking now with the same careless well-bred ease that characterized Jack's tones. "The minute we drove into the garage old McGilvary gave one look at our bent mudguard and yelled. 'Hey, Jack!' And when Jack appeared around the corner of a big Rolls Royce, in jumpers and with a dirty face, Sophie nearly tumbled out of the car. We all fell on him at once and old Mac's eyes almost popped out of his head."

"It must be a bet." Alan Chase commented. "There's somebody back of it, Bill."

"A girl, probably. Anyway, he's working like a longshoreman and for real pay. I wouldn't believe him until he showed me a pile of pay envelopes. Unopened, too. Can you beat that! Then he told me to mind my business while he crawled under the car. I'll lay you five hundred to one it's a girl."

"Don't be silly!" Sophie Daimler crisply cut the argument short. "Jack is coming here tonight, and you can see him for yourself. Somebody up in Maine has bought a new car and Jack is taking it up for him. He promised he would come this way and stay overnight. He ought to be here now."

Somehow Gloria made her escape unseen and once in the shelter of her own room she dropped into the nearest chair, stunned and bewildered.

Jack Moreland whom she had despised as an idler was working in a public garage at common everyday toil which his aunt would consider the depth of humiliation. Jack working with his hands for wages! Why had he not told her? Was he angry because of the things she had said to him? Or—didn't her good opinion matter?

Sophie Daimler had said that Jack was on his way here. She put her hands up to cheeks that were suddenly hot. In her ears there came the distant roar of a racing motor as he had savagely put on speed, going north. Jack would not come to the Bluffs that night.

CHAPTER XIII

It was not until half an hour later that Gloria thought once more of Sara's neglected letter. She skimmed it rapidly, turned a page, turned back and reread a paragraph and went on more slowly.

"Something queer is happening; at least it looks so to me. Did a man named Parsons come to see Miss Endicott while you were here? I don't like him. I think he is selling her some kind of stock.

"One afternoon when Parsons was here I blundered into the room by mistake and old Miss Endicott was just coming from the inside room with some papers that looked exactly like bonds. The greedy look on Parsons' face made my skin crawl. She was annoyed because I came in—you know how she can be—and I got out as fast as I could, but it has been on my mind ever since. I would have told her nephew about it, but he hasn't been home for weeks. Of course I have no right to speak of it to him. but I'd risk it, and she might listen to him. Besides, if she sinks her money in wildcat investments there won't be much left for her nephew to inherit. Be sure to burn this."

Gloria had not spent six months at Beechwood without learning that Miss Endicott, with all her imperious wail, was a child in business matters. Who was Parsons? What if Miss Endicott's diminishing income had led her into some fantastic get-rich quick scheme? It was not difficult to find Sara's motive. Sara Dalton, close-mouthed and discreet, did not betray another's business idly. Sara wanted her to see Jack and warn him. But Jack was gone, speeding north even now. She had no idea at all where his destination lay. And how could she see him after today?

"I'll have to," she reflected hurriedly. "He ought to be back in New York by Thursday. I'll go there. I'll go to McGilvary's Garage!"

The telephone rang and she answered it. A woman's voice came over the wire, high-pitched and musical. "Is this Miss Staunton? This is Mrs. Payne. Won't you join our party at dinner this evening and go with us later to the Casino dance?

"Indeed I should love to." After all Gloria was young and lonely. She tried to keep her voice from betraying eagerness, but her eyes were shining.

"That will be delightful. We shall expect you then. Good-by."

Jack Moreland did not come to the Bluffs that night. Gloria found herself listening to a lively fire of comment from these friends of his who had counted on his coming.

"He should have reached here before we did, in that car," Bill Daimler said.

"That's why I think he must have met with an accident," his sister insisted.

In the midst of the discussion a telegram came from a town a hundred miles north.

That settled the matter of waiting and conjecture, and the party started for the Casino. But only Gloria knew that Jack had stayed away from the Bluffs and his friends because she was there.

The Casino was a clubhouse on the water front open only to members and their friends. Here Gloria sat looking out at a silvered sea with a throb of violins coming from the room back of her.

This evening she was a vision in a wonderful gown of green and silver. She had met a score of people whose eyes had plainly told her so. Bill Daimler, heir to a fortune counted in millions, had dubbed her the Sea Foam Girl, and had kept at her side with obvious devotion. They had just come away from the room of many lights and weaving figures and the sway and rhythm of the dance were still with her, lending a deepened glow to her cheeks and a dreaming light to her eyes.

Just beyond them sat Mrs. Payne with Alan Chase. Gloria gazed at her with a new interest. A few moments before they had started for the Casino Mrs. Daimler had managed to convey to Gloria, in the most casual way, that Mrs. Payne's husband had left his affairs in a deplorably tangled shape and that his widow was contemplating the possibility of acting as companion "to some young lady who has no mother nor married sister to introduce her properly. I thought at once of you. Of course Frances is very young, but it would be a charming arrangement for you both."

Taken by surprise Gloria had been warily noncommittal. The suggestion came back to her at odd times during the evening only to be pushed away again. Mrs. Payne, however charming, was a stranger, and Gloria wanted a friend, a real friend of her own choosing.

"It is an outrage," Bill Daimler was saying, "that you should have been in New York for three years without my meeting you. My lucky star usually treats me better than that."

"You didn't look in the right place." Gloria smiled to herself. The days of drudgery seemed so far away.

"I think, my dear," Mrs. Daimler announced, "that I shall return to the hotel. Amy will join us as soon as she finishes this dance."

"Then Alan and I will finish the dance also and come with you." Mrs. Payne's voice floated over to them musically. Her light gesture included them all as she turned away with Chase. Bill Daimler looked after them.

"Odd how inquisitive people are," he commented idly. "Old Whitney held me up in the lobby and asked me if Frances Payne was engaged to Alan Chase. Just because they came in the same party."

"Engaged? Pooh, they never will be!" Sophie brushed that aside with lively scorn. "But I could have choked you, Bill Daimler, for the things you said about Jack right before Frances Payne. I don't mean about his working in a garage, but about its being on account of some girl. Don't you remember how devoted Frances and Jack were before she married Dick? And everybody said she only took Dick because he got that wonderful diplomatic appointment and had a lot of money, while Jack was only a nice fellow with a comfortable income. And now Frances is back and a widow and Jack never goes near her. Amy is sure Frances cares for him yet—"

Bill Daimler held up his hands in good-natured surrender. "I give up. I never see the things you girls see." He turned back to Gloria in apologetic explanations. "Jack's the friend we were expecting tonight. He has a good income from a rich aunt and nothing to do but amuse himself. Now, out of a clear sky, we find him working in a garage—of all places."

For a hideous moment Gloria hesitated. Now was the time to say that she knew this young man, Jack Moreland. Yet she had been with these people all the evening, listening to their talk of him and their conjectures as to his absence. And there were other reasons leading back to that secret marriage which she must always conceal. Gloria was beginning to wonder if she could ever again stand upright and tell the whole truth.

BRITAIN'S KEY TO THE MEDITERRANEAN

Here is a map of Gibraltar, the two and a half mile area on the tip-end of Spain that commands the bottle-neck of the Mediterranean. It is Great Britain's key to the life-line with her empire. Today Gibraltar is the scene of feverish activity as the garrison prepares to defend the rock against possible attack by the Rome-Berlin axis powers. Men and munitions are reported concentrated on the Spanish border where the peninsula runs into the Spanish mainland, and German and Italian artillery is reported menacing Gibraltar from across the narrow strait. French warships moved into Gibraltar harbor to augment the British fighting ships already there. Meanwhile it was reported that a strong German naval force was enroute to the coast of Spain "for manoeuvres."

SHANNONVILLE W.A.

The monthly meeting of the W.A. of the United Church of Shannonville, met at the home of Mrs. (Rev.) Craig, on April 13th. A delicious pot luch dinner was enjoyed by over thirty. The hostess was assisted in serving by Miss Florence Terry, Miss Roberta Melborne and Mrs. Wallace Robertson. A lovely quilt was quilted for Mrs. Everett Stratton. In the afternoon a meeting was held in charge of the president, Mrs. Sam Elliott and Mrs. Harvey Shetler presiding at the piano. After singing the theme song all repeated the Lord's prayer in unison. Letters to the Editor

The Railroad Problem

Delray Beach, Florida, April 14
The Editor The Belleville Intelligencer:—

In a recent issue of your publication, Jamieson Bone in his letter made a challenge to other Canadians to at least make an effort to try and avert disaster to the Dominion. I herewith accept the challenge and take as my subject the ruinous "Railroad Sinkhole."

In the city of Belleville we have a very honest Citizen, a Citizen of fine character, a Citizen of integrity and of good business ability. A Citizen that has a large stake in the City. This man over the past number of years has realized the seriousness of the burden on the Tax Payer to keep the Canadian National R.R. operating. A deficit of more than $50,000,000 yearly and we do not get all the information from Ottawa about this cancer, which is eating the very vitals of the Dominion. This well intended and serious Citizen has spent his own money in the cause, had his slogan printed on match boxes, written many letters to the press, will only accept freight which is delivered to his place of business by the C.N.R. His slogan SHIP AND TRAVEL C.N.R. is boosted by him wherever he goes and to whoever he meets. This effort on the part of Mr. D. S. LaRue while it has done no harm has not been effectual. More drastic means must be taken to meet a drastic situation. There seems to be no man in Canada able, or if he is will not do it so I am offering herewith my solution. A solution that would solve the bitter problem in a short time a solution brought forward by the challenge in the recent letter printed in the Belleville Ontario Intelligencer, signed, Jimmy Bone, Mayor of the City of Belleville. Jimmy Bone who sees what is in the offing and who is not afraid to tell the world. In the opinion of the writer Canada needs a lot more men of this type at the present time, so we join the ranks, smoked out of our hole b ythe letter written by Jamieson Bone and printed recently in the Belleville Ontario Intelligencer.

(1) We would first borrow from the large Canadian banks, five Senior Officers of outstanding ability. To these five men would be given the necessary authority from the Government to proceed. They to choose a Chairman from their number. This complete authority delegated to these men, who would be perfectly capable of doing this job, men who are used to hard work with no shirking, men who could be entirely trusted, along with the present over-hauled staff of the Department of Railways would be sufficient to clean up the ruinous mess, Government control of the Canadian National Railways, along with other circumstances, has brought upon the Dominion of Canada. This first move would have the very desirable effect of a Non-PARTISAN lead.

(2) With the exception of the paying lines we would then at a close future date stop every wheel on every non-paying rail. We would then proceed to sell to the highest bidder all of this ruination, selling the unsold portion as scrap to the best advantage. Leave it to clever bank officials to make good recoveries.

(3) We are not overlooking the employees that might find themselves not needed. To each and every one of these employees we would give a pension, calculated from rate of present pay and length of service, a minimum pension of $25 monthly and a maximum pension of $100 monthly. These pensions to have a fair clause incorporated into them whereby they could be discontinued for any reason at the will of authority. This would be only a safeguard to both the pensioner and the Tax Payer, who foots the bill.

(4) The next thirty miles would be to call all of the C.N.R. bond holders together and say to them, firmly but kindly that it is highly necessary they should take a reduction in the interest which the face of the bond promises. This interest to be reduced in line with the present current rate 2 1-2 to 3 per cent. The Joker in these C.N.R. bonds is that both principal and interest is guaranteed by the Federal Government — the people—the Tax Payer.

We would then hew to the line without fear or favour, letting the chips fall as they may, knowing with great confidence the above solution is for the welfare of the nation.

Yours truly,
Arthur Jones.

RUSSIA DEMANDS FULL MILITARY SUPPORT

Probe of Succession Duty Collections Denied

Committee Told Law Provides For Secrecy in Matter

Macaulay Charges 'Certain Favored Friends' Were Allowed Information on Estates

OPEN TO PREMIER

Mr. Walters Told Members Premier Hepburn Had Access to Files on Succession Duty

Toronto, Apr. 21 (CP)—Efforts of Conservative members of the Public Accounts Committee of the Ontario Legislature to have the committee ask power to investigate Succession Duty collections was defeated in committee today by a vote of 22 to 8. There was a solid Liberal vote against it.

Chester Walters, Controller of Revenue, was called for examination on statements of gross revenue and expenditure for the fiscal year ended Mar. 31, 1938. Leopod Macaulay (Con. York South) sought to examine as to how the item of $30,214,183 succession duty collections was made up.

Conservative leader George Drew said certainly Premier Mitchell Hepburn had left the impression administrators of estates generally were engaged in defrauding the province and in certain cases no doubt had been eft as to whom he meant.

Provides For Secrecy.

Attorney General Conant said the law provided for secrecy in such matters. The fact it had been violated once was no reason for doing it again. Only the legislature could grant power to inquire into such matters.

The information the committee sought had been given "certain favored friends", said Mr. Macaulay.

Ocean temperatures! As spring advances ocean bathers look forward to the time of pleasant ocean temperature. Oceans are now cold; they are warmed almost entirely by radiations from the sun which penetrate to a considerable depth. These radiations are absorbed and turned into heat. In the summer months there will be in some seas a layer of very warm water floating over deeper colder water, while in the winter months there is a layer of cold water floating over warmer but denser water. As it takes a relatively large quantity of heat to raise the temperature of water, ocean bathing is delayed in the spring but prolonged in the fall.

DALADIER CALLS ON CABINET TO APPROVE DECREES

Tax Will be Raised in Order to Provide More Revenue

NEW MONEY ISSUED

Paris, April 21—(AP)—Premier Edouard Daladier called his cabinet to approve new financial measures for the nation's heavy armaments program today as the German fleet slipped down the French Atlantic coast toward Spain.

Finance Minister Paul Reynaud planned a broadcast telling of the new decrees and why new sacrifices were necessary to meet the dangers of Europe's congealing coalitions.

Informed quarters said President Albert Lebrun would put his signature to 80 decrees, among which would be a general tax on all payments of more than 100 francs ($2.64), probably at the rate of five francs per thousands. This tax would substitute for the present tax on production and would be expected to yield more revenue.

Another decree was expected to rearrange France's working hours in an effort to gain more production without raising industrial expenses.

To raise immediate funds the government was said to contemplate issuing national defence bonds similar to those circulated in the Great War period.

'INDESTRUCTIBLE FRIENDLY TIES' ARE REASSERTED

STRENGTH OF AXIS

Denial is Given to Story Hitler is Sending Out Questionnaire

Berlin, April 21 (AP)—Messages published today showed that Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini exchanged assurances on the Fuehrer's 50th birthday yesterday that the friendship between their two countries could not be disturbed by enemies of the Rome-Berlin axis.

They were disclosed while Hitler turned from his birthday festivities to the drafting of the Reichstag speech, with which he will reply one week from today to President Roosevelt's non-aggression proposals.

In a lengthy telegram, Premier Mussolini told his axis partner that the friendship between Rome and Berlin "which has withstood many tests cannot be disturbed by the recurring ridiculous attempts of our enemies."

"Some time they will have to convince themselves," Il Duce telegraphed, "that they are following a false course because Fascism and National Socialism are the way of justice and peace."

The Fuehrer thanked Mussolini and added: "With thanks I bring anew the assurances of my indestructible friendly ties with you and the Fascist Italy created by you as well as my best wishes."

Deny Hitler Queries Peoples

A government spokesman denied reports published in Paris and Warsaw that Hitler was asking certain of the 31 countries named in President Roosevelt's appeal whether they felt threatened by Germany.

These reports said that at least some of the nations listed by Mr.

2,692nd. Birthday Of Foundation of Rome Celebrated

Rome, April 21—(AP)— The modern Roman Empire, after watching Germany's elaborate birthday tribute to Chancellor Hitler, observed the 2692nd anniversary of the founding of its capital today and celebrated its new growth under Premier Mussolini.

Flushed by victories in Albania, Spain and Ethiopia, the Fascist descendants of the Caesars gave a martial tone to the national holiday which normally is a joint commemoration of their Labor Day and the birthday of Rome.

Columns of Fascist youth and Labor organizations paraded, flags were displayed and bands played in every Italian city.

The celebrations centred around Premier Mussolini's Palazzo Venezia. Within the palace the Premier distributed medals, pensions and prizes to laborers and farmers.

The celebration dated back to April 21, 753 B.C., when, according to tradition, Romulus staked out the beginnings of Rome on Palatine Hill.

Princess Elizabeth's 13th Birthday Marked by Tea Party at Castle

Windsor, England, April 21—(CP Cable)—The postman bore an extra heavy load to Windsor Castle today as Princess Elizabeth celebrated her 13th birthday. The Princess, heir presumptive to the throne, entered her 'teens and a new period of careful training for royal responsibilities.

To mark the event the Princess had a tea party at Windsor Castle with a private movie show afterwards. She is dining with the King and Queen tonight.

One birthday cake—made to Elizabeth's own order—bore 13 flickering candles. The girl who may some day be Queen of Britain, of Canada and all the Empire gayly blew out the candles and cut the first slice.

Cake Sent to Hospital

Her presents included a pearl from the King for his daughter's set and silk stockings from the Queen. The King also gave her a diamond bracelet while from Queen Mary, her grandmother, came a silver dressing set. The Duke and Duchess of Windsor sent a movie camera.

The Princess went riding in the sunshine in Windsor Great Park on her white pony, "Peggy" after seeing the ceremony of the changing of the guard at the castle.

Starting Formal Duties

As Princess Elizabeth grows up she is making more appearances in public and starting the routine of formal duties royalty has to perform.

She attended the luncheon given by the King and Queen for Colonel Joseph Beck, Poland's Foreign Minister, on his recent visit to London. It was the first time she had been present on such an occasion and for the first time, also, the court circular recorded her presence.

During the visit of the French

CAHAN SUGGESTS COURT REFERENCE TO END DEBATE

Federal Gov't. Should be Clothed with Responsibility Says Cahan

NO CRITICISM

Ottawa, April 21—(CP)—Persons who contend the Dominion should assume entire responsibility for unemployment ought to do their utmost to induce the provincial governments to agree to constitutional changes which would clothe the federal parliament with power to discharge that responsibility, in the opinion of Hon. C. H. Cahan (Con. St. Lawrence-St. George).

The veteran Montreal lawyer, who believes judgments of the judicial committee of the Privy Council have given an erroneous twist to the British North America Act, introduced the constitutional note into the debate on unemployment yesterday by suggesting a new constitutional reference to the courts.

Second Reading Given

Today the unemployment debate enters its seventh day. Labor Minister Rogers obtained second reading for the annual unemployment and farm relief bill last night but discussion continues in the committee stage.

Confusion over responsibility for unemployment was delaying effective action, said Mr. Cahan. Provincial and municipal authorities kept insisting that the federal government should assume the whole financial responsibility. Premiers Hepburn of Ontario and Duplessis of Quebec had taken this stand.

It was far from certain, however,

Girl Begins 10-Year Term

Says She Committed Crime Not to Interfere With 'Romance'

Paducah, Ky., Apr. 21 (AP)—An attractive blond woman, who declined to reveal her true identity or her home address, awaited today to begin serving "what I wanted"—a 10-year prison sentence for attempting to holdup two women with a toy pistol in a theatre.

The woman, listed as "Barbara Williams", 23, pleaded guilty to a charge of robbery without a deadly weapon in circuit court yesterday.

Later, in an interview, she said she came here for the express purpose of committing a crime and drawing a prison sentence so she might not interfere with the romance of a young couple in a "northern city".

She intimated she loved a man who loved another girl.

County Attorney John Kirksey said the woman admitted to police she gave a fictitious name.

LOWER INTEREST, DEBT CONVERSION IS SUGGESTED

Hon. Colin Campbell Winds Up Debate With Challenge

NOT REPUDIATION

Toronto, April 21—(CP)—Prorogation of the Ontario legislature moved a step nearer today with the conclusion of the budget debate. Indications were that the legislature may end the present session by the middle of next week.

Hon. Colin Campbell, Public Works Minister, wound up the debate last night with a challenge to the federal government to move immediately for the conversion to lower interest rates of Canada's public debt.

Conversion of debt, retention of the nation's gold production in Canada and the issuing of currency against it were suggested by Mr. Campbell as steps to restore prosperity in Canada.

Leopold Macaulay (Con. York South) asked what would happen if Ottawa failed to act on these suggestions.

"The best thing we can do in that case is to get a government that will do it," said Mr. Campbell.

The federal government was not acting with courage, said Mr. Campbell. Governments in Great Britain and Australia had the courage to convert their debts. But Canada wasn't even carrying the interest on her debt without borrowing. She was getting deeper into the morass.

'Mercy Deaths' Are Favored By Bernard Shaw

London, Apr. 21 (AP) — George Bernard Shaw said today he thought the human race should practise euthanasia—the putting to death painlessly of those suffering incurable diseases.

Mr. Shaw, who is 82, gave the following comment upon his election as vice-president of the Voluntary Euthanasia Legalization Society, which hopes to push a bill through parliament legalizing "mercy killings".

"After all, these are circumstances in which it is rather unreasonable to persist in living. Now that I am in my dotage I am coming around to the conclusion more and more but I hasten to add there is not the slightest hope for humankind that I shall practice Euthanasia myself. That may be a little inconsistent but I always like to be selfish."

NAVAL VESSELS OF CANADA SEARCH FOR SUBMARINE

Minesweepers Fundy and Gaspe Search Halifax Harbor

QUESTION SKIPPER

Report is Dissected in Senate Chamber by Members

Halifax, April 21—(CP)—Canadian naval vessels at this east coast base had orders from Ottawa today to search for a submarine reported to have entered Halifax harbor. Planes of the Royal Canadian Air Force stationed across the harbor from Halifax were ordered to cooperate in the search.

The minesweepers Fundy and Gaspe, based here, left the harbor last night but the destroyers Skeena and Saguenay remained at their moorings. Royal Canadian Mounted Police were busy checking reports about the submarine said to have been sighted at various points along the coast in the last week.

A veteran member of the pilot service, Captain William Latter, reported to naval authorities he had seen the undersea craft entering the port as he was guiding the pilot boat up the harbor early Wednesday. Operators at the Campherdown radio station near the harbor mouth said fishermen aboard the schooner Billie Bell had reported sighting a submarine heading seaward Wednesday shortly after midnight.

No Information

Meanwhile, officials were expected to investigate the possibility the craft seen by Captain Latter was not a submarine. Reports from Ottawa last night said the skipper of a small vessel would be questioned here today in an effort to determine whether it was his boat that was seen entering the harbor. Neither R.C.M.P. or naval officials would disclose the skipper's identity. Naval men also declined to give information on the movements of their vessels.

Authorities at H.M.C. dockyard here yesterday requested reports from all ships entering Halifax harbor Tuesday night.

First report of a submarine came from Captain Vernon Goodick last Friday when he told of seeing what he believed to be a submarine off the south shore town of Lockeport. The scene shifted to Cape Breton Tuesday when R.C.M.P. said they were investigating reports by fishermen of St. Peter's they had seen a low-lying object which might have been an unedrseas craft.

WRECKS CAR TO SAVE CAT

Kitchener, Ont., April 21—(CP)—Vic Walzer of Elmira today found himself wondering whether he had not been swayed to too great an extent yesterday by his humane tendencies.

When he swerved his car to avoid hitting a cat crossing the road near Elmira, the front left wheel of the machine locked and pulled the car into the ditch, where it struck a telephone pole and was badly smashed. The driver and William McLean of Elora, a passenger, escaped injury.

The cat and nine lives are still intact.

Rumania and Poland May Block Negotiations Towards Anti - Aggression Bloc

PROPOSAL STUDIED

Russia Wants Full Military Support as Joint German-Japanese Invasion is Feared

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, April 21—(CP Cable) — The Soviets have made definite proposals to Great Britain and France demanding their full military cooperation in return for joining an anti-aggression front, it was reported in official quarters today.

The Russian demands were reported to have London and Paris worried because neither country was prepared to go that far in collaboration with the Soviets. The western democracies take the view that a tripartite military alliance might throw Berlin into such a rage it might start a war instead of guarding against one.

Delivered to Ambassador

According to reports in diplomatic circles, Russia's counter-proposals to Anglo-French suggestions that the Soviets extend guarantees to countries fearing German and Italian aggression were delivered to Sir William Seeds, the British Ambassador in Moscow. They are being studied in London and Paris, and consultations on them between the British and French governments have already been held.

Even if Britain and France agreed to accept a three-way military pact, it was feared Rumania and Poland might refuse to have anything to do with it.

Early Associate of Charlie Chaplain Dies

London, April 21. — (AP)—Leo Dryden, 75, music hall star and composer of the 90s who claimed he taught Charles Chaplin how to walk, died today following a heart attack.

Dryden composed "The Miner's Dream of Home" which was sung around the world in the 90s. He said Chaplin's mother travelled in his theatrical troupee, singing choruses of his songs from the wings. Charles, then a baby, learned to toddle under his tutelage, he said.

NIAGARA ICE JAM RECALLED

Niagara Falls, Ont., Apr. 21 (CP)—One of the greatest ice jams in the history of the Niagara district choked the Niagara River thirty years ago today, causing damage of thousands of dollars to property along the river banks. At Lewiston the ice was piled 74 feet above the water level.

Union of French, English in Canada Demonstration of Loyalty—Baldwin

Toronto, April 21—(CP)— Earl Baldwin advocated last night the application "in a wider sphere" of the method of mutual cooperation employed by the British Empire in attempting solution of its problems and he saw no reason why it "should not be employed with success."

In the inaugural address of a series of three lectures at the University of Toronto, he pictured the reconciliation and union of French and English in Canada as a practical demonstration of tolerance and of the qualities of loyalty, sympathy and understanding "by which alone our Empire can be preserved."

Earl Baldwin said the union of the two racial groups served as an example to Europe that war or threat of war is not necessarily a law of nature. After centuries of strife, nations could seek—and find—peace.

Given Honorary Degree

Before delivering his opening lecture, the Earl was invested by Sir William Mulock, University Chancellor, with the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. President H. J. Cody termed Lord Baldwin an "outstanding figure" of the empire. Last night's address inaugurated a lectureship established last year in tribute to Sir Robert Falconer, a former university president.

Through the method of mutual cooperation employed by the Empire, Lord Baldwin said "we have been able to show that difficulties can be resolved by discussion where we are certain they could not be by force." It had been found the method could be applied to domestic needs as well as to those of wider imperial import.

"There is nothing of (English) complacency or self-righteousness in holding that such methods may be employed in a wider sphere and in failing to see why they should

STIRLING REPORTS AN ALBINO ROBIN

Belleville's albino robin, which for two seasons past has been regularly reported on the east hill as one of the first visitors of spring, has apparently moved its location to Stirling. This week the almost snow white bird was reported seen at the western limits of Stirling Village by Alex Judd. The unusual robin was feeding with two other birds on the lawn of his home.

BELLEVILLE - BANCROFT ROAD IN FAIR SHAPE

Roads through the county are gradually becoming fit for more extended week-end trips and main highways are now well cleared of ice and snow it is reported by local bus and truck drivers. At present the Belleville-Bancroft Road is in fair condition, except for a rough stretch between Madoc and Millbridge, according to Edgar Stapley, proprietor of the Bancroft-Belleville bus line.

Further north some difficulty may be experienced due to softness of the road. The section between Maynooth and Maple Leaf along the northern limits of the county is reported in none too favorable state, and considerable work will be necessary to put it in shape.

This season several deer have been sighted at times on the road in the vicinity of Millbridge during his daily trips, it is reported by Mr. Stapley.

46 MARCH BABIES BORN IN BELLEVILLE

A high birth record was established in the city during the month of March, a total of 46 of which 20 were boy babies, being registered at the city hall. Deaths on the other hand were in the lower register, only 35, of which 19 were male being registered. During the month seven marriage certificates were issued.

MOTORIST LEAVES NO DOUBT OF HIS LOYALTY

Nothing apparently is being left undone to ensure the loyalty and warmth of sincerity of Canadians in extending a welcome to Their Majesties, the King and Queen when they visit Canada in May.

On the plates were inscribed in individual letters spaced about an inch apart the word "W-e-l-c-o-m-e." Below was, 1939, King George VI. Queen Elizabeth. First Royal Canadian visit."

GET HURRIED CALL FOR CONFERENCE

An unexpected summons by the Hon. Eric Cross, Ontario Minister of Municipal Affairs received yesterday resulted in the departure for Queen's Park this morning of Mayor Jamieson Bone, Alderman Burton Jennings, chairman of the Regional Planning and Flood Committee of city council, and A. B. Collins, city solicitor. They will be joined in the office of the Ontario Minister at noon today by Mr. C. A. Cameron, K.C., M.P., where a full discussion of Belleville's flood control plans for the Moira River will be undertaken. Plans drawn by city engineer Chas. Mott will be submitted in the absence of Mr. Mott, who is recovering from a second attack of influenza.

STORES BEGIN TO SHOW MERCHANDISE WITH PATRIOTIC TREND

Pre-Royal visit decorations are gradually making an appearance in various stores of the city. Department stores on Front Street today featured imposing photographs of Their Majesties encircled by the gay colors of Union Jacks and the Canadian Ensign. Merchandise is likewise beginning to show a patriotic trend with pictures of the Royal Princesses playing a prominent part in the various decorative schemes.

DENTON MASSEY TO SPEAK TONIGHT

Known as one of Canada's outstanding public speakers, Mr. Denton Massey, M.P., Toronto Greenwood will address the annual banquet of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce at Bridge Street United Church Sunday School Auditorium tonight.

A splendid musical program has been arranged and a large crowd is anticipated at the affair.

There are at least a number of broadcasting programs being conducted lately that have not cluttered up the airwaves with strange noises and sounds. In fact they haven't been heard at all.

Farmers of the district, due to the lateness of the seeding season and apprehensive of the fact that fall grass seeding may have been killed out by the prolonged unfavorable weather, are resorting to the method used by their ancestors in re-seeding meadows and fields sown with alfalfa, alsike and other seeding last fall.

Striding up and down the muddy fields they are sowing the seed by hand, scattering it with a wide sweeping motion of the arms as they walk. In agricultural parlance this method is known as broadcasting.

Approximately seventy all ranks of the 34th Field Battery Royal Canadian Artillery will go to Kingston on May 21st to do guard duty during the Royal visit to that city on that date, it was announced last night.

Spring training of the unit is now well under way with a near-record number of recruits and veterans attending parades. Lieut. Dr. Ralph Bird is acting officer-commanding in the absence of Major J. W. McLeod.

DATE OF LOCAL PORT OPENING UNCERTAIN

Local oil and coal companies were not sure this week when the first of the water borne freights would be received at the local dock, though it was not expected that the first ships to enter would be registered until possibly the end of the present month.

Heavy ice still covers some of the canals, and gasoline carriers will not be able to enter inland ports until passage is cleared by a sudden thaw or by the use of icebreakers, it was stated by the local office of the British American Oil Company.

Coal companies were still awaiting the final break up of ice in the lower end of the bay and Narrows, it was reported by Wm. Jacks, superintendent of the Schuster Company. A collier has been scheduled for coal delivery at the local docks on April 18th., but ice conditions are still causing delay, it was reported.

MASSES OF ICE PILED ON SHORE

With the lower bay east of the bay bridge practically cleared of all ice to Massassaga Gap, except for a few shifting floes closer to shore, first breakup of the heavier ice west of the bridge occurred during the latter part of the week. Prevailing north-westerly winds this week have piled huge masses of the well broken ice on the north shore of the county at Rossmore.

MRS. A. MORRICE HURT IN CRASH

Aged Lady Sustains Broken Wrist and Lacerations Over Eye

Mrs. Agnes Morrice, 83 years of age, who resides at 6 Charlotte St., sustained a broken wrist, cut over the eye and was suffering from shock sustained during a motor accident at the intersection of Pinnacle and Bridge Streets last evening. Miss Josephine Hubbs, Trenton, also sustained bruises and required medical attention. Mrs. Morrice was taken to the Belleville General Hospital for treatment, today, however, Dr. W. C. Morgan, who attended, announced the elderly lady was resting comfortably.

Mrs. Morrice and Miss Hubbs were riding easterly along Bridge St., in an automobile driven by Robert B. Fair, of this city. At the Pinnacle Street, intersection, it is said that J. A. Hewlett, Toronto motorist, who was proceeding northerly on Pinnacle Street failed to observe the stop street signs and drove out into the path of Mr. Fair's car.

Fair informed investigating police officers he had swerved sharply to the left to avoid a collision after seeing Hewlett drive out into the intersection but the collision was unavoidable. The two injured women were treated at the hospital. Considerable damage resulted to both vehicles as the result of the accident. The impact was heard for considerable distance. Mr. Hewlett reported to police he had failed to observe the stop street sign, but was proceeding cautiously, he held.

MAN RE-ARRESTED ON THEFT CHARGE

Duncan Burnfield, Quebec, Will be Taken to Picton to Stand Trial

Immediately upon being sentenced to not less than three months in the Ontario Reformatory by Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., in today's local police court after being convicted on a charge of theft, Duncan Burnfield, alias Ernest McLarren, Quebec City, found himself further in the clutches of the law and arrested on a charge of theft on a warrant issued from Picton. Burnfield will stand trial in Picton next week, County Constable James Lovelace revealed upon serving the warrant in today's local police court.

Burnfield was arrested on a nominal charge of vagrancy last week and found in the possession of a fountain pen desk set, later established as having been stolen from the office of Dr. G. Stewart, local dentist. Today Burnfield pleaded guilty of taking the desk set from the dentist's office. An alleged accomplice, William Whitehead, who was also held on a nominal charge of vagrancy was acquitted and dismissed from custody today.

Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., introduced Burnfield's record of previous convictions, which included eight convictions in the past decade, ranging from receiving stolen goods and theft to that of common drunkenness.

Ernest Cain, Kingston, appeared on a charge of drunken driving, arising out of a motor accident, which happened in Belleville recently. His case was enlarged for another week. "In these cases of drunken driving and where an accident has occurred, the Department is very rigid in their instructions. A second charge of reckless driving must be preferred, where property damage results," pointed out Mr. Donnan as he instructed Chief Kidd to prefer the additional charge upon Cain's next appearance.

Two inebriates were given until the 28th of the month in which to raise the assessed fine following the conviction of intoxication.

Police Blotter

James Meens, Herchimer, Ave., reported the theft of his bicycle to the police last evening. A description of the bike was also afforded the authorities by Mr. Meens.

Trenton police requested the assistance of local authorities in the apprehension of a man named William Davis, wanted in that town for the theft of two gold watches, the property of a man named Deline residing in Trenton. Davis was described as a man anywhere between 38 to 40 years of age, rather grey and starding five feet, nine inches in height.

The largest number of transients to seek shelter at the police station in any one week of recent years was registered by the night sergeant this week, according to statistics shown by the authorities today. "Last Tuesday night we could not accommodate all the transients seeking shelter here", revealed Sergeant Arthur Harman upon going off duty this morning. It was later learned that 42 were given shelter that night.

Property Damaged At Service Station

What is believed by police to have been the wilfull destruction of property was found at Bourk's service station, Cannifton Road shortly after midnight last night. The glass in a gasoline pump was broken, the hose leading from the pumps were thrown upon the ground while window panes in the doors of the garage pit and main office were shattered.

William Storms, popular Belleville hockey player, discovered the damage when returning home along Cannifton Road shortly after 1.00 a.m. today. Mr. Storms also saw two men hasten across Memorial Park upon his approach. The matter was reported to the police by Mr. Storms and subsequent investigations proved the wilful destruction of property had resulted. No mention as to how the glass was broken was made by the authorities today however.

Could Follow Britain

When debt conversion, bringing the debt down to a figure the nation could handle, was mentioned there were cries of repudiation, but Canada could well afford to follow Britain, who in 1932 effected a voluntary conversion of nearly $10,000,000,000 in debt.

Canada borrowed to pay for the last war. She might face a war tomorrow to preserve democracy and she hadn't paid a nickel on the cost of the last war.

"We're rapidly getting into the position in this country of taking from the haves and giving to the have-nots and the worry I have is that the haves haven't enough to go around," said Mr. Campbell.

It was idle to talk of Ontario converting her debt. It demanded national action. Ontario had and could weather the storm but one Canadian province had been defaulting for three years and another was preparing to default this year.

No Action Taken

"Yet no action has been taken at Ottawa. Indeed money has been loaned to these provinces to bolster up an economic position they're not able to sustain."

No one solution could save the nation's economic life. "But it is sure we can't continue to borrow money when we're not able to pay that we've already borrowed."

The economic basis of Canada's life had shifted lately, said Mr. Campbell. Mining and the tourist traffic were the things that bulked largest in the national income now, not agriculture.

Canada might well follow the example of Australia which converted her debt, lowered her exchange to 25 per cent below the British pound, attracted capital, found markets and balanced her budget.

"But we are letting our resources slip away and do nothing," he charged.

"Ontario has shown the way, we've shown value can be given for the taxpayers' money. We've found it possible to lower direct taxes and to extend general services and we've kept the credit position of the province secure. But I worry about what may come in the future. It is just as well we give a little advice to those in charge of the national government."

CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY

A recent snapshot of Princess Elizabeth, who today celebrates her 13th birthday with a party at Windsor Castle. As evidence that Elizabeth is leaving her childhood behind her, the King will present his daughter with a diamond-studded bracelet, while her mother's gift will be a box of silk stockings.

United Action Required

Ontario acknowledged her dependence on and her indebtedness to the other parts of Canada. But Canada was a national unit and united action by her provinces was required.

The Liberal government's resolution asking the House to supply funds for the ensuing year brought an amendment from the opposition Conservative forces regretting "the failure of the government to reduce taxation and to deal with the serious unemployment situation in the province."

The amendment was defeated by a 59-21 vote. Premier Mitchell Hepburn's budget resolution was adopted on the same division and the legislature immediately went into committee of supply, starting to vote funds which the government requires to carry on its business.

Suggests Conference

In winding up his party's end of the budget debate, Conservative leader George Drew suggested a "Premier's conference" immediately to grapple with some of the problems facing Canada. He said that no country could survive "the stagnation of government in Canada today."

"It is madness for us in Canada to drift on as we are doing at the present time," said Col. Drew. "There is no one in this country with any knowledge of public affairs who does not realize the necessity of co-operation for the welfare of the whole nation, but all we are getting is excuses for doing nothing."

The Conservative leader said Australia had solved her economic problems by a Premiers' conference which cut across constitutional difficulties and solved their problems by united action. The time was "long overdue" for such a conference in Canada.

Mr. Campbell endorsed the suggestion the provinces be called into conference for "dealing with the emergency as it exists of one province defaulting and another about to default—we may reach a sound money basis by keeping some of our gold here."

Tempers ran as high as at any time during the session during a clash between Colonel Drew and Premier Hepburn. Speaker James Clark threatened to clear the galleries after a round of applause was given to the Conservative leader for his part of the verbal exchange.

Paid For Article

Speaking in the budget debate, Colonel Drew read an article written by himself in 1933 when he was Ontario Securities Commissioner, and published at that time, in which he advocated a uniform companies law for the Dominion.

Asked by Mr. Campbell if he was paid for the article the Colonel said he supposed he was.

"Were you a full-time employee," interjected the Premier.

"I believe I was," said Colonel Drew.

"Oh, making a little money on the side," Mr. Hepburn came back.

"I think that is a remark you will probably regret," replied the Conservative leader.

"The point I want to make is this," said the Premier, "this man was a full time employee of the government taking time off from his work to make additional money."

"The point I want to make is that I wasn't taking time off my work," said Colonel Drew. He was doing what everybody had a right to do—utilizing his spare time to the best advantages. It would be better if some others would do this.

Applause From Galleries

Applause came from the east gallery and the Premier rose to call attention to the demonstration, adding it was "quite obvious the opposition leader had gathered a host of friends."

Dr. Harold Welsh (Con. Hastings East) said the time had come for Ontario to tackle the scourge of syphilis as it had tackled tuberculosis. Persons infected with syphilis who refuse to take treatment should be jailed for compulsory treatment.

"It is time to knock down this attitude of hush-hush and get the people of Ontario to realize this is something that is undermining their physical set-up," said Dr. Welsh.

CAHAN SUGGESTS

that this was so Mr. Cahan doubted if the federal government had the legal right to make the grants it was now making for unemployment relief. His doubts arose not from the constitution itself but from the interpretation placed on the constitution by the judicial committee of the privy council in the judgment holding the employment and social insurance act of 1935 ultra vires.

Wants Reference to Court

An immediate reference to the courts to settle once and for all where the responsibility rested was urged by Mr. Cahan. If the Supreme Court and Privy Council should decide the federal authorities had not the right to act in connection with unemployment then amendments to the British North America Act should be obtained.

Mr. Cahan said he was making no criticism of the stand taken by Premiers Duplessis and Hepburn. He had enough confidence in these leaders to believe they would immediately agree to amendments to the British North America to establish federal jurisdiction if the courts decided there was no federal jurisdiction now.

"The government and parliament of Canada may not, without mischievous results, continue to make unlawful appropriations for objects which the courts have already declared or may reasonably be expected to declare, to be beyond the legislative jurisdiction of parliament," he said.

Transporting small patient to Red Cross Outpost Hospital in Northern Ontario—any and every means of conveyance are used for "Ambulance" purposes in this far-flung pioneer hospital service.

Red Cross Outposts Do Pioneer Work

Recently the number of children living in isolated sections of Northern Ontario who have received treatment at Red Cross Outpost Hospital clinics since the inception of this service, passed the 55,000 mark.

"No phase of our Outpost Hospital work has given us greater satisfaction than the service we have been able to render these northern children," Dr. F. W. Routley, Ontario Director for the Red Cross stated, and went on to say: "At our first little Outpost, opened in Wilberforce in 1922, we initiated these clinics for children in a small way. Since then, this work has steadily grown, until at the present time over 10,000 of these children, drawn from bush farms and pioneer settlements, are being treated at our clinics every year. Altogether, we have held over 2,100 children's clinics, organized for the correction of physical defects and the prevention of crippling diseases.

"The clinics," said Dr. Routley, "have been the culmination of a great deal of hard labour and the travelling of thousands of miles over backcountry roads and forest trails on the part of our nurses. The groundwork for this service has entailed over 3,500 visits to pioneer schools, the inspection of some 150,000 school children, countless visits to settlers' homes, talks with parents, transportation for the children to and from the clinics, arrangements with leading surgeons, many of whom have come long distances at their own expense to help these children, and a thousand and one other details to be arranged and obstacles, attendant on pioneer life, to be overcome.

"In spite of these difficulties, we have been able, through our clinics, to start 55,000 young pioneer citizens on the road to healthier and happier adult lives. We are rather proud of this contribution to the betterment of our northern people," Dr. Routley declared.

Orla although taken by surprise replied telling her school chums how sorry she was to leave the school and inviting the children to visit her. The pupils sang "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow" and a hearty clap.

The teacher Miss Esma Cole treated all to candy kisses. The address follows:

Allan School.

Dear Orla,—

We are sorry to hear that you are moving away from our school.

You have kept in the same class with us for three years now. During this time we have learned to like you very much. We are going to miss you also on the play grounds. It is always 'Orla' who urges us to go outdoors and get the fresh air.

Your cheery "Hello" is always welcome as the voice of the first one who has reached school. You have always been willing to help in our Junior Red Cross in any way you could.

Now to help you remember that you still have many friends at Allan school we ask you to accept this gift. Use it often and sometime write and tell us how you are getting along with you new friends at Hoards.

NEW PUPILS

Scores of Belleville boys and girls this week began their course of study which will take them years to complete. They have entered school which opens to them the portals of a new life. What is ahead of them they do not know, but they are to be led step by step until the most intricate problems and studies can be appreciated. There too they are going to gain their first knowledge of the wider citizenship. Hitherto they have known only the life of the home and the few playmates they have made in their first five or six years of life. Now they enter one phase of a complicated society — the school. It will prepare them for the full privileges of adulthood and citizenship.

From five or six years of age to twenty or twenty-three (if they go as far as college and university) seems a long path. But it is not so long because the scholar is developing and seeing new beauties and possibilities in life. Before the school is done with these lads and lassies they will have reached youth and approached adulthood. In that time they will have had much pleasure besides their studies, they will have widened the circle of their acquaintances.

These little heads do not carry heavy problems No one should think because they have to rise earlier, be washed and dressed for school and go to the schoolhouse and there be instructed, they are less happy. They have entered a very happy place; the schoolhouse and the school grounds. Their childish laughter will join with the now robust laughter and gaiety of the older pupils. These are their happy days.

The new army of children who began school this week is like the army that entered one year ago and every year since school was thought of. Nature brings these lovely youngsters along, some day they will be graduates of schools, and full-fledged citizens

ADOLF HITLER AT FIFTY

This is Chancellor Adolf Hitler's fiftieth birthday and Germany is spending two days in celebration. The German Fuehrer and Italian Duce are now in the same age bracket, fifty to sixty years. Mr. Chamberlain recently entered on his seventieth year. Mr. Roosevelt is in the fifties

Is Hitler at the height of his fame and how about Germany? Is she yet to spread across East Europe? The future will tell.

Hitler's rise to power has been one of the most striking in history. His course has been marked by unrest outside Germany in recent years and his arrival at the age of fifty coincides with a major crisis in which the entire world is vitally interested.

A DAY WITH THE DICTATORS

Yesterday was a day for dictators.

Mussolini declared that the policy of Italy is peace and co-operation, adding however that "errors of geography" must be corrected. This is his answer to President Roosevelt's appeal for a ten-year peace. Mussolini says guarantees of such are impossible in view of "geographical errors."

This is at least the old issue of more territory or colonial possessions. Is there something not yet revealed in words—an attempt at dictating terms to the world?

Hitler is in the full swing of his 51st year. In the birthday celebration in his honor yesterday Berlin and the Nazi Fuehrer's guests saw a parade of military might, 5 miles long, showing long range anti-aircraft guns, the details of whose range and calibre is kept a mystery.

The world was rather pleasantly surprised yesterday that no untoward event of an international character had happened in the middle of this week, but will still remain uneasy lest the dictators take a step which may precipitate trouble. Indications are that creation of unrest and concern is a part of the program of getting without war what they can. This brings up the question of how far the two will go and what chance they will take of an irrevocable step. The question comes — How do they weigh the strength of the democracies? If they underestimate there may be danger. If they realize the strength of the anti-aggression bloc and other forces possibly arrayed against them, they may desist. But they have powerful weapons in their armed might and possibly can play with them peaceably for some time. To some observers it seems that if the totalitarians intend to strike it will be this year, as Britain and France and friendly powers will be immeasurably stronger as time passes by, while the totalitarians decline in strength and resources.

PETERBOROUGH IS GOING STRONG FOR NEW HOMES under the new National Housing Act and information is available to all citizens at the office of the City Clerk, together with special application forms, in regard to the payment of municipal taxes by the Dominion Government on houses constructed under the National Housing Act. The Government will pay one hundred per cent of municipal taxes the first year, 50 per cent the second year, 25 per cent the third year, when certain conditions are fulfilled. It is necessary that a by-law be passed by the City Council in order that advantage may be taken of this Government offer. This offer affects houses to cost not more than $4,000, to be occupied by the owner. Folks who pay rent and have an urge to own their own homes would do well to study the National Housing Act of 1938, which is the Government Housing Act, of previous years with objectionable features eliminated. A large number of municipalities in Ontario and other provinces are swinging into line behind this Housing Act which promises to give considerable impetus to building operations this spring and thus promote employment in the building trades.

IF YOU DON'T LIKE YOUR NAME YOU CAN CHANGE IT to a more pleasing one, very easily, but a bill introduced in the Legislature, if adopted, will make it a bit harder to shuffle off the old handle and get a new one, more polished and up-to-date. During the early stages of the Great War folks with German names but British sympathies rushed to get their names changed, for Fritzes and Conrads and such like were viewed with suspicion. Now with another world war looming there is another movement toward name changing, and a bill has been introduced in the Legislature stipulating that intention to do so must be advertised, after a Judge has issued an order approving the change. Attorney General Conant said that the bill was worthy of serious consideration.

NEW YORK WORLD'S FAIR IS SCHEDULED TO OPEN APRIL THIRTY, consequently there is feverish activity now whipping the big show into shape. Grover Whelan, master mind of the enterprise, has turned in a good job of selling the show to the world, very cleverly getting Russia to erect a building which with exhibits will cost over a million dollars. Other nations in Europe could not let Russia outshine them hence fell in line with buildings costing millions. Canada will be well represented, but the Checko-Slovakia building will never be finished and will be a stark reminder of recent historical events. New York Herald Tribune says that there are 16,000 men at work now on the World's Fair, with a payroll of $900,000 a week, and increasing every day — 25,000 concessions will be readied next week for the opening. Beginning as a vision of a million dollars or so the exposition has swelled to one of $155,000,000. It is estimated that more than 50,000 persons will be employed by the Fair, its exhibitors and concessionaires during the summer. It is expected that one million persons will visit the Fair opening day. Regular admission will be 75c.

KINGSTON IS GETTING ALL FUSSED UP OVER THE ROYAL VISIT, and the committee in charge of arrangements has suggested among other things that No. 2 Highway which passes through the Limestone City be closed to traffic the day of the reception. Looks like Kingston folks want us to come the day before, bring our nightgowns and stay all night — otherwise we may have to stay out in the fields and listen to the tumult and the shouting from a distance. Perhaps the suggestion came from the hotels.

GERMANY, ITALY AND JAPAN are closed nations where the people are not permitted to know what is going on in the world outside their own country. Books, newspapers and magazines are prevented from coming into the country with reading matter that displeases the masters, and even radio broadcasts from free countries is blanked with interference for fear the people will learn the falsity of home-brew propaganda. Rather a return to the barbarous days of old when there was no means of quick communication and the world was governed by blind hatred, jealousy, and the survival of the fittest, when might was right and the world was ruled by force. This monstrous crime of an enlightened age calls more and more for the Roosevelt quarantine for sick nations until serums can eradicate the malignant bacteria emanating from the seats of the mighty.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Preventing Dementia Precox—The Persistent Dream State

You naturally think of heart disease as the most grave or dangerous of all diseases. From the standpoint of the organs of the body, heart disease does cause more deaths than any other ailment. However, once an individual knows he has heart disease and 'lives' within his strength, he may live 20 to 40 years afterwards.

There is, however, a mental ailment that should receive the most earnest consideration of parents, teachers, and physicians which, if treated in its early stage, may result in a cure in the majority of cases. Undiscovered or neglected, this mental ailment sends more patients to mental hospitals than any other single ailment. I am referring to dementia precox, the ailment where the individual lives really two lives—one life amidst those about him and the other life 'in a world of his own'. And this world of his own means more to him than does the life about him.

All the unusual or queer things done by the dementia precox patient are neither unusual nor queer if it is just remembered that these queer and unusual things fit into the particular world in which he lives; the world that he has created for himself and, of course, into which he fits perfectly.

What must parents, teachers, and physicians do to prevent the development of dementia precox in children and young adults?

The Clinic of the Drs. Edward A. Streer and Francis J. Braceland, Institute of the Pennsylvania Hospital, in the Philadelphia Numbmer of Clinics of North America says:

Prevention must be intensely cultivated during childhood and every child who presents dementia precox symptoms—'good', 'queer', 'shy', 'reserved', 'difficult', 'unsociable', 'seclusive', etc., —should be suspected of a possible development of dementia precox.

In the home, "parents must play no favorites", either in rewards or punishments. The extra ability or sociability of brothers or sisters should not be pointed out. The reason for punishment should be explained.

Unfortunately, many of these children are the 'only' child, or are much younger than their brothers or sisters. Fortunately, the school puts all youngsters on the same level from the standpoint of reward and punishment but the Clinic advises that the reading matter of these youngsters should be supervised.

Personally, I believe the biggest factor in preventing dementia precox is group games where the youngster has to 'give and take'. There is no 'royal' road for him to tread when he is playing or mixing with others.

LITTLE RED COW

Cherry, a Shorthorn non-pedigree cow, owned by Messrs. Wort and Way of Red House Farm, Amesbury, Wilts, has beaten the world's milk yield record for a year, with twenty-nine days to spare.

In 336 days Cherry has given 38,648 pounds of milk, thus beating the previous best record of 38,606 pounds in 365 days, held by the American Holstein-Friesian cow, Carnation Ormesday Butter King. Cherry broke the British record for a year's milk yield last week. It had been held by Lord Rayleigh's British-Friesian Terling Graceful 10th.

Mr. Alex McKie, Cherry's manager, says that the cow is between eight and nine years old. His firm bought her five or six years ago at an ordinary sale at Salisbury auction market. She was just a little red cow with no pedigree, "but she is a cow in a million". She has had five calves and the firm is keeping one, born last April, in the hope that one day she, too, may break the record.—London Times.

Tapping the Toffee Trees

"Les sucres! Les sucres! All aboard for the sugar-bush of the Holy Ghost Fathers on the Gatineau." Helpful friends had fully prepared me with detailed descriptions of what I could expect to see but, forewarned as I was I never hoped to find myself wandering in a paradox paradise.

After 10 minutes there I wanted to telephone Alice at her home in Wonderland, and send a wire to Hans Anderson or Robert Ripley telling them what they had overlooked.

If anyone had informed me in Australia that there were toffee-trees on tap in Canada I would have suspected him of pulling my leg. I have been travelling abroad for three years, but I do not suppose if I went on for another thirty I could discover anything as extraordinary as seeing 6,000 trees wearing buckets. It may be an old story to Canadians, but for the first time in my life I saw a living lie and had to believe it. And to think that the Holy Ghost Fathers are party to it!

"Down under" we have heard of the maple tree, know that its leaf is Canada's national emblem, and are aware that it produces sugar. In fact I thought the maple was responsible for all Canada's sugar, but I found out my economic mistake. Silviculturally speaking I am now prepared to award a laurel crown to the maple, even above the rubber tree, the breadfruit tree, and the Australian bottle tree, which is canny enough to store water in the desert.

Lewis Carroll was not so very far from the truth when he wrote of the treacle-well in "Alice". He should have come to Canada. Wandering around the sucrerie the visitors seemed to be enjoying themselves but they were quite nonchalant, as if eating home-grown candy was matter-of-fact and everyday, like having breakfast. I found it difficult, realizing that the last place in the world I would have thought of buying confectionary was a wood. I rather expected—and certainly hoped—that the next customers for Brother John's nectar would be the March Hare, the Mad Hatter and probably Alice herself. Anything would be possible in the sugar bush.

Brother John, overalled, bespectacled, smiling, presided over the yellow fluid which by a miracle of heat would soon be toffee, he explained the mysteries of the maple. He told how the sap ran in both Spring and Fall, that the Indians collected in the Fall but that here it was customary to take the sap as it rose in the Spring. Sunny days and cold nights were best, but this season had not been good. Last year by the end of March 800 cars had been to the sugar-bush, but the long-delaying Winter had spoilt custom this year.

His assistants padded down snow in red buckets and Brother John poured out his hot, viscous liquid, provided a stick, and there was toffee ready. You could have an elementary lesson in refrigeration and a swift recall to your boyhood when the twirling and sucking of toffee was a dream of bliss.

A gay party of ski-ers, vivacious and frolicking after their run, came along, crowded round the oven, received buckets of snow and were soon happily wrestling with the toffee. They might have been so many Hansels and Gretels discovering the candy house in the wood, but you knew they had done it often before. And you felt a little envious because they had.

People sat chewing contentedly on benches outside the "factory". I suppose you might call it that, though probably the maples might be offended. Others inside watched the sap being boiled to syrup. Drinking it was a new experience in gastronomy.

Just to prove that the maple was more versatile than I would have ever believed Brother John took me into the store, where there were rows of cubes looking rather like third-grade kitchen soap. It was the maple sap gone solid, the pure sugar, candy in the raw. He told me how the trees were tapped and how the sap ran slowly out—sometimes as much as two gallons to a tree in a day—and was collected by boys on snowshoes. It was then poured into a well, run through a pipeline to tanks with a storage capacity of 2,000 gallons, and from there to the boilers.

Maple sap transends any other liquid I know. Boil it, and you have clear, yellow syrup. Boil it again, congeal it, and there is brown toffee. Boil still further, beat well with a ladle, and you have solid maple sugar.

But the maple has a more serious side to her nature. More awesome to me than the mechanics of sap-running and toffee-manufacture was the realization that these tall trees, with leafless limbs, should be inwardly stirring with life, and that regularly as clockwork each year they should be mute prophets of Spring even though all around the world was wrapped in snow.

Next time I hear a fish story, I will believe it. Next time someone urges that sunshine can be made from cucumbers I will believe it. Next time..........Well, what is the use of ordinary beliefs? You run up against something so different, so outside experience, that you hardly know what to expect next. Toffee-trees on tap—when people back home hear of it they will surely think I am trying to outdo Baron Munchausen or to qualify for the Burlington Liars' Club. I should worry. I have seen the sugar-bush, eaten and drunk from a plain, common-or-garden, Canadian tree.—Written by F. S., an Australian journalist attached for a period to the staff of the Ottawa Journal.

Presidential Trial Balloons

In the United States the next presidential election already is being fought. The discussion of possible candidates and trends already is the favorite topic of the political commentators. The air is full of trial balloons, favorite sons are having their little days and everybody wonders what the millions of voters, the common people who make and unmake presidents, are thinking of it all.

The situation is full of interest. On the Democratic side speculation inevitably comes up against a portentous "if"—will Mr. Roosevelt decide to seek a third term, can he get the nomination if he seeks it, if nominated can he be elected? The feeling seems to be that he will not be a candidate, but that he will use the greater power of his office to secure the nomination of a man who will dedicate himself to the prosecution of the Roosevelt theories of government.

And that brings up the possibility of developments that strengthen the hopes of the Republicans. By all accounts Vice-President Garner, "Cactus Jack of Texas," a small-town banker who is said to go to bed most nights at 9 o'clock, is out in front of all other candidates—and Garner in essentials is anti-New Deal, anti-Roosevelt. The Garner boom is attaining imposing proportions. Second only to it is the boom for Postmaster General Farley, the political organizer of the Roosevelt regime who seems to have been saying a word for himself in his contact with the boys in the firing line. "Mr. Farley," says one political writer, "is the only one who has the political contacts necessary to stop Mr. Garner."

In the Gallup poll Garner leads the Democrats with presidential aspirations almost as decisively as Thomas E. Dewey, district attorney of New York, heads the Republican list. Dewey has fire and youth, his conquest of the New York rackets has caught the public imagination, and the practical politicians think he will go far. The Republicans think their chances are good, unless the "old Guard" secures the nomination of Hoover or Landon, but unquestionably their confidence rests largely on their pious hopes of a split in the Democratic ranks—a Roosevelt candidate opposed by the New Deal.

Meanwhile the President sits back in the White House saying nothing but, no doubt, doing a great deal of serious thinking. Wise politicians do not make the mistake of under-estimating his shrewdness, his keen appreciation of realities, his ambition, or his hold on public opinion.—Ottawa Journal.

DWARF TREES

The development of dwarf trees as practiced in Japan is the reversal of nature's method and consists in nurturing the unfittest.

First, a poor, weak, seed is chosen for planting. As soon as it has sprouted and attained a little growth the leading shoot is trimmed off. The plant then grows two other shoots. These are carefully watched, and when one exhibits a strength and vitality greater than its fellow it is at once cut off and the weaker shoot left to form the future dwarf tree's main stem or trunk.

This system of trimming and cutting is followed punctiliously: water is seldom used, and only in such small quantities as actually to keep the plant alive; the tree is kept in a pot too small for its full development; and the roots are constantly pruned. The shoots are carefully trained and bent to follow the growth of a large tree. After about five years of such training the little tree can be left to itself and trusted not to strike out again in pursuit of its natural size and vigor.

Some of the specimens of Japanese dwarf tree are very beautiful and compare in form, though not in size, with their forest-grown brothers.—Forest and Outdoors.

NEW MARKET

The hard-pressed cotton-textile industry has discovered a new market which will absorb 20,000,000 yards of muslin. In co-operation with a large packing firm a new method for packing large-scale shipments of lamb has been discovered. In the case of both veal and lamb, the carcass is wrapped in a fine and closely-fitting muslin casing that is dipped in a special saline solution, and then enclosed in a special waxed paper "humidor" bag. Last year, experiments with veal consumed 8,000,000 yards of muslin. This year, extension of the process to lamb will require the larger quantity.—Marketing.

HITLER NEXT?

A Dutchman was dining in the restaurant car of a German train, and when the waiter approached with the usual "Heil Hitler!" he made no reply. The waiter was annoyed. "Every time I say "Heil Hitler!" to you," he snapped, "you must say "Heil Hitler" to me."

"Hitler? He doesn't mean a thing in Holland," remarked the Dutchman.

"Maybe not now," said the waiter, "but one day you'll get our Fuehrer in Holland, too."

"Perhaps so," smiled the Dutchman. "We already have your Kaiser."—N. Y. Sun.

DALADIER CALLS

Exodus Continuing

Meanwhile the steady exodus of foreigners from France continued with every steamship sailing. One shipping company reported full passenger lists up to the end of May.

With seven days remaining before Chancellor Hitler answers President Roosevelt's proposal for a 10-year peace pledge, diplomatic sources said Germany had sounded out smaller European nations on a number of questions, including whether they felt themselves menaced by Germany and whether they had asked President Roosevelt to intervene.

Used For Answer

These sources said the information thus gained would be used to answer President Roosevelt's request for non-aggression assurances to 31 nations, and to find out if any of the powers thus questioned had joined or intended to join the Anglo-French coalition.

Bulgaria, Yugoslavia and Hungary were mentioned particularly as having been sounded out by Hitler.

With part of the German fleet sighted heading westward through the English Channel, events in Spain still worried informed French circles despite Spanish assurances from the Ambassador here that Italian, German and Moorish troop movements were not aimed at France, Gibraltar or Tangier in North Africa.

NAVAL VESSELS OF

Search Fruitless

At Ottawa members of the Senate and House of Commons were told the search was fruitless.

The destroyers Skeena and Saguenary and the minesweepers Fundy and Gaspe were ordered into the search for the undersea craft by Vice-Admiral P. W. Nelles, chief of the naval staff, acting under orders from Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Minister of Defence.

The destroyers St. Laurent, Ottawa, Restigouche and Fraser, other major units in Canada's small Royal Canadian Navy, are on the Pacific coast en route to Esquimalt, B.C., naval base.

Royal Canadian Air Force planes stationed at Dartmouth air station, across the harbor from Halifax were ordered to cooperate in the search with planes of the F. C. M. P. customs force.

Thorough Steps

Mr. Mackenzie declared the "most vigilance" is being exercised in the search and that "the most thorough steps" are being taken to ascertain whether the report, made to naval officers at Halifax by Captain William Latter, a pilot, is true.

Later the Defence Minister told the Commons, in response to a request for information by Gordon Graydon (Con. Peel) that the opinion of naval officers is that the vessel Latter saw was not a submarine.

In his question Mr. Graydon suggested the Minister's earlier statement had substantiated the report but Mr. Mackenzie corrected him.

"The facts are as follows," he said. "Reports were received by naval authorities at Halifax yesterday from a pilot vessel that officers of the vessel believed that a submarine had entered Halifax harbor early on Wednesday morning.

"Immediately a most thorough investigation was conducted by the officers of the Royal Canadian Air Force, the Royal Canadian Navy and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

"At this time I may tell my honorable friend that the opinion of the officers is that the vessel in question was not a submarine. However, as soon as I have further reliable information I will give it to the House immediately."

Report Dissected

The report was both scoffed at and taken seriously in the Senate.

"If Captain William Latter saw a submarine within 30 yards of his boat why in hell didn't he ram her?" asked Senator William Duff, Liberal Senator from the Nova Scotia fishing town of Lunenburg, who is called "The Admiral" by his colleagues.

"I think the whole thing is ridiculous," he added. Captain Latter has not told of seeing the submarine until well on in the day although he could have communicated with authorities at midnight.

A more serious view of the report was taken by Senator W. A. Griesbach (Cons.-Alberta) who asked government leader Dandurand for information. "I submit it was a submarine that had no business being there, making a stealthy survey of the harbor of Halifax," he said.

"It was not a Canadian submarine because we haven't one. It was not a British submarine or we would know by now. And the United States Admiralty has announced it was not an American one."

FRANCE PRONE TO CRITICIZE HER HEAD MAN

Republic Took Unusual Course in Electing Albert Lebrun to Second Term.

By GLADYS M. ARNOLD
Canadian Press Correspondent

Paris, April 21—(CP)— Election of Albert Lebrun to a second seven-year term as President of France reflected his almost unprecedented popularity in a country where the citizens for more than 50 years have mocked, criticized or abused their chief executives. He will start his new term May 11.

Actually the election April 5 created little excitement in Paris although four independent candidates were detained by police for creating a disturbance. While the people do not directly elect their President, any man who pays his taxes and "obeys his wife" may submit his name as a candidate. The citizen is obliged to buy a newspaper to see who has been chosen for the post by the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate in the Palace of Versailles.

With no serious rivals, M. Lebrum received 506 of the 910 votes cast. The only other President of France ever re-elected was Jules Grevy. He resigned in 1887 in the second year of nis new term.

Other Presidents

How little the ordinary French citizen has to do with the choosing of his president is indicated by the story told about one of the first presidents of France, Felix Faure. At the time there lived in Paris an anarchist leader named Sebastian Faure and the people were heard to ask: "Who is this man Faure who nas been made president? Is it the anarchist?"

The tradition which M. Lebrun has effectually broken is that the French presidents have been unsatisfactory. One is too simple, for instance Jules Grevy, whom the cartoonists delighted in caricaturing in his shirt sleeves and bedroom slippers; another too lavish. Sadi Carnot spent his personal fortune to dispel the impression Grevy had created and was suspected of monarchist ambitions for his pains. This one wanted too much power, that one was a rubber stamp and still another was referred to disrespectfully as an "imbecile."

But M. Lebrun has won a public which, even two years ago provoked the remark by a French writer. "They would deny themselves a dinner to see a crowned head but wouldn't spend the 20th of a cent to see the president." The most critical content themselves by saying he is "sentimental and a family man."

The President, however, is much more than that. Tact, diplomacy and courtesy have marked his term. He has an easy and gracious manner in receiving distinguished visitors, especially marked when King George and Queen Elizabeth visited Paris.

Whatever he thinks personally, he has called upon one political leader after another to form a government in France, always with the same careful impartiality. He is recognized as having the qualities of good sense, moderation and simplicity so necessary to a President of the French Republic.

THANK-OFFERING MEETING

The Easter Thank-offering of the Woman's Missionary Society, the Jubilee Evening Auxiliary and the Invicta Girls' Mission Circle of Bridge Street United Church took the form of a supper meeting, Wednesday, April 19th with the W.M.S. President, Miss Lazelle Brown in the chair.

After a sing-song in charge of Mrs. Houston and Mrs. Franklin —Mrs. Ralph Morden opened the meeting with an Easter Meditation, followed by the Scripture reading by Miss Betty Anderson and prayer by Mrs. Ash.

A solo by Miss Anne Brown accompanied by Mrs. Hubbs, was very much appreciated.

Mrs. Semple in a few choice words introduced the speaker, Miss Gollan, one of the Home Missionaries of the W.M.S.—whose activities are centred in the Church of All Nations in Toronto.

She told a thrilling story of the some 4,000 new Canadians who throng the Church each week. She told of the dilemma of these people among thoughtless and race-proud Canadians—many of whom regard as inferior those whose language and customs are unfamiliar. She told, too, of the needless burdens which are added to the lives of these people who are seeking new life in our land—because of this suspicion and unfriendliness. She said that the answer to all national problems comes back to the individual and that the place for us to begin our adjusting of society is to start with ourselves.

A vote of thanks was extended to the speaker by Miss Phyllis Clemence, and the meeting closed with a very fine chorus by some of the girls of the Mission Circle and the Benediction by Miss Brown.

Heavy Eaters Must Watch Waistline

PRINCESS BABA

Regular exercises keep her waistline in trim

By Helen Follett

YOUR waistline dates you, cutie, don't forget that. Especially these days when bodices are boned and the high moguls of fashion insist that the feminine equator must be as neat as a pin. Be slim and ready. Work for normal hip and bust measurement and you can dance in the front line of the beauty chorus.

The middle-aged figure is nothing more than age in the middle of you. When the tape measure reports an added inch, don't accept it as a slap from cruel fate. You have been eating too well or you have taken to figure slumping that has permitted the abdominal muscles to get sleepy and soldier on the job. Pull yourself up, close your eyes, when the chocolate cake is passed, eat more clear soups, green salads, cottage cheese, less fats and sweets. If you don't take steps at once, you may in time grow a life preserver on your once svelte torso.

Try the flag waving exercises. Stand erect, feet five inches apart, chest elevated. Clasp your hands together, lift them high, do wide wig-wagging circles, try to pull yourself apart at the waistline, turning your body from side to side along with the movement of the hands. Ten minutes twice a day, willy-nilly, rain or shine, no matter what happens.

Keep an eagle eye on hangnails. They can cause a heap of trouble. Torn flesh permits bacteria to creep in, start housekeeping. An infection sets up, medical attention may be necessary.

At the first sign of inflammation soak the finger in hot soap suds, cleansing the wound well. Very gently lift the cuticle away from the nail base with an orange wood stick that has been dipped in alcohol.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Don't Cry Over Old Beaux

Dear Miss Fairfax

I went around with a boy for some time and although we didn't really break up he started going with a girl he knew before he met me, and now they're going together. I heard he gave her a diamond ring. I'm in love with this boy, and I think he likes me too.

Another young man has asked me to go "steady" with him, but I keep saying "no" because I think the first boy will come back and I want to be ready. What shall I do? Wait for the first young man to return, or go out with the second young man? He's also very nice, but it's the first one I love.

Wondering

The time has come, my dear Wondering, when I must say something which I'm afraid you, and scores of girls who write me letters like yours, may think unsympathetic: Do not break your hearts over men who show too plainly that they are DONE. Men go for what they want in this world——the girl they fancy, the chum whose company they enjoy, the panama or felt hat in the haberdasher's window, or the job that appeals to them. When a man stops going with one girl and takes up with another, it means, usually that he likes the newer girl better.

Therefore, it's very foolish of you to pass up the good times you might have with a new admirer, in the hope that the ex-admirer may come back. If the first young man comes back, and you want him, all right. In the meantime, don't get lines in your face and grieve over someone who is probably enjoying himself immensely.

Don't Pursue Unpopularity

Dear Miss Fairfax

I am the most disappointed and downhearted girl in the world, and I'm only 17. I'm not so bad to look at, and am about the average in build. I don't think I'm prim, but I just don't care for public dance halls, although I enjoy dancing. It makes me feel so blue when I hear the other girls tell about their "dates" and all the beaux they have, and to see couples going out together for a good time. I usually spend my evenings at home or go to the library to read.

You have given such wise advice to other girls; I wonder if you could help me with my problem.

Sad

It may be that the "line" you adopt doesn't suit you; that often happens to many of us. It's like ready-made clothes that haven't been altered. So often girls like to adopt the "line" of older women they admire, and it doesn't fall in with the thing we call "personality".

Why not try a complete change of program? Become acquainted with a different set of young people and see if they won't find you more interesting than the old crowd.

I've often suggested that girls go to libraries and read, but I'm going to reverse that for you. Perhaps your group may think you're too bookish and clever for them' It's just as well, if a girl is clever, to keep that information to herself.

Why not try the effect of a little hospitality? Get some jolly girl to help you out with a candy party; you can make fudge, seafoam, carmels——good recipes for which may be found in any candy-making cook-book. Or try a Sunday night supper, inviting in two or three of the boys and girls. Perhaps the reason you're not popular is that they think you're stand-offish. You're young enough to change your tactics and become a social success.

The June Bride Makes Her First Decisions About Her Wedding Plans

Your wedding! All your life you have dreamed of this all-important day, dreamed of having it a happy and memorable occasion for you and your fiance, your families, and your friends.

There are certain traditions, certain rules and accepted wedding customs, that must be abided by. There is your own financial problem, deciding on the kind of wedding you can plan with your wedding-budget. Undoubtedly there will be social and family problems which must be considered. Nearest to your heart, are your own, individual preferences. You like certain things; you consider some things necessary, and other things unnecessary.

The bride of good taste and sound judgment thinks on these things adapting these problems to make as perfect a pattern as possible for her wedding:

The first decisions that must be made concerning the plans for a wedding are

Is the wedding to be formal or informal?

Is it to be simple or elaborate?

Is it to be large or small?

Is it to be in the morning, afternoon or evening?

Is the ceremony to be performed in church, in the bride's home, in a hotel or in an assembly-room or club?

Is there to be a wedding reception? What kind? What place?

Is there to be a large church wedding and a small reception, or a few guests at the ceremony and a large reception to follow, or many guests at both ceremony and reception?

If you have any problems relative to the above list, please write to me.

Manners of the Moment

If you wish to complain about anything and you feel that your complaint is justified, do not "tell the world" bout it. Make your complaint to the proper authority in a civil and controlled manner.

Diphtheria Injections Teach Child's System to Fight off the Disease

When I first started practice, the only antidote for diphtheria was the temporary one described yesterday. Lasting a week or so it helped the patient recover. However, if he were re-exposed within a short time, he'd contract the disease again.

In those days, when I went into a house and found a case or two of the disease, I'd inject this antitoxin into every member of the family. I did this so often in one section that for many years after, whenever I wanted to inspect the schools, if the children saw me coming first, they all hid. They thought I had come to inject more antitoxin.

Today, when we give a series of injections to a baby to prevent him from ever having diphtheria, we are attempting something a lot more difficult and complicated than giving antitoxin to a child who has the disease. We are trying in this case to teach the baby's system how to fight off the bacteria that causes diphtheria, and how to produce his own antitoxin to fight the disease should he come in contact with it.

For this attempt, a mixture of toxin and formaldehyde seems to be the most satisfactory. We inject a small dose first, and then two more doses—three in all—at intervals of three weeks. This is the way we do it here in Ontario. Some of the States give two injections, each one much stronger than any we give. Which system gives the best results is a debatable point. They both work.

The purpose of these injections at fairly long intervals is to give the system a chance to neutralize a small dose. In order to do this, the baby manufactures the antitoxin in his own blood. When he has neutralized the first dose, we give him another, and again his blood is stimulated to produce more antitoxin. By the time his blood has neutralized the third dose his system has been trained to produce antitoxin so that when he comes in contact with the disease itself and the bacteria start to infect him, his blood immediately starts to manufacture antitoxin as it has been trained to do, and the disease won't make any headway.

We don't know yet just how long this tendency to immunity lasts after toxoiding. I think it is something like vaccination for smallpox. Some people remain immune all their lives when once vaccinated. Others need to be revaccinated every few years. However, diphtheria is a child's disease. Once a person passes twenty years of age, the danger of getting it diminishes rapidly. The oldest patient I ever attended with diphtheria was 45.

There is no doubt that this theory of toxoiding is the right one. If you want proof, all you have to do is look at the tremendous reduction in the number of cases of diphtheria. I don't believe I've attended a case of it for four or five year. When I look back on what it used to be, I marvel at the miracle of it.

Of course, sometimes persons who have been toxoided will contract the disease. But if they do, it is in a very mild form, nothing like it would have been if they hadn't had those injections.

Ask for BEE HIVE

THE GOLDEN GIRL

—by—

Agnes Louise Provost and Ladbroke Black

"The thing is preposterous," Mrs. Daimler said blandly. "It is undoubtedly some absurd wager, as Sophie says. If Jack were in earnest he would be entering some business or profession."

The second opportunity had passed Gloria drew a long breath that quivered in her throat and turned with Bill Daimler to follow his mother's majestic lead.

Sitting before her dressing table that night Gloria pondered the things she had heard. Life was full of contradictions, she reflected soberly. She, who did not love him, was Jack Moreland's wife. She stood between him and Frances Payne, the boldly handsome woman who once had cared for Jack and who still loved him, if Sophie Daimler's surmise was true.

If he had never met a certain Gloria Staunton, if his sudden infatuation for her had not led to her dismissal from Miss Endicott's and finally to an unacknowledged marriage, he might have gone back to Frances Payne. Now an ironical Fate had so shifted their destinies that Mrs. Dick Payne, disappointed in ambition and beaten in fortune, would be glad to lend her name and position to take Gloria Staunton's social wellbeing in charge.

Gloria arose slowly and went over to the telephone. She called Mrs. Daimler.

"Mrs. Daimler? This is Gloria Staunton. I have been considering the suggestion you made this evening and I wished to tell you that if it is agreeable to Mrs. Payne we can make the arrangements tomorrow."

CHAPTER XIV

Gloria made no attempt to deceive herself as to her motives in engaging Frances Payne. She was not doing this from any sentimental desire to bring these two together again and efface herself from their lives. She merely took the chance that offered itself to do something for this woman whom unconsciously she had cheated. She had cheated Jack, too, whether he loved Frances Payne or not.

Far afield though it might be, this was one little way to repay in her own mind that intolerable sense of obligation to him. He would take nothing from her who had taken so much from him, but she would do what she could for those he cared for, or who cared for him. Tonight it happened to be Mrs. Payne. In a few days more she would go to New York to see what might be done to save Jack's fortune from his aunt's mysterious folly.

X X X

Three days later Gloria was in New York again. She had estimated that it would take that long for Jack to deliver the car and return. She did not call him by telephone, but ordered a motor and drove to McGilvary's Central Garage. McGilvary came out in person, large, shirt-sleeved and amiable.

"Is Mr. Moreland here?"

"Gone," said the large man briefly. "Come back from deliverin' a car and threw up his job. But he was a good lad while he lasted, and I'm missin' him. If yeh see him, Miss, tell him that if he iver loses th' millyuns that we're bettin' he has, th' old job's waitin' f'r him at McGilvary's."

She was relieved to escape from McGilvary's too friendly loquacity, and leaned back with a droop of scorn on her lips as the car sped back toward her hotel.

Someone on the pavement caught her eye and bowed. It was Wayne Gorham. She bent her head and smiled in return, but something seemed to tighten around her heart. She was afraid of Wayne Gorham.

In her room at the hotel she called up the telephone number that Jack had first given her, evidently his rooms in town. The girl at the switchboard drawled indifferent information. Yes, Mr. Moreland had given up his rooms a few days ago. No she could not say that he had taken other rooms because his furnishings had been sent to a storage warehouse, but he had left a forwarding address for his mail. Pressed on the subject of what the forwarding address might be the girl became blandly uncommunicative. She would be glad to forward anything. That was all.

Gloria turned away from the telephone soberly. He had given her two addresses where she might find him at any time and he had disappeared from both, leaving no trace of his whereabouts.

Ten minutes later she was in a taxicab speeding downtown. It was a tall building that she entered and the elevator took her to the twelfth floor. She went down the corridor hurriedly. Presently she stopped. The gilt letters on the door in front of her gave her a feeling of repulsion.

GRANTHAM & HYDE
DETECTIVE AGENCY

She looked quickly up and down the corridor and went in. She woud do something for Jack Moreland in spite of herself.

X X X

At a conspicuously expensive hotel Frances Payne sat at a little table and let her composed glance drift around the crowded room. Wayne Gorham sat opposite her. She was not particularly anxious to be friendly with Gorham, but the broker had been useful and just now she was not in a position to offend him.

For Mrs. Payne, hard pushed by creditors and unpleasantly short of funds, had taken the old road of the financially straitened. She had speculated. Gorham had been extremely accommodating in the matter of carrying her account, but she was unpleasantly aware that the debit side was increasing rapidly.

Therefore she accepted the broker's attentions for the present at least, although she had coolly decided to drop him when her financial obligations were settled She turned to him with a lazy smile.

"Did I tell you that I have become a business woman? I am playing chaperon to a young heiress, immensely rich and very charming. Wish me good luck in my first venture."

"With all my heart." He warmed to a noticeable interest, as she had meant that he should. "Who is the lucky girl?"

"Her name is Gloria Staunton."

Gorham put his cup down carefully. Not a muscle of his face betrayed more than a polite interest.

"Rather an unusual name. I met a Miss Staunton once—purely in a business way. I wonder if she might be the same one?"

Their eyes met across the little table, cool, wary, fencing for advantage. Frances Payne, probing delicately to find if he remembered Gloria Staunton as the unknown girl at Beechwood, could have no idea that his mind's eye saw a little writing room in a quiet hotel and a girl with a still, frozen intentness in her eyes as a boy with a little tray passed, calling out in a nasal chant: "Mrs. Moreland! Telegram for Mrs. Moreland!"

"It would be most interesting if she was," she said coolly. "I shall have to introduce you, which is nice of me, for she is distractingly pretty. After five! I really must go."

X X X

"I wonder why I did it?"

It was a question which Jack Moreland had put to himself more than once in the first few weeks of his self-imposed exile in a roaring, soot-laden young city of the middle west. Not why he had married Gloria—that motive was clear enough, the gallant chance that some day he could make her love him, but that chance had gone glimmering. What he grimly questioned was why he, with a host of agreeable friends, with fastidious tastes and a comfortable competence assured him, should leave those things and stay in this ugly little city through broiling summer months as a grimy laborer in an automobile factory.

A girl had taunted him with his uselessness, but he had friends in plenty who could place him in the way of advancement in mahogany offices, or procure for him some pleasant, harmless sinecure where social graces would be an asset. Yet he had taken a "job" in a garage where there was no possible chance to rise, and he had stuck to it until that chance meeting with Gloria had sent him far afield.

The knowledge of her lavish wealth had brought only an impatient disgust at his own ineptitude, and the sight of her in her dainty aloofness had filled him with a primitive desire to sweep her off her feet and carry her away with him in that fleet racing car, daring her to keep longer from the world the fact that she was his lawful wife. Instead of that he had kissed her against her will, had treated her with savage rudeness and left her to think what she would of him.

And then he had left the work he had taken to please her and had come to this city of factories, still working and still sticking to cars. It seemed the only thing he could do, at least without getting his friends to prop him.

At the end of the third week he made a discovery. His present job was the only thing he wanted to do! Motors had always been to him living, sentient things. He had a princely taste in selecting the most expensive makes, but also he had loved them and tinkered with them and made them do his will. Now he was learning them again bit by bit, making parts of them with his own hands, Jack Moreland, onetime gentleman of leisure, toiled in a factory with hundreds of other grimy men. At night he pored intently over sheets of drawings, or buried himself in bulky volumes

At the end of the sixth week he left the small but comfortable hotel where he lived in comparative state with a cold shower available at the end of the day, and moved to a room in a modest cottage in the outskirts where he had the privilege of using a lean-to shed in the back yard. Here he tinkered steadily night after night sometimes whistling over his work and sometimes sitting still in frowning contemplation, hunting for the something that still eluded him.

Sometimes he would stop and light a cigarette and wonder what Gloria was doing at that particular moment. He wondered how many other men were dancing attendance on her and the thought made him turn angrily back to work again. He tried to hate her. The truth was that he was hungry for the mere sight of her face.

When a thick creamy envelope came one morning inviting him to the wedding of an old friend, the temptation swept over him again.

"I want a week off," he said to the foreman, and he got it.

CHAPTER XV

Miss Endicott was seated in her straight-backed chair, her fingers moving uncertainly among the sheets of a letter in her lap. Her fingers had acquired that treacherous habit of late. The creeping palsy in one hand, studiously concealed by little subterfuges of wraps and trailing scarfs, and which was the unadmitted cause of her first employing a secretary, had increased noticeably.

Miss Endicott was worried; starkly worried. A few months ago she had faced the discomfort of a diminishing income, the annoyance of a curtailment of the luxuries that she regarded as her inalienable right, and Jack's right also. Now, risking many thousands in a brilliant flight which was to bring untold wealth, she found herself steadily called on for more money and still more, to cover what she had already put in.

"As soon as we open up the Rasario vein, the returns will roll in," Parsons would explain. "But it takes capital to operate. All mines have to start this way."

But the Rosario vein was insatiable in its hunger for money. Miss Endicott found herself part owner of a copper mine of amazing promise and there was a thrill about that, but meantime she made further trips to the strongbox—which she unwisely kept in the house because her father had kept it there—and brought out still more of her gilt-edge securities. Sometimes she trembled over it, but she had gone too far to turn back now. Back of the storm clouds shone a golden horizon, but the storm seemed near. If she could only weather it, all would be well for her and Jack. Meantime he must not know of her new investment.

She picked up the letter again, steadying her shaking hand. Dusk had fallen, and she turned on the electric reading lamp near her to glance again over Jack's letter. The part that pleased her most came last:

"And so I am coming east for a week," Jack wrote. "I am using Tom Bates' wedding as an excuse to look around the old town and see my friends. And as you are the first girl I ever had and still in the running, I am coming first to see you, and then I shall go back again after the wedding. Beechwood will look good to me after this town. But you are not to worry about the work I am doing, because I am getting lots of fun out of it and learning things about cars that I could not find out in any other way."

She sighed over the last few sentences. It was completely beyond her comprehension that a Moreland and an Endicott should soil his hands with common labor. Still, it seemed to please him, and the main point was that he was coming home. Among his old friends in the station of life in which he belonged, he might forget this absurd idea. She wondered if he had forgotten his apparently brief affair with the Staunton girl, and where the girl had gone. Living in a more secluded way since Jack's departure she had heard nothing of Gloria's amazing change of fortune.

"I will see Mr. Parson's here."

Miss Endicott's voice did not have the crisp imperiousness that it usually had when she gave an order. Even to the maid it sounded tired. She said as much in a cautious undertone to the private secretary, Miss Sara Dalton, who had been going out for a stroll in the grounds, but who, when the maid was gone, changed her mind and came back.

As Parsons came up to Miss Endicott's sitting room he gave Miss Dalton, who was in the hall, a brief nod. He had met the secretary only once or twice and was not in the least interested in her existence. She was not his kind, with her plain wide smile and composed cool eyes. Besides, he did not want a third person meddling around. He went on to Miss Endicott's sitting room. Sara heard his bluff hearty greeting—he affected the "rough diamond" type—and Miss Endicott's measured tones in reply. Parsons spoke again with slightly lowered voice, and she caught the single word "Rosario." Then the door closed.

Sara Dalton slipped into the room across the hall and sat there, thinking hard.

For full half an hour she heard the rise and fall of Parson's voice. The man had a good speaking voice, rich, mellow and persuasive. There was something hypnotic about its muffled cadences beating steadily and musically on her ears. Of course she could not distinguish the words and she had not reached the point of being willing to listen at keyholes. Sara wondered why she was doing this at all. Miss Endicott would be the last person to thank her for her surveillance.

A muffled crash brought her to her feet. It was a double crash, as if some heavy object had fallen striking first a table and then the floor. The second sound had scarcely died before Sara was across the hall and had opened the door.

What she saw was not to be lightly forgotten. Miss Endicott was not in sight. She evidently had gone into the adjoining room, but the man Parsons was half out of his chair, leaning forward with eyes fixed avidly on something in the room beyond.

Sara was across the room in an instant. She saw Parsons' guilty jerk and quick recovery, heard his hasty "Something seems to have happened in there!" but did not stop to pay the slightest attention to him.

What she saw through the doorway was an open metal-bound box lying on the floor in a scattered drift of papers; long, neatly folded papers shaded green and yellow and gray, crisp of texture and closely engraved. Bonds, most of them. Sara caught a glimpse of rows of coupons, and groaned to herself at the insane folly of keeping such things in the house. Bending over this amazing litter was Miss Endicott dragging the bonds together with trembling fingers. Back of her was the opened door of an old fashioned safe.

Sara knew in an instant what had happened. Miss Endicott had attempted to carry the box from the safe to the table, and that unsteady hand had treacherously failed her.

This much Sara had time to see, and no more. Miss Endicott straightened at the first sound of her step across the threshold and stood rigid with astonishment and anger.

"Miss Dalton, did I ring for you?"

The incisive words were meant to cut, and they did.

"Why, no!" Sara fairly stammered in her surprise. "But I heard a crash and I thought you might be hurt."

Miss Endicott listened with frigid politeness. She was angry beyond measure that her secretary should have intruded upon her private affairs. She inclined her head toward the door in curt dismissal.

"Your fears are quite unfounded. And remember in the future that I do not wish you to enter my room unless I send for you. That is all."

Sara turned. She looked down, not from any sense of defeat, but because she was afraid that if she looked this insolent old woman in the eye she would hotly tell her just what she thought of her, that she might be a dozen Endicotts, and yet be nothing more than the pitiful dupe of a cheap swindler.

Under her eyes, lying by the edge of the rug near the door was a smaller, lighter paper than the others. It looked like a circular. Sara just glimpsed the word "United Rosario."

She stumbled awkwardly, upturning the edge of the rug.

"Miss Dalton!" Miss Endicott's voice rang sharp with annoyance. "Pray look where you are going!"

"Sorry," mumbled Sara. She seemed to be covered with embarrassment, but her usually reliable heart was pumping excitedly. She pushed the rug back with one foot, but when it droped into place the circular of the United Rosario Copper Company was safely hidden beneath it. It would be all right there until tomorrow.

Shannonville

Shannonville — Mrs. Westcott, Shannonville's grand old lady, observed her eightieth birthday on Monday without any celebration. The day was spent very quietly by Mrs. Westcott who received her many friends during the day and bade them welcome with her customary charming and dignified manner which has won her a host of friends in this community. The Intelligencer correspondent called at her home and she responded to his various queries with very good humour. When he remarked that he had sixty-one years to go to equal her age Mrs. Westcott replied very seriously that they would go much quicker than the first ones had. Mrs. Westcott did not offer any advice to those that wish to know how to reach such a ripe old age. Mrs. Westcott has not only reached the eightieth mark but she has reached the age in remarkable health. She possesses keen eyesight, can hear as well as a young person and is able to get around with remarkable agility.

Her afternoon mail consisted of many birthday cards from her family and friends in nearby and distant cities. One card that she particularly cherished was the one that came from the Women's Institute of the village of which Mrs. Westcott is a valued member.

No Unemployment

A survey undertaken by the Intelligencer representative during the early part of the week showed that there was little or no unemployment in the village and surrounding district at the present time and it is to be hoped that the present remarkable condition will last for a lengthy period. The men are employed at various jobs. A large number is employed on the No. 2 highway, a few on the railroad and some are trapping. It would be practically impossible to engage a man in the village today unless the prospective employer would be prepared to pay "TOP" wages. The village has every right to be proud of its present status although it would be impossible to predict how long any of the jobs will last.

Guild Dance

A rather small crowd attended the dance held in the Orange Hall on Tuesday night under the auspices of the Shannonville Women's Guild. Delightful music for the dancing was furnished by Jack Denmark and his "Aces" of Deseronto. At the social hour lunch was served by the ladies.

Mrs. Lela Stewart spent Sunday in Toronto the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Reginald Watson and Mr. Watson.

Little Miss Lois Larone spent the Easter Holidays with Mr. and Mrs. William Boldrick of Latta.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Juby and Mrs. Bert Juby were Sunday callers at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Stapley and Mrs. Nathan Eggleton. The latter is confined to her home due to illness.

Mr. Ronald Mayell is employed at the present time in Belleville at Baragar's garage.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Juby were Sunday afternoon guests of Mr. and Mrs. Russell MacFarlane of Trenton.

Mr. Robert Christmas is a patient in the Kingston General Hospital. The deepest sympathy of the community is extended to Mr. Christmas and family.

Mr. William Uens and daughter Bertha of Mountain Grove and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Uens and daughter Audrey of Strathcona were Sunday afternoon guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Cook.

Mr. and Mrs. William Houston and Mrs. C. McGee were Sunday guests of Mr. Edward Uens of Napanee.

The Shannonville Fair Board held a meeting at Vivian's Garage on Wednesday night with a fairly large number of members in attendance. Important matters were discussed although nothing definite was decided upon at the meeting. Mr. Andrew Reid, President of the fair board, presided at the meeting.

Mrs. Ross Shetler is confined to her home due to illness. The community extends its sympathy and best wishes to Mrs. Shetler.

Little Miss Evelyn Cook spent the Easter vacation with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Hudson Cook.

Tweed

Tweed — On Monday the Horticultural Society met in the Council Chambers with Mrs. H. M. Countryman the president in the chair. The minutes of the previous meeting and a number of communications were read by the secretary, Miss Cosey Meiklejohn.

A motion was passed to hold the annual Bird Box Contest which has been a prominent feature of the Juvenile work undertaken by the Society for a number of years. The competition is open to boys and girls of the Consolidated School and the Separate School. It is divided into two sections: Senior for pupils of grades 7 and 8, and Junior for pupils of the lower grades. The children will be judged on their bartin, bluebird (or tree swallow), robin and wren boxes and suitable cash prizes will be awarded. In 1938 approximately 65 boxes were exhibited. Mrs. P. T. Bowlby and Mrs. F. C. Arber were appointed to canvass for prizes.

The following were appointed to canvass for members for the Society:

Messrs. G. A. Meiklejohn and J. O. Sager, Mrs. J. C. Hayes, Mrs. S. G. Way, Mrs. F B. Foster, Mrs. A. C. Blakely, Mrs. D. W. Sills, Mrs. H. M. Countryman, Mrs. C. R. Porritt.

Mrs. H. M. Countryman who was the official delegate to the Ontario Horticultural Convention in Toronto, gave an excellent report of the proceedings of that body. Following the report there was discussion of some of the information contained therein. Dr. P. T. Bowlby gave some interesting facts regarding the Canadian and other kinds of walnut trees. Several years ago he planted a number of walnuts in Tweed, and in 1938 one of the trees bore fruit. Dr. Bowlby offered walnuts to anyone who wished to plant them and a number accepted his offer.

There is little sign of the breaking up of the ice in Stoco Lake. Beyond the rise in water along the shoreline and the cutting of a channel at the inlet there was little change in the appearance of the ice on Wednesday. The ice left the lake on April 16th last year. Old-timers who have observed the movement of the ice over a period of years state that it seldom goes out of the lake earlier than April 13th or later than April 16th. It will probably be considerably later this year. however.

Team Flags, Individual Crests Presented at Annual Banquet Of O. S. D. Athletic Club

N. A. Beach of Albert College Addresses Students on Sportsmanship

WINNERS PRAISED

Impromptu Speeches Are Given by Recipients of Prizes

Honoring their school athletic champions, the Boys' Athletic Association of the Ontario School for the Deaf held their annual athletic banquet and presentation of championship team pennants and individual crests in the O.S.D. auditorium last evening with Mr. N. A. Beach, physical director of Albert College as the guest speaker of the evening Mr. Beach spoke on "The value of true sportsmanship in athletics towards the building of youth for manhood."

Chairman W. J. Morrison, superintendent at O.S.D., introduced the respective school athletic champions and captains of championship athletic teams who won on the field of sport at the O.S.D. during the past year. In turn each recipient of crests or pennants capably responded. The auditorium was fittingly decorated with bronze-colored plaques, depicting the various phases of athletics as included in the sports program at the O.S.D. during the respective seasons.

Many Advantages

In opening his discourse on the value of clean and true sportsmanship, Mr. Beach referred to the advantages of clean sporting activities in competitive sports. "A good athlete has many responsibilities. He is looked up to by many and therefore his character must be beyond reproach. When you are a champion or winner in any line of sport at your school others look up to you and respect you. You are watched so it remains for you as champions to set an example to others. We all like to win but the great thing in sport is not whether you win or lose but how you play the game. Your future character is being built on the athletic field, therefore guard carefully your actions in the sight of others, to whom you may be a hero," advised Mr. Beach as he concluded by congratulating the O.S.D. champions of 1938-39 upon the splendid record they had attained on the field of sport. Others to give impromptu speeches were J. W. Hodgson, athletic director at the O.S.D., his predecessor, Frank Cunningham and other speakers were heard during the evening. Representatives of the Kiwanis Club and the Belleville 'Hi-Speeds' were invited guests.

Two of the features included at the honoring banquet of O.S.D. athletic champions, insofar as the invited guests from Belleville were the singing of the National Anthem and the responses of the recipients of crests and pennants all of which was done vocally, the result of the extended education in the learning of the deaf pupils the use of their vocal chords in teaching them to talk. During the presentations and principal talk of the evening, however, Mr. Geo. P. Stewart acted as interpreter. Mr. Morrison, the superintendent of the O.S.D., welcomed the guests and personally congratulated the respective school athletic champions.

BELLEVILLE GOLF BOWLING CHAMPS

Deacon Sports Wear Defeated in Finals for Major Title in 2 Straight

The Belleville Golf Club bowling team captured the championship of the major league of the Recreation Alleys in two straight games winning the second one last evening by a mere 57 pins and then only when the anchor man, Joe Legault fashioned four straight strikes in the last two frames to roll a tidy 315 for the high single of the night. Deacon Sports Wear won the first half of the schedule and the Belleville Golf the second half and in the playoff the Golf trundlers showed more consistency in the pinch.

In the first game the winners defeated their opponents by 80 pins and in the second game, the Deacons took off five but in the third, although they won by 18 pins, the Golf Club had enough pins in reserve to survive the last rally. The bowling generally was exceptionally good with the winners showing more fight in the pinches. Joe Legault was high for his team and for the night with a neat 746 with 315 game helping materially to swell the total. Evan Barlow was consistent with a 672 just missing three 200 or over in one game. Art Little had 648 for third high of his team with Pat Drumm close behind with 644 and Ted Hughes with 517, the latter having a lot of trouble with head pins.

Art Whalen one of the most consistent bowlers in the city had 736 to lead his team and be second high for the night on both squads but was closely followed by Les Shiels with 678 and Don Gariepy was only nine pins down from this total. Dave Tobe could not get over the 600 mark while "Stub" Barrett had a bad night with a 495. The cup and prizes will be presented to the winning bowlers in the near future, when the annual banquet will be held. The teams and scores:

SENIOR FINALS PROLONGED AS MONTREAL WINS

Port Arthur Bear Cats Defeated in Third Game 6-4

O'CONNOR RETURNS

Shifty Centre Out With Injuries Sparks Play of First Line

(By Robert Clarke, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Montreal, April 21 (CP)—Whatever fate may be in store for Montreal Royals in their Allan Cup series with Port Arthur Bear Cats, no one will be able to question the fighting qualities of the eastern champions.

They waged an uphill fight to defeat Toronto Goodyears in a best-of-five series that went the limit for the eastern crown, and they refused to acknowledge defeat even when two games down to Port Arthur for the Canadian senior hockey crown. They forced their way back into the picture last night before 10,127 paid customers with a 6-4 victory in the third game.

Coach Frank Carlin and all his players were confident that Monday night would see them even the round at two games apiece and send the cup final into fifth and deciding game. The Bear Cats, striving to succeed Trail Smoke Eaters as Allan Cup holders, won the first game 6-5 in overtime and the second 3-1.

O'Connor Supplies Impetus

Royals were minus centreman Buddy O'Connor, out with a dislocated shoulder, in the first two games but the lightweight star was back last night to provide the Montrealers with the impetus needed for victory. Though he failed to score, getting only an assist on a second period goal, O'Connor undoubtedly was the inspiration behind the Montreal victory.

His return meant the reuniting of the O'Connor-Gerry Heffernon-Pete Morin line, responsible in the main for the team's great march to the final. Heffernan, at a loss in the first two games without O'Connor to make plays, bagged one goal and his play in general was improved greatly. Morin also accounting for a tally, his fifth of the series.

Jotkus Scores Winner

The winning score came late in the third period while defenceman Hugh O'Leary was serving a penalty. Pete Jotkus slapped home a shot in the 17th minute from a few feet out to send Royals ahead 5-4, and in the last minute Cy Allen put the game away with a goal on a breakaway. The two other Montreal goals were scored by Ken Murray.

Nineteen-year-old Edgar Laprade centre of the Port's second line, again led his team scoring two goals—his third and fourth of the series. J. MacArthur and Stan King tallied the other Port Arthur scores.

Coach Jazzy Manahan of the Ports forsook his usual reserve and announced he expected his Bear Cats "to end the series in the next game."

KIWANIS CLUB TO SPONSOR LOOP

Picton Club Preparing to Help Out Softball League

Picton, April 21—Picton may have a softball league as well as hardball. At the Kiwanis Club yesterday L. B. Calnan made the suggestion that such a league be organized, as there would be long evenings with daylight saving time in effect. There had been a successful league a few years ago. The sports committee of the club, composed of W. McLean, Albert Grindron and Sid Lockyer was appointed to interview those interested in entering teams. They will report at the next meeting of the club.

MOTHERWELL AND CLYDE MEET IN SCOTTISH FINAL

Cup Game at Hampden Park, Glasgow, Will Attract 100,000

EVERTON NEEDS POINT

English Football League is Fast Drawing to a Close

Glasgow April 21 (CP Cable) — Hampden Park again is the venue for the feature on the United Kingdom's sport program at the weekend. A week ago International rivalry was at its height when England defeated Scotland 2-1 but Saturday Clyde and Motherwell meet in an all-Scottish event, the soccer cup final.

Superimposed on the regular league schedule, the cup final is expected to attract 100,000 or more enthusiasts to the big enclosure which last week housed a crowd of 150,000. Rangers and Celtic, Glasgow's two leading clubs, play attractive home league games that will draw a large number of their own supporters.

Everton Nearly In

In England the league schedule rapidly draws to a close with Everton needing only a point for its fifth championship and Blackburn Rovers only two short of the number required to clinch first place in the second division. Newport County and Barnsley have already made sure of promotion as leaders of the third division's southern and northern circuits.

There is little to choose between the survivors of the long Scottish tournament. Clyde has a rugged, more vigorous eleven sparked by W. Martin centre-forward who scored all his side's goals in their 4-1 victory over Rangers in the third round. Motherwell is a smooth well-balanced team with more penetrative forwards and a stronger halfback line.

Teams at Full Strength

Brenner hard-working Motherwell inside-right who had been on the injured list reported fit yesterday and as a result the teams are expected to play at full strength. Few critics are willing to speculate on the outcome of the game but in any case it will be the winning team's initial cup success.

Motherwell has twice reached the final succumbing each time to Celtic, in 1931 and 1933. When the Fir Parkers trounced the Glasgow Irishmen 3-0 in the fourth round of the current competition it was sweet revenge for the earlier defeats. Clyde has a good cup-fighting record but has never reached the final.

Everton will be at full strength for its game with Charlton Athletic in London and is confident of bagging the point necessary for the championship. Blackburn makes a long journey to Plymouth where its hope of clinching first place in the intermediate league may be deferred.

Three teams are engaged in a bitter struggle to qualify for promotion along with Blackburn. Luton Town is favored to take two points in a home match against Millwall. Sheffield United entertain Fulham and Sheffield Wednesday must play at top form to win at Burnley.

Three Games Played Resulted in Shutouts by 2-0

GROVE IS BEATEN

Yankees Score Run on Homer and Triple to Down Boston

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

This Major League Baseball season is scarcely half a week old and already has given more tight fits than a shoe store.

The rainmaker cut yesterday's card to five games but three of these were 2-0 shutouts, another was a 14-inning 8-7 grind and the fifth was a 5-3 affair.

The prize performance yesterday was a three-hit stunt by Louis Fette a durable 32-year-old righthander who bears much of Boston Bees' hopes. Fette held Philadelphia Phillies to three singles to acquire one of the season's first shutouts. He had to outpitch 38-year-old Syl Johnson and Jennings Poindexter who shared a six-hit swat at the Bees.

Grove Still Good

Of more sentimental but less intrinsic worth was the way old Bob (Lefty) Grove of Boston Red Sox held New York Yankees to seven hits to emphasize that at 39 and starting on his 15th term under the big top he still rates with the best.

But like a lot of other good pitching jobs wrecked by the Yankee powerhouse Grove's blew up in his face when big Bill Dickey got the world champions' first home run of the year and Jake Powell tripled home another score to stop the Sox 2-0.

George Jasper Caster who is nearing his 30th birthday and has been knocking around in and out of the majors since getting his first trial with Philadelphia Athletics in 1934, provided the A's with a four-hit gem for the day's third shutout.

At De Shong's Expense

It was at the expense of Washington Senators and Jim De Shong, who at 28 is one of the oldest pitchers on the Senators' staff. De Shong gave up only three hits in six innings, but this was sufficient for catcher Earle Brucker to score one run and bat in another for the Athletics' markers.

Luke Hamlin gave Brooklyn Dodgers a seven-hit pitching job as they beaned New York Giants, 7-5 chiefly because of the wildness of Hal Schumacher. His arm evidently not fully mended by an operation last winter, Schumacher gave four walks and a wild pitch in addition to eight hits during his six inning tour.

The pitching wasn't so prideful at Detroit, where the Tigers got 19 hits and Chicago White Sox nine, but the battle was longer and harder than all the rest. A home run by Hank Greenberg in the 14th gave the Tigers their second victory of the season 8-7.

"Y" ALLEYS

In a return game the Belleville ladies got all four points from the Peterboro ladies winning the round 5 to 3. Mrs. Mott was high for Belleville with 173 166 146—495. Mrs. Crowe was high for Peterboro with 156 190 145—491. Scores of teams as follows:

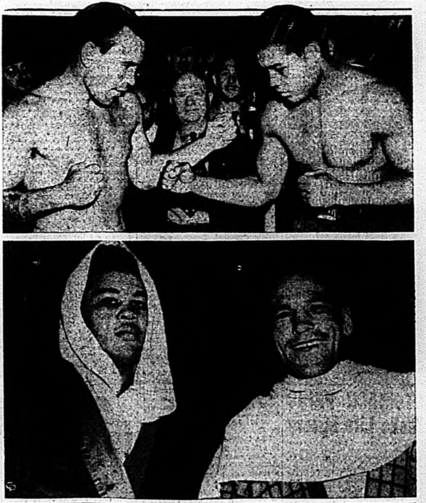
Plus Buddy O'Connor the Montreal Royals prolonged the Allan cup finals somewhat when they downed the Port Arthur Bear Cats 6-4 last night to win their first decision in three starts. It begins to look as though the Royals might have made a better showing had O'Connor and Gamble, two injured players, been available for this Allan cup finals.



THEY PICKED UP A FEW THOUSAND DOLLARS EACH BETWEEN PICTURES

"Before and After" would be a most apt caption for these pictures, taken in Los Angeles where a large portion of the population turned out for what was billed as a fight for the world's heavyweight championship between Joe Louis and ancient Jack Roper. TOP, a picture that's always taken on such occasions, the principals strike a fighting pose at the weighing-in ceremonies; and BOTTOM, after the battle, the loser poses with his conqueror after extending congratulations. In the pre-battle posing venerable Jack's face assumes a fighting attitude, but after the battle (of two minutes 20 seconds) he's all smiles, one very good reason possibly being that he's between five and ten thousand dollars richer and none the worse for wear. To champion Joe it's just one of those things . . . .and another $40,000 in the bank.

Jack Cooper, the lone heavyweight lifting member of the Hastings Weightlifting Club, has been invited to compete in the Canadian weightlifting championships in Toronto on May 12th. Norm Miller of the Canadian Federation of Weightlifting, personally invited Cooper to compete at Toronto following the recommendation of Tommy Pedder, coach of the local lifters and North American champion in the 123 1-4 pound class. Cooper qualified for the Canadian championships when he successfully lifted a total of better than 700 pounds in three lifts during the County championships held here recently. Abe Zovankin, Hamilton Tiger rugby football player, will be one of Cooper's chief rivals. Leon Shortt in the 123 pound class is another outstanding exponent of this new athletic diversion around these parts. Inspired by Coach Tommy Pedder the Hastings County weightlifters train diligently at the Y.M.C.A. and will later display their wares locally. Incidentally Pedder will compete in the United States National championship, defending his title in June.

"Hankus Pankus" Goldup, Kingston's gift to Toronto senior hockey circles was signed by the Toronto Maple Leafs yesterday. Goldup, 20-year-old left winger with the Goodyears this season, signed a two-year professional contract with the Queen City National Hockey squad and will report at the Leafian training camp next fall. A 175-pound speed skater, Goldup went to Toronto three years ago, migrating from Wally Elmer's good junior team of that period. Goldup was the second member of the Goodyears to be signed by the Leafs in the past 10 days, Don Metz joining Con Smythe's squad during the Stanley Cup finals. Although Goldup signed a two year contract with the Leafs, it will remain to be seen whether he sticks up in the big show or not when he trains with the squad next fall. Failing to stay up under the big tent Goldup will be sent to Syracuse, Toronto's farm in the International League.

Dairo Lodigiana's chances of nabbing the third sack post with Philadelphia Athletics look bright. Lodigiana, native of San Francisco who went to Vancouver, B.C., from Oakland of the Pacific Coast league in 1936, led the Vancouver Senior Amateur Baseball league batting average with .368. He went back to Oakland at the end of the 1936 season and was bought by the Athletics in 1938.

Leon "Goose" Goslin, former American League starry outfielder, was recently signed to manage the Trenton N.J., Senators, in the Eastern League. Goslin, one of the greats of American League fly-chasers, will be a player-manager at Trenton.

Daniel M. Daniel, writing in the St. Louis Sporting News, strings along with all other sport writers in selecting the Yankees as repeaters in the American League, but not with as large a margin as last year, claiming their pitching will bog down. He places the Red Sox a close second. Over in the National League, however, he takes the Cubs over the field as he claims Lee and Bryant will win at least 40 games between them and it requires a 40-game pair to clinch the bunting, quoth Daniel. In order Daniel selects Giants, Reds, Pirates and Cardinals to battle it out for the first division positions behind the Cubs, but predicts they will finish in the above order. No major league club has ever won four successive league pennants, a jinx the Yankees must overcome, but they established a precedent in winning three world series last fall.

In reviewing the potential strength of a baseball team for Belleville in the Bay of Quinte League yesterday, we forgot to mention the name of Bud Wilkins, the diminutive righthander who always met with mound success versus either Napanee or Kingston. With Wilkins available it would give the locals five hurlers, two tossing 'em from the portside and three righthanders. We were in conversation with Carl Casey, former Belleville senior hurler, recently. Carl is employed at Brampton and will pitch for the Port Credit seniors in the newly formed Toronto-Peterboro senior league. While on the subject of baseball, players and fans alike are urged to attend tonight's baseball conclave at the Y.M.C.A. election of officers and the general welfare of baseball will be the topic of discussion at an open meeting.

We had the extreme pleasure of attending the annual athletic banquet and presentation of crests and pennants, won by the students at O.S.D. during the past year on the field of sports last evening. Actually it was a revelation to see the keen interest the boys at the O.S.D. take in their athletic endeavours. Frankly speaking they put hearing boys to shame in this respect. However, what paramountly interested us were the verbal responses made by the respective team captains and individual champions. Handicapped through lack of hearing, these courageous lads faced the large gathering of some 125 persons, including many guests, and read out loud their responses and tendered their personal thanks to Mr. Morrison, the school superintendent and others who materially assisted them in their academic and athletic training. Their vocal deliverance of the National Anthem would have been a credit to any such gathering of hearing folk.

New city bowling champions were crowned at the Recreation Alleys last night when the Belleville Golf quintette eliminated the Deacon Sportwear squad. The Belleville Golfers won the City Major League honors by taking the measure of the Deacons in two straight games in the finals.

Syracuse was the only home club to win an opening game in the International League yesterday, the Chiefs beat the Leafs 5-2. Down at Jersey City the "little Giants" bowed to Buffalo before the largest minor league baseball crowd in history, over 45,000 being on hand. "Hammerin' Hank" Greenberg pounded out his first homer yesterday and Red Ruffing bested Lefty Grove as the Yankees beat the Red Sox 2-0. Goody Rosen collected another brace of hits yesterday for the Dodgers. The Boston Bees and Detroit Tigers are leaders in their respective major baseball loops.

Germans Charge Anti-German Incidents in Poland

Berlin, April 21 —(AP)— The German News Agency reported today from Katowice, Poland, that anti-German agitation of the Polish WestSociety had received "special impetus" during its present "propaganda week."

The agency listed the following alleged incidents:—

The smashing of office windows of the newspaper Oberschleisischen Kuriers.

The theft and demolition with axes of a school bus which carried German children from Petrowitz to a private school at Kostuchna.

Confiscation of German newspapers taken from newsboys and newsdealers in various districts.

(Michal Grazynski, Governor of Polish Silesia, in an interview published in a Warsaw newspaper yesterday said there had been numerous trials of Germans in his province for "organizing illegal political organizations against the Polish state," and "maintaining an insulting attitude toward the Polish people."

The Stars Say—

For Saturday, April 22

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

LIVELY conditions may mark this day, according to the predominant astral influences, although these may have some doubtful and disturbing angles. Irritating situations may arise and these will be best met by tact, shrewdness or compromise rather than aggressive or otherwise obnoxious methods. Confer with superiors as they will be friendly and co-operative.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a lively year and one of fair opportunity for progress and advancement. Cleverness, stratagem and shrewdness may win desired objectives where disputes, impulsive and rash behavior would defeat them. Superiors and those in power show signs of preferment and good will.

A child born on this day may be extremely clever, energetic and ambitious. It may be disposed to be rash, impetuous and aggressive, whereas subtler methods would prove more effective. Early discipline would benefit in this direction.

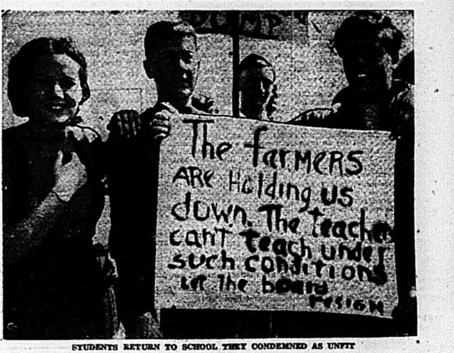
Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery—taken regularly — tends to improve your digestion. Bert Etherington, 117 Regent St., Stratford, Ont., says: "When I lack pep or energy or do not eat well, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery soon helps to put me on my feet again. It helps a person to sleep better at night, relieves acid indigestion and upset stomach and really does help to tone you up." Ask your druggist today for it in liquid or tablets.

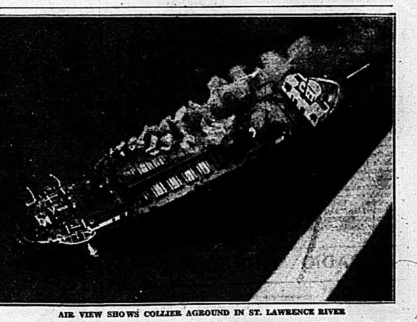
HAS HITLER RE-WON RUMANIA?

Following the recent British anti-aggression guarantees to Rumania, King Carol announced that he would burn up Rumania's vast oil fields to prevent their falling into German or Italian hands in the event of war. Now the Reich has announced a "far-reaching agreement" with Rumania following talks between Rumanian Foreign Minister Gafencu, (LEFT), and Chancellor Hitler, during Gafencu's visit to Berlin to attend the monster birthday celebration for Der Fuehrer.



STUDENTS RETURN TO SCHOOL THEY CONDEMNED AS UNFIT

Losing their strike against attending an unlighted school, 300 pupils of Port Haney, B.C., trooped back to their class rooms. They had trooped out of the school, parading with signs as the ABOVE, but the strike ended after three days when the students' council voted 11-5 for returning to classes. "Too many girls on the council!" exclaimed some of the irate males.



AIR VIEW SHOWS COLLIER AGROUND IN ST. LAWRENCE RIVER

Straying a quarter-mile off its course in a heavy fog that blanketed the St. Lawrence yesterday morning, the collier Valley Camp, loaded with 2,600 tons of soft coal, grounded on a shoal about five miles west of Brockville. The ship today is still firmly aground, as shown by this air photo. Capt. Bruce Nichols of Toronto radio-telephoned to a salvage company, which is sending a tug from Kingston. Aboard the ship, which is in no danger of sinking, are first mate Donald MacDonald of Prescott and a crew of 27 men.

ACTION IN THE UNDECLARED WAR OF THE ORIENT

Almost forgotten by the recent happenings in Europe, the undeclared war between Japan and China is still in progress. This splendid action picture, just received on this continent, shows Japanese troops on the run as they occupied the strategically important city of Nanchung. The invading troops found that the retreating Chinese had destroyed bridges and warehouses before fleeing.

Friend of the Insured

By A. L. RESWELL

Avis Butler walked up to Miss Berry on the Business Girls club verandah, her nose well in the air. "Lo, dear lady," she said carelessly. She was the only person in the entire club who didn't find Miss Berry "disgustingly boresome."

Miss Berry smiled amiably.

"Hello dear, you look warm. Did you work hard?"

"Nope, life's too short."

Avis sauntered on. She knew that every girl in the club criticized her unkindly for befriending the neglected Miss Berry, whom they looked upon as an intruder occupying a young girl's space.

"I'd go coocoo if I had to eat at the same table with Old Lady Berry," said Meg Forrest, one of the self-asserted elite. "Does she still talk about murders, Avis?"

"On the contrary, girls, I think Miss Berry is very pleasing and interesting," replied Avis, descending the stairs in response to the dinner bell.

"Miss Berry's Beau Brummel," someone laughed at the next table.

Avis knew that such unkind, catty remarks were intended for her benefit alone, as Miss Berry was quite deaf. Turing her head slightly, she said: "Miss Berry, I have some delicious fudge in my room; won't you come in a little later in the evening and sample some?"

"Yes, I love candy. So kind of you to think of me" Miss Berry beamed happily. "You're a rare jewel—yes, indeed!"

Instantly "jewel" was pounced upon.

"Ha-ha, a jewel! We ought to call in an expert to examine our jewel." Avis recognized Meg's voice but ignored it.

"Missing from the Romanoff collection," jeered Sophie Wallace.

"Let's take up a collection and buy a proper setting," suggested one of the Hays twins.

"What's all the boisterous laughing about?" queried Miss Berry, somewhat annoyed. "There must be some reason for it. Don't you think so?"

"Yes, there must be," Avis replied ruefully. "Usually it's just a bit of thoughtless diversion. I'll carry the water up for you."

Next morning Avis was as fresh and jubilant as ever.

"Lo, everybody! What have we for breakfast?" Avis greeted them all. "Oh, where's my dear lady?"

"I guess she's sick," answered Sophie, her mouth full of oatmeal. "I saw the matron go into her room early this morning."

During the next two weeks Avis ministered to the rapidly-failing Miss Berry, with the solicitude and diligence of a faithful friend. The duties were too burdensome for the matron, and the doctor advised a journey to the hospital.

"Has Miss Berry got to go to the hospital?" inquired Sophie, munching an apple. "Gosh, that's awful!"

"Yes, doctor advised her to go immediately," said Avis mournfully. "I wish the hospital wasn't quite so far away."

"Say, it's none of my business, but why are you so nuts about Miss Berry?"

"Why, Sophie, I couldn't but reciprocate, she was so kind to me when I first came here—I was desperately lonesome"

"The ambulance is here!" someone shouted downstairs.

That afternoon Miss Berry was taken to a distant city to rest next to her only sister, and Avis was left alone with the careless and carefree number of girls to mourn her friend, who criticized one minute and sympathized the next.

"Avis, for goodness sake, why don't you come in and have a good old time with us?" invited Meg. "Your brooding and mooning for that old Miss Berry won't get you anywhere."

"A young gentleman to see you, Avis," called the matron.

"Which of you is Miss Avis Butler?" asked a very nice-appearing young man.

"I've got a surprise for you," the stranger said, pulling out some papers from his pocket. "I'm Miss Berry's nephew and lawyer Paul Newhall," he added. "My aunt left you a small legacy, an insurance policy of two thousand dollars, naming you as the death beneficiary. 'Avis Butler, friend of the insured'," he read. "Tomorrow you take this policy and meet me at the office and everything will be o.k."

Avis was overcome, and with tears in her eyes bade the young lawyer goodnight.

"Believe me, next time I'll hang around old ladies," cried Sophie. "Just look what we missed by being mean and catty."

"And I know one thing, and that is that Avis won't be with us very much longer—not unless I can't read men's eyes," eased Meg. "Girls, did you see Mr. Newhall giving her the once-over?"

But Avis only smiled.

Little Benny's Note Book

The Dawters of Cleopattera are going to give a play to celebrate their anniversity and ma is going to act in it, and she came home today looking all tired out after rehearsal, and we were eating supper and pop said, How's the Drama, my deer?

Dont mention that play to me, ma said. I started off with 2 complete lines, Mrs. Updyke will be here at any moment, and Here comes Mrs. Updyke now. I mean I had a real chance, because I could use my first line to build up the 2nd, and then Mrs. Papst the authoress and director took away the first line and left me with Here comes Mrs. Updyke now, and of course even that had 5 separate and distinct words and I had a chance to add intensity to them as I went along but now that awful Mrs. Papst wants me to meerly say She's coming. What can I do with She's coming? I half believe Mrs. Papst is trying to belittle me before the rest of the cast and I have a good mind to resign in a good huff, ma said.

Well now, I think you're taking the wrong attitude, pop said. I believe Mrs. Papst is paying a suttle tribute to your art, he said, and ma said, In what way for land sakes?

Why, anybody can make an impression with enough words to work with, but to get a feeling across with only 2 words, that takes talent pop said. I've heard that great geniuses like Bernhart and Duse could melt or freeze an audience without even one word, just with the rustle of a nostril or the quiver of an eyebrow, so I guess that puts you in pretty fast company, he said, and ma said, O Willyum maybe you're right, I'll put more in my She's coming than Blantche Hipple could get in a whole book, even if she has the leeding roll, I'll show that Hannah Mabel Papst, I'll show them all.

Wich she proberly will.

An Adventure in Shadowland

Knarf Tells You What Your Toys Eat

By MAX TRELL

I DON'T suppose you ever knew that toys eat dinner. But they do. At any rate Knarf, the shadow-boy, told me so. You don't have to believe it unless you choose. But this is the story he told me of the dinner which the toys who live in the play-room had the other night.

It was just a few minutes before eight o'clock—said Knarf—and the children had already gone upstairs to bed. The playroom was quite dark except for the light of the moon which filtered in through the curtains at the window.

All Were Still

All the toys were still. Mary-Jane, the rag doll, seemed to be lying asleep in the corner. General Tin, the tin soldier, stood motionless near the playroom-door with his musket over his shoulder. Mr. Punch, and his wife Judy were dozing on the steps of their little show house. The lights in the doll house were out. The only thing that made a sound was the cuckoo clock on the wall. Tick-tock, tick-tock it went.

Then suddenly (it was exactly eight o'clock!) the door of the cuckoo clock sprang open. The next instant Mrs. Cuckoo herself came out of her door and stood on her front steps and called out:—"Dinner-time! Dinner-time!" Eight times she called it (though everyone in the house thought she was only calling eight o'clock).

Came to Life

And at the eighth time the toys all at once came to life. Mary-Jane got to her feet and smiled. General Tin took his musket off his shoulder and marched across the room. Mr. Punch opened his eyes and stretched. Judy said: "Oh! it's time to eat!"

"Dinner-time! Dinner-time!"

And the next moment the lights went on in the doll house. There was a table spread for all the toys—a wonderful dinner!

Do you know what they ate? Just listen.

Mary-Jane ate a bit of calico, General Tin ate a little spoon, Judy ate a red-and-blue string, Miss China Doll ate a colored bead, and Mr. Punch—well Mr. Punch ate a saucer-full of sawdust.

Now that's the kind of dinner that toys eat. But remember, I didn't see them eat it. I'm just telling you what Knarf told me.

Toronto Produce Remains Unchanged

Toronto, April 21—Former values prevailed in all lines on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Buyers displayed little enthusiasm on the butter market, but prices held unchanged in the draggy trading. There was no apparent selling pressure and offerings were not burdensome. Although an odd sale of regraded was reported sold at 20 3-4c, the market for Ontario creamery solids closed at 21c for No. 1 grades and 20 1-4c for 38 score.

Fresh receipts were arriving in comparatively light volume for this time of the year and the egg market presented a firm tone. While offerings were readily taken up, there were sufficient supplies available to fill requirements. Prices remained steady. Graded shipments cleared at 20 1-2c for grade A-large, 19 1-2c for medium, 18 1-2c for pullets and 18c for B and C grades.

Montreal Butter Off

Montreal, April 21 (CP)—Butter prices dipped fractionally on open produce markets here yesterday while other offerings generally held steady, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22½-3-4 cents a pound and solids for 22- 22-1-4.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases sold at 22 cents a dozen for A-large, 20-20½ for A-medium, 19-19½ for A-pullets, 19 1-2 for B-large, 16-18½ for C. Receipts: 1,810 cases.

HOG QUOTATIONS

Toronto, April 21 (CP)—With exception of Hull prices which were unchanged, bacon hog quotes showed declines ranging from 10 to 65 cents today. Kitchener dressed weights dropped 65 cents while Chatham and Hamilton dressed weights opened 40 cents lower. Peterboro prices were down 10-20 cents.

Live weights: Brantford $8.25, Chatham $8.25, Hull $8.50, Peterboro $8.40, London $8.35.

Dressed weights: Chatham $11.20, Hamilton $11.20, Hull $11.65, Kitchener $10.70, Peterboro $11.05, Stratford $11, London $11.15.

Joint Account Goes to Widow

Toronto, April 21—Possession of $25,624 in a joint bank account was awarded yesterday to Mrs. Ada E. Wylie by Chief Justice Rose in non-jury High Court. The joint account was opened in the Bank of Montreal by Mrs. Wylie and her husband, the late William J. Wylie, in 1925. Mr. Wylie died on Feb. 3, 1938. Nineteen defendants opposed Mrs. Wylie's action, claiming the bank account was part of the Wylie estate, and should be disposed of according to the terms of the will.

Mrs. Wylie sued for a declaration that she had free rights to the joint account after her husband's death, claiming one of the clauses in the agreement made with the bank was to the effect that the death of one or more of the undersigned should in no way affect the right of the survivor or survivors to withdraw all the money deposited. Chief Justice Rose ordered that costs of the action should be paid out of the estate. Most of the defendants were residuary legatees.

Now Hens Give White Centres

Baltimore, April 21.— (CP) — Colorless egg yolks, white as snow when hard-boiled, were described by Kansas State College chemists to the American Chemical Society.

The yolks turn white when hens are fed on a ration free from the yellow nutrient, carotene. The chemists said snow white egg yolks are "nothing new" but they are finding useful facts for egg producers in effects of hen-food on color of yolks.

One troublesome color is olive-green yolks. These colors cause considerable loss to poultrymen as customers shy at eating them. At Kansas State they now produce green yolks at will by feeding the hens molasses and oat grass.

BILL WILL ALLOW USE OF MONIES IN SINKING FUND

Measure Will Affect the City of Belleville Materially

CAN TAKE SURPLUS

Toronto, April 21 (CP)—A bill to allow municipalities to refrain from further tax levies for sinking fund purposes when the amount in the sinking fund, with the estimated revenues therefrom, is sufficient to pay the principal of debt as it becomes due, stands for third reading in the Ontario Legislature.

Approval to the bill, sponsored by Alex Elliott (Lib. Peterborough) has been given in detail and principle by the legal Bill Committee.

The bill for an act to amend the Municipal Act, would also provide that where revenue from the investment of sinking funds exceeds the requirements of all by-laws applicable thereto, the excess may, with the approval of the council and Municipal Board, be applied to the sinking fund of each debt proportionately.

In effect the bills mean that if a municipality has accumulated sufficient in its sinking fund to meet a particular debt, there need be no further tax levy to meet that particular debt.

It is also provided that where a surplus over and above all requirements exist the surplus may be divided so as to reduce the amount of taxes to be raised for any liabilities to be paid from the sinking fund.

The bill will affect many municipalities. Approval of the Municipal Board will be required for transfer of any sums under the act's provisions.

CANADA GANDER IS HOME HUBBY

Migratory Geese Mate for Life and Male Helps with Family

St. Louis, Mo., April 21—(CP)—More geese migrated this spring along the central, or Mississippi, flyway than for several years and very soon now the great, grey Canada ganders will be guarding their nesting mates in the far North.

(Jack Miner has caught, tagged and liberated several flocks of Canada Geese, 1939 north migration, at his Kingsville, Ont., sanctuary. A number of these birds bore previous years' tags with the Miner inscriptions.)

These "honkers" largest of all wild geese, take home life seriously, seldom "go Hollywood" on each other. The gander stays near the brooding goose, helps with domestic tasks and after hatching, keeps a watchful eye on the dumpy goslings.

To the observer the Canada goose is a mighty interesting bird to which the expression "silly as a goose" does not apply. Because of its wariness it has been able to survive in goodly numbers. Canadas are long-lived. Records show some have stayed in captivity 20 years, although they were mature when taken.

Enduring Affection

It is said wild geese mate for life; that when one of the pair is killed the survivor will not mate again. Anyway, many stories tending to support that theory were told by the old market gunners—and they knew their geese!

Ed Connor, who has hunted in the Canadian prairies, once shot a goose out of a small flock. The other sought altitude and sped on. When about a quarter of a mile away a lone bird turned and flew back towards his shooting pit. Keeping out of gun range, it circled and called.

Several times the next day a goose of the same species repeated similiar antics. The following morning there were goose tracks in the snow around the pit. He watched for the single but it did not return.

Ed says the goose was looking for its dead mate.

Roosevelt were being questioned and that their replies—all of which were expected to be negative—would be used by the Fuehrer in his Reichstag speech. Bulgaria, Yugoslavia and Hungary were mentioned particularly in the reports.

"We don't have to make such inquiries," the spokesman asserted. "The countries in question have indicated their attitude through public statements or through diplomatic channels. They don't feel danger because of Germany."

He displayed a box of Greek cigarettes bearing gold-colored swastikas which he said Greeks were manufacturing of their own free will. "That doesn't indicate Greece is afraid of Germany," he said.

COMMITTEE TOLD

Premier Hepburn attacked many people on the basis of confidential information regarding succession duties and then denied people the right to defend themselves, said Col. Drew.

Mr. Walters said he had never given information to any member of the House or to any Minister of the Crown when the law prescribed secrecy regarding such information.

"Are the files of your department open to Mr. Hepburn," asked Mr. Macaulay. "Yes" said Mr. Walters. "He is the treasurer."

Changed Vote

When the vote on the Macaulay motion was being taken, J. P. MacKay (Lib. Hamilton East) gave an audible "yea" and followed it up by more audible "nay."

Mr. Macualay protested he couldn't change his vote. The member explained he had been saying "no" to himself but just as his name was called the member next to him asked him for his newspaper and to this he said "yes", he meant to say "no."

Morgan Baker (Lib. York North) said Mr. MacKay had said "no, yes, no." He meant to vote no. The chairman ruled the nay vote was to be recorded.

Earlier the committee dealt with the accounts in connection with the St. Thomas mental hospital.

PRIME MINISTER TO ATTEND KING ON WHOLE TOUR

Mackenzie King to Accompany His Majesty on Visit to U.S.

PLANS ALL MADE

London, April 21—(CP Cable) — Officially announcement was issued from Buckingham Palace today that Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada, will be the Minister in attendance on the King during Their Majesties' visit to the United States.

The announcement set at rest speculation from time to time in the British press that a member of the United Kingdom government might be attached to the royal party for the United States part of the North American tour.

The King and Queen are leaving Windsor Castle, where they have been in residence for three weeks, early next week. The time remaining before they sail May 6 will be taken up by official engagements and innumerable details of preparation for the trip.

The last two weekends before their departure will be spent at the Royal Lodge, Windsor Great Park. The rest of the time will be passed at Buckingham Palace.

To Attend Rally

On April 23, St. George's Day, they will attend a national Boy Scout rally at Windsor and a service in St. George's Chapel.

The Queen spent hours at Buckingham Palace yesterday trying on dresses for the royal visit. Palace officials are keeping the actual design of the dresses a zealously guarded secret. It is generaly believed, however, that the costumes follow these lines:

No ultra short skirts. Colors include new aquamarine blue combinations and pastel shades, but only a few prints. She is following her present favorite day style dresses and long coats. Materials are in lighter weight wools and silks. There are matching accessories.

Operations in the woods this winter have been favored with a plentiful depth of snow and well frozen swamps.

SLOVAK GUNS BOMB VILLAGE

Hungarians Return Fire, Neither Troops Cross Border

Budapest, Apr. 21 (AP) — Hungarian military authorities reported that Slovak artillery bombarded the Hungarian village of Sarosremitz, near Ungvar, last night and this morning.

The authorities said Hungarian artillerymen and infantry returned the fire but apparently neither side crossed the newly established border between Hungary and Slovakia.

Slovakia, nominally independent following the final dismemberment of the Czecho-Slovak Republic Mar. 15, is under German protection.

The Hungarian military commander of the region was authorized to demand of Slovakia an explanation of the renewal of the "vest pocket" warfare.

The Budapest Foreign Office charged that two days ago two Hungarian soldiers were wounded and captured on the border. Unverified reports reaching here said they died in Slovak hospitals.

COAL RESERVE SEEN DWINDLING

Dozens of Detroit Firms Appeal to Windsor for Coal

Windsor, Ont., April 21 (CP) — Windsor coal dealers reported today dozens of Detroit firms were appealing for coal as the Detroit coal reserves dwindled through the strike of mine workers in the United States.

Coal firms said Windsor had sufficient reserves for several weeks, but many Detroit firms were running short and the smaller industrial plants there probably would suffer serious handicap shortly.

G. E. Mountford, manager of a coal company here said he expected his company would ship coal into the United States within a few days.

"There are 60,000 tons of surplus coal on hand at all the Windsor docks," Mountford said. "As far as Windsor is concerned we can look after the city's needs for the next two months but if we have to start shipping to the United States the situation may alter."

COL. LINDBERGH STRESSES QUALITY

Gives Impetus to Drive for More U. S. Funds for Research

Washington, April 21—(AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's plea for better military and civil planes gave impetus today to a drive for more United States government funds for aeronautical research.

The noted flier told the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics that emphasis should be placed on quality instead of quantity in plane development. The committee has recommended a $10,000,000 research station at Sunnyvale, Calif., which was rejected by the House of Representatives. The Senate approved $4,000,000 to start the project.

Lindbergh conferred with his colleagues on the committee yesterday after a 25-minute visit with President Roosevelt. He did not disclose his recommendations, but some of those who attended the meeting said he declared it was vital for the United States to develop superior types of civil and military aircraft.

His reported advice was that plane production could be speeded up in an emergency, but that quality could not be developed in plane design in a hurry.

Orville Wright, pioneer inventor, and other aviation leaders, were present to hear reports on latest developments in aircraft.

Lindbergh, recalled temporarily to active duty as an air corps officer, will visit the air research centre at Langley Field, Va., May 2.

ALLEGES FORMER AUSTRIAN STRONG-MAN DRINKING SELF TO DEATH

Nora Gregor, Viennese beauty and wife of Prince Von Starhemberg, former strong-man of Austria, has petitioned Chancellor Hitler for a divorce on the grounds that the annexation of Austria has ruined her marriage. The prince, who once led his own private army, is drinking himself to death in sorrow for his country's fate, according to his wife.

"PROTECTOR" CHATS WITH FORMER CZECH PRESIDENT

"Reich protector" is the benevolent title bestowed on Baron von Neurath, LEFT, appointed by Chancellor Hitler to look after the provinces of Bohemia and Moravia, acquired in the Nazi expansion program following the breaking up of Czechoslovakia. The "protector" is shown talking with Dr. Emil Hacha, last president of the defunct central European republic, shortly after the baron arrived in Pague to take over his duties. It need hardly be added that a grand parade of troops and tanks marked his arrival.

SHE WAS A VICTIM OF HEADACHES

Kruschen Got at the Cause

This woman's headaches were of the gripping kind that reduce the sufferer to something like helplessness. She tried tablets. She tried pills. All without avail. Only Kruschen could help her.

"I used to get very bad headaches," she writes. "No tablets or pills of any kind could relieve them. One morning, casually, I tried Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water. I continued taking it, but I have not had one of those awful headaches since. Kruschen suits me better than anything else. I find it very good."—(Mrs.) L.A.W.

Headaches can nearly always be traced to sluggishness of the kidneys, liver and intestines, and to the unsuspected retention in the system of stagnating waste material which poisons the blood. The numerous salts in Kruschen stimulate the internal organs to healthy, regular action so that no clogging waste is allowed to collect. Your inside is kept clean and serene. And that is just how Kruschen Salts brings quick and lasting relief from headaches.

POLICE COURT

Gerald Courneyea, Tamworth, was convicted of reckless driving, when he appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., in special traffic court held at the County Court House this morning. Courneyea was fined $10.00 and costs, amounting to $108.10 in all.

The charge arose out of a rear end accident, which occurred at Marysville on Feb. 3rd last when a motor vehicle driven by the accused collided with a parked motor car, owned by Percy Callahan. During the impact at the time Edward Meagher, a passenger with Courneyea sustained severe lacerations, as the result of flying glass. The evidence was submitted in a previous court, His Worship rendering judgment today. O. Butler, local barrister, represented the accused.

During the proceeding, Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., withdrew a charge of vagrancy preferred by the Crown against Sam Merko, Toronto, some time ago. "Merko was turned over to Toronto police and will be charged with the theft of a motor car in that city," explained Mr. Donnan as he was permitted to withdraw the vagrancy charge.

Merko was arrested by Provincial Police after being found asleep in a parked motor car on Herchimer Ave. Later it was established the vehicle had been stolen in Toronto.

"Driving 75 miles per hour in a motor car almost constitutes reckless driving, I would suggest. Ten dollars and costs is the finding of this court, however," stated His Worship when John K. Motley, Belleville, appeared on a charge of speeding. The charge was preferred by H.T.O. Jillings, who informed Mr. Donnan the accused was driving at the rate of 75 miles per hour when apprehended on the highway near Napanee recently. His Worship issued a stern warning relative to driving in such a fast manner.

BRITAIN EXPECTED

Russia formerly rules parts of both these countries, and Polish and Rumanian officials feared any occupation of their territory by Russian troops might prove an embarrassment after any need of the aid of the Red army had passed.

Officially it was pointed out the conversations were continuing both in Paris and Moscow and that the new Soviet plan was not necessarily final.

It was stressed Britain has not offered a military alliance to Russia though this eventually might be done.

Russia Fears Germany

It was believed in diplomatic circles that Russia had offered to cooperate on an outright military alliance basis because she fears she might be caught by a joint German-Japanese invasion.

In his report to the foreign office, Sir William was said to have pointed out that the Soviet government would prefer to have a broad front of all powers willing to oppose any aggression combined ultimately into a large pact for mutual assistance.

This suggestion, however, was not being seriously considered here for it might mean that in certain eventualities Poland and Rumania would be asked to go to the assistance of the Soviet.

Foreign office officials in London took Turkish cooperation in their coalition for granted, although no official announcement has been made as to the outcome of recent Anglo-Turkish talks.

Might be Dangerous

Warsaw, April 21—(AP)— The newspaper Express Poranny, which often expresses views of the Polish foreign office, voiced belief today Russian aid in any European war might be dangerous to the countries receiving it.

The newspaper said many nations would be unable to accept Soviet help "for geographical-political reasons."

The armed forces of the Soviet would become an extremely strong influence in certain parts of Europe "after a long European war," Express Poranny said, and "many countries istead of enjoying victory would have to face revolution."

The newspaper explained Poland's opposition to entering any military alliance with Soviet Russia had been made clear to Great Britain and France from the time the British-French system of guarantees was started.

(Britain guaranteed aid to Poland in case of a threat to Polish independence which the Poles themselves would resist, and later received from the Polish Foreign Minister Joseph Beck, a promise that Poland would reciprocate such aid to Britain, pending conclusion of a formal treaty.

Doubted Value

Express Poranny also voiced doubt as to the value of Russia as a military ally from the standpoint of defence.

"At the present moment the Soviet does not represent a factor which could have an influence on the development of European events," the newspaper declared.

"Her armed forces are unknown and are led by men without sufficient experience."

The newspaper asserted Russia's reply to British-French proposals was a counter proposal that Britain and France give guarantees of aid to the Soviet in case of Japanese aggression.

"Therefore it is obvious that the interests of Russia are mainly in the far east. Today, in regard to Europe, the Soviet is capable only of non-aggression pacts."

AT THE BELLE

"THE OKLAHOMA KID"

An action-packed drama of America's great westward surge, "The Oklahoma Kid", with James Cagney as the title character, has been scheduled as the next feature attraction at the Belle. A stirring cavalcade of the opening of the great southwest, it is one of the year's largest productions, and numbers over 3,000 people in its huge outdoor scenes, besides the featured cast which includes Humphrey Bogart, Rosemary Lane, and many other noted players.

Though he wears the sombrero, buckskin jacket and high-heeled riding boots of the frontier gunfighter of the nineteenth century, though he carries a brace of old Colt six-shooters on his hips instead of a modern automatic in a shoulder holster, though he discloses that he is a real hell-for-leather horseman, Cagney is fundamentally the same sort of fellow as thrilled audiences in such memorable productions as "Angles With Dirty Faces," "G-Men" and "Public Enemy."

In two of the productions mentioned, it will be recalled, Cagney was outside of the pale of the law, and in the other he was a vigorous agent of law enforcement. The comparison is interesting because in "The Oklahoma Kid" he is depicted as alternately on both sides of the fence.

At the outset of the story he is a bandit but not just a conscienceless robber and killer. He is an adventurous youth who has become a sort of Robin Hood of the Southwest. Eventually he is, in effect, enlisted on the side of law and order, although he has really taken the law into his own hands. However, he performs a necessary service of public vengeance so bravely and so completely that he is forgiven all his past misdeeds.

Rosemary Lane, lovely and vivacious brunette, plays the romantic lead opposite Cagney—and it is no milk-and-sugar heroine that this flashing-eyed member of the acting Lane family plays—but a real girl of the old West. Humphrey Bogart, ace bad man, furthers his screen reputation, playing the leader of a band of "Sooners" who are really a gang of treacherous gunmen. In the story he is a deadly foe of the "Oklahoma Kid."

"Hawk of the Wilderness"

Fans who love their stalwart heroes, breath-taking thrills, and nail-biting suspense will probably be steady patrons of the Belle Theatre during the screen adaptation of William Chester's famous novel are shown. Commencing Saturday the first chapter of Republic's "Hawk of the Wilderness" serial will be presented, laid in a mysterious Island in the Bering Sea near the Arctic Circle and featuring Herman Brix, Jill Martin, Mala, Monte Blue and Noble Johnson.

"Donald Duck's Lucky Day," the popular Belle Newsreel, and "Sundae Serenade," a delightful musical comedy crammed with melody and fun will be presented on the same program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"TRADE WINDS"

One of the most provocative and exciting motion pictures to reach the screen within recent years is now the current feature attraction at the McCarthy Theatre under the title of "Trade Winds." Produced by Walter Wanger with a capitally chosen cast headed by Fredric March and Joan Bennett, the new film is a fast-moving, romantic melodrama, smartly fashioned to contain all the elements of fine entertainment.

Miss Bennett, portraying the role of Kay Kerrigan, flees San Francisco after a murder of which she believes herself guilty. Dyeing her blonde hair black, as a disguise, the girl travels half-way around the world in her flight from the law. Her steps in and through the fascinating Orient are dogged by Fredric March, appearing as Sam Wye, a blase detective with a grand sense of humor and an excellent appreciation of the beautiful female. Ralph Bellamy and Ann Sothern, teamed as the second romantic leads, contribute rich comedy performances—he as a stolid, book-trained sleuth, she as a scatter-brained but stunningly garbed secretary.

Among the varied and colorful backgrounds against which the action unfolds are included such countries as Hawaii, Japan, China, Indo-China, the Malay Peninsula, Ceylon, India and the little known Laccadive Islands. Tay Garnett, director of "Trade Winds", spent two years filming the unusually impressive "location shots" revealed in the picture, and Art Director Alexander Toluboff did a magnificent job of designing the 79 different sets which dovetail with Garnett's original photography.

But perhaps one of the most interesting and arresting contributions to the filming of "Trade Winds" is the introduction of Joan Bennett as a vivid and flashing brunette. This reviewer found that dark tresses not only made the actress seem somehow a much more mysterious personality but added considerably to the force and sincerity of her performance throughout. Also, one must hasten to add, Miss Bennett as a brunette is even lovelier than she was a blonde.

The screen play for "Trade Winds" was written by the practiced pens of Dorothy Parker, Alan Campbell and Frank R. Adams, which explains the continuous flow of sparkling dialogue and cracking wit as well as the convincingly dramatic situations which make the film rich in suspense, drama and humor. In a word, "Trade Winds" is the answer to the moviegoer who discriminatingly demands entertainment which is gay, exciting and completely satisfying.

The kiddies' favorite cartoon character Popeye is presented in his latest and funniest show-in-itself-offering entitled "Goonland" and a special four-star treat entitled "Circus Co-Ed" brings to the screen one of the finest offerings of circus life and entertainment ever shown on the silver sheet, besides another episode of the interesting and well acted serial "Flying G-Men" will be enjoyed by all, do not miss this entire program, it's truly a swell show.

Elizabeth has become a proficient swimmer and an enthusiastic horseback rider. She is learning to jump. She also enjoys bicycling and gymnastics. Her hobbies include photography, stamp-collecting, painting and drawing.

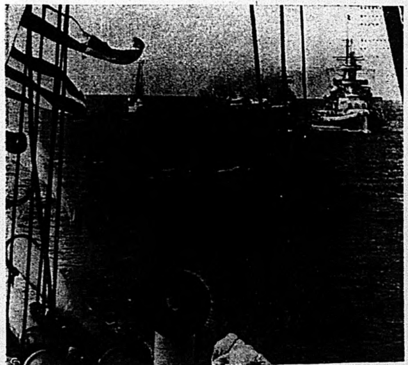
PARADE OF GERMAN NAVAL MIGHT EN ROUTE TO SPANISH COAST



Here's part of the German naval fleet that left Kiel, Germany, on the Baltic, and Wilhelmshaven and Emden, on the North Sea, for a month's "spring cruise" off the Spanish Portuguese and Spanish Moroccan coasts as British and French fleets massed in the Mediterranean, not far from the site of the German fleet's destination. Some 40 ships, including 28 men-of-the-line, were in the fleet that left for Spain. This photo was made when Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler displayed his naval might for the benefit of the visiting admiral Nicholas Horthy—an admiral without a navy—of Hungary.

not be employed with success," he said.

My Country

Lord Baldwin's address dealt with "my country and what she stands for.......my people and what they have brought to this continent and something of the wider world of which we are a part."

He described the English party system as not one of rival ideologies or "imported innovations adapted to a structure unfitted to receive them." He said the danger of the constitution would come when the party system was changed to that of rival ideologies, neither of which suffered the existence of its opponents.

Earl Baldwin said any attempt to change the basis of the British constitution, whether from the left or from the right, might easily strain it to the breaking point, and "that is why internally we have no dealings with Fascism or Communism." Either would destroy the soul of the people and the form of the constitution."

Great Safeguard

The existence of democracy in Britain was the greatest safeguard against Marxism. He said there never will be a Fascist movement in Britain "until you have a disintegration caused by Communism."

If such disintegration appeared the forces of law and order would win, the speaker said, adding "to what form of government such victory would lead us, no man can tell, but it rests with us to see that these things do not happen and I do not think they will."

Prince Edward County Council Objects to Judge's Expenses

Bill of $22.75 for Taxi Fares Brings Matter to a Head

RESOLUTION PASSED

Picton, April 21—Prince Edward County Council is holding its April session here and opening days have seen a great deal of discussion on various topics. One of the most interesting came yesterday when a bill for $27.50 for taxi services was presented. This was for providing a taxi to and from Belleville for Justice Roach of Toronto, who presided recently at Supreme Court here, and also for trips around town and one to Glenora to see the Lake-on-the-Mountain.

County Council members had previously discussed the high costs of justice, and members were in a critical mood when the bill came up.

Sheriff Alva E. Bowerman was called to the chambers and asked to explain the bill. He stated he was required by statute to pay all expenses of 'waiting upon the judge' at the expense of the county.

"I cannot see the reasonableness of these accounts", declared Reeve E. B. Purtelle of Bloomfield. "I don't like the idea of a judge keeping the court waiting from one to four o'clock as was done on the opening day of the Spring assizes, and then again considerably late beyond the time set for the meeting on the second day."

Deputy-Reeve Lance Nethery of Picton stated: "These Supreme Court Judges are well paid, and in addition to that they get their travelling expenses. Why shouldn't they draw their travelling expenses from Belleville to Picton against the Federal government as easily as their expenses from Toronto to Belleville?"

Reeve James Barber of Ameliasburg stated: "These judges are well looked after all over. They do it in Belleville. What can we do about it? They are Supreme Court Judges and deserve respect."

To this Reeve Purtelle replied: "I don't care if they do it in Jerusalem, I don't think we should."

Council unanimously passed a motion: "That the sheriff be notified that in the future the County of Prince Edward will not be responsible for expenses incurred in transportation of Supreme Court Judges outside the town of Picton, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Minister of Justice."

Aid Tourist Promotion

County Council expressed itself in agreement with local efforts to increase the tourist traffic in the county. There was a lengthy discussion over the marking of entrances to the county. L. B. Calnan, who for some years has been in charge of publicity, stated that it was difficult to find places to erect signs. He thought that the entrance to the county should be improved.

Reeve Howard Weese of Ameliasburgh suggested that the highway from Brighton to Carrying Place be taken over as a county road. This would make a new entrance to the western section of the county and reduce the distance to Picton and also increase use of Highway No. 33 which leads from Trenton to Picton and on to Kingston via the Glenora ferry. It was decided that the council of Northumberland County would be approached to see if they would co-operate.

The sum of $400 was voted for tourist promotion. Two hundred dollars will be used for tourist booklets and the remainder for signs and other purposes, to be in charge of a committee composed of L. B. Calnan, Clerk Gordon Walmsley and Reeve Howard Weese.

No Action Taken

At the January session of the council it was decided to discontinue special grants to needy families who were not receiving aid from other sources. It was felt these should receive aid under the unemployment relief plan so that the municipalities might be reimbursed for part of the cost by the governments. An effort was made at the session yesterday to have several special grants made, but council took no action to continue them. It was felt there are various ways in which those needing aid can be given it other than by special grants which are paid wholly by the county.

The County is owner of the fair grounds and the sum of $500 was voted to be spent on the buildings this year as the Fair Grounds Committee sees fit. It was pointed out that two buildings require new roofs.

Find Large Indigent Accounts Alarming

The growing cost of hospitalization for indigents has alarmed members and there was lengthy discussion on the subject. As the result, the following resolution was passed:

"Whereas hospital bills for indigent patients are steadily increasing yearly,

"Whereas municipalities have little or no say as to their admittance to the hospital,

"Be it resolved that the Prince Edward Council petition the Honorable the Minister of Health to amend the law so as doctors must first consult the head of the municipality where the indigent patient belongs before admittance to the hospital, except in cases of emergency.

"That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to every County Council in Ontario and to the Hon. Harold J. Kirby, Ontario Minister of Health."

Give Report on Convention

Reeve James Barber of Ameliasburg, and Road Engineer Jack Leavens gave reports of the Ontario Good Roads Convention held in Toronto. In the discussion on roads, members decided that the Road Committees would go over the county roads next week and decided where work be done this year.

Not to Cut Pay

An effort to have members reduce their indemnities from $5.00 to $3.50 per day was made by Deputy-Reeve Nethery of Picton. Other members were opposed to the suggestion. Several pointed out that their work as reeve called for a great deal of work for which they receive no remuneration. The motion was withdrawn. The salary of Treasurer J. P. Williams as secretary of the Old Age Pension Board was reduced from $25 to $15 per month.

The Minister of Health replied to a resolution from the local council asking that compulsory pasteurization law be rescinded. The minister pointed out the benefits of pasteurization and stated he did not think council was aware of all the facts when they passed the resolution, and forwarded information.

Messages of condolence were ordered sent to Warden Roy Ketcheson in the death of his mother, and to Reeve B. Pearsall through the passing of his wife.

Children's Aid Society Hold Annual Meeting

Picton, April 21—At the annual meeting of Prince Edward County Children's Aid Society on Wednesday evening at the United Church, W. S. Blakely was re-elected president. Vice-presidents are G. M. Hicks, Mrs. W. R. Browne and L. A. VanSkiver. Mrs. Harold Knapman is secretary and Mrs. C. G. Rutter is treasurer.

Miss McCabe of the Department of Child Welfare, Toronto, gave an address on the work of the Society. She said each community should be represented on the board. Each society needed a publicity and interpretation committee to keep the public aware of its work.

Superintendent Ralph Hubbs gave a lengthy report. There had been seven adoptions during the past year. There were fewer cases under the Unmarried Parents' Act. The greatest work had been of a preventive nature.

The Home and School Club met with the Aid on this occasion. Mrs. H. Knapman, the treasurer, reported that the club had spent $178 for milk for the public schools here in the past 13 weeks. The children had paid $54.60. There had been 2781 quarts of milk supplied.

A nomination committee of Mrs. L. B. Calnan, Mrs. Ray Clapp and Mrs. Earl Gilmore was appointed, to report at the next meeting.

The club members served refreshments at the close of the meeting which was largely attended.

40 WATCHMEN SWORN FOR DUTY

Leaside, Queenston and Niagara Hydro Plants Will be Guarded

Toronto, April 21—(CP)— Forty watchmen for duty at the Leaside, Queenston and Niagara Hydro plants were sworn in as special Provincial Police today. A number of them are Hydro employees being transferred for special duty and being given police authority in order to deal with possible sabotage attempts.

Nine are being placed at Leaside and approximately 30 at Queenston and Niagara power houses. Ontario Hydro Commission officials stated the men were not being drawn from the special veterans reserve organization by the national veterans security committee and the Department of National Defence. While a number of registered veterans are expected to be sworn in within the next few days, Hydro officials said they would not be called out except at the outbreak of hostilities or in the event of Ottawa declaring a state of national emergency.

Divided Into Shifts

The men sworn in today lined up early outside Provincial Police headquarters at Queen's Park and were sworn in by Gen. V. A. S. Williams. They will be divided into shifts for 24-hour duty. "We are not as alarmed as some others appear to be at rumors of possible sabotage," a high Hydro official said. "But in view of the general uneasiness we are taking precautionary measures." He expressed doubt that recent thefts of dynamite in Ontario portended efforts to wreck any Hydro plant.

Watchmen sworn in today are under direction of the Hydro Commission. Should groups from the special veterans' reserve be called out, Hydro officials said they would be under control of Provincial Police.

SEEKS DOMINION PROBE INTO NAZIS

German - Canadian League Says it Would Root Out Nazi Activities

Montreal, Apr. 21 (CP)—A government inquiry into Nazi activities in Canada was urged in a resolution adopted last night at a meeting of the German-Canadian League of Montreal, and released over the signature of G. Wimmer, the league's president.

"Such an inquiry would be of value to Canada," the statement said, "because it would serve to eliminate Nazi activities in this country and preserve harmony between Canadians of all strata."

The resolution was adopted following discussion of the Canadian Legion's invitation to German-Canadian clubs to co-operate with them in eliminating subversive Nazi activities in Canada. It said in part:

"Subversive activities have become noticeable in Canada. It seems Nazis have succeeded in persuading the Canadian public that most German-Canadians are followers or sympathizers of Nazi ideology.

"The Canadian public is not strongly enough aware the Nazis constitute but a small minority among the 500,000 Canadians of German descent. German settlers, in the vast majority, are loyal to Canada and to democracy.

"We are interested in making this fact known to the public, and this can best be done by a government inquiry into Nazi activities in Canada."

FIRE IN JAIL TAKES 3 LIVES

Canadian is One of Victims in Worcester, Mass., Fire

Worcester, Mass., April 21—(AP) —Stephen Garrity, State Fire Marshal who conducted a five-hour probe early today of the Worcester County Jail fire which last night claimed three lives, one of them a Canadian, said he did not believe it was caused by careless use of matches, an early theory. His department is investigating all sources which might indicate faulty wiring in the 120-year-old jail.

Sheriff Oscar Rocheleau, head jailer, said the blaze was discovered in a padded cell occupied by John Raskett, serving time for drunkenness.

Only four of the 18 cells in the section, termed by the prisoners as the "back bay", were occupied, and Raskett was the only one to escape with his life. He was taken to hospital. The dead men, who were suffocated by heavy smoke, were:

Antonio Dosti, 18, of Rouyn, Que. awaiting trial on a larceny charge; Walter Sumpter, 66, Negro, of West Boylston, admitted only a few hours before to serve a term for drunkenness; and Thomas Makla, 67, of Gardner, serving a term for drunkenness.

Seventy-seven other men confined in the upper sections of the wing were removed to safety. The prison held 224 prisoners, including 16 women.

Hitler, he said, "fights against and crushes what is harmful to the German people," and nothing could deceive Germans about the fact "that the respect of the whole world for Germany and her great Fuehrer was never so great as in this time of trouble."

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Sunspots! How do these affect our weather? If a curve of the variation of the number of sunspots is compared with a curve of the earth's temperature, it becomes quite obvious that sunspots do have some relation to our temperatures. The effect is small, however. The way in which sunspots do affect terrestrial weather is by altering the amount of radiation sent out by the sun. In general, the more spots, the lower is the earth's temperature. Sunspots appear to be whirling storms in the outer layers of the sun's gaseous mass. The hot interior gases rise. As they do so their pressure is reduced and they are cooled. Thus the sunspot is dark compared with adjacent parts of the sun's surface.

BILL IN SENATE ON COMPENSATION

Would Give Displaced Railwaymen Adjustments

Ottawa, April 22—(CP)— Compensation for jobs abolished through railway co-operation is being advanced by the government in a bill introduced in the Senate yesterday.

It was generally interpreted that the measure was aimed at modifying opposition by railway workers to increased co-operation between the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways because of feared loss of jobs.

The bill would compel the railways to pay such displaced employees substantial compensation based on length of service. They would receive for a period determined by length of their employment 60 per cent of their average monthly pay for their last year's work. Or they might choose to accept a lump-sum settlement also based on length of service.

For instance, a man who had been employed by one of the railways between one and two years would receive this 60 per cent adjustment allowance for six months. For a man with two or three years service the period of payment would be 12 months; three to five years, 18 months; five to 10 years, 36 months; 10 to 15 years, 48 months; 15 years and over, 60 months.

The schedule of lump-sum separation allowances is as follows: One to two years service, three months' pay; two to three years, six months' pay; three to five years, nine months' pay; five years and over, 12 months' pay.

The bill includes detailed provisions for recall to railway employment and for compensation for workers for moving expenses if they were transferred to other districts.

Third readings were given three other bills in the Senate yesterday, to bring the red chamber practically up to date with legislation passed by the House of Commons. Only two bills await Senate approval at the moment. The senate sits again Monday evening.

RUMANIA SENDS A BLUNT ANSWER TO GERMAN NOTE

Does Not See How Anyone Could Feel Secure in Europe at Present

ANSWERS BRITAIN

Believed Germany Did Not Send Notes to Britain's Allies

London, April 22—(AP)— The Rumanian government, asked by Berlin whether it felt threatened by Germany, was reported reliably today to have replied that "Rumania does not see how anyone could feel secure in Europe at the present time."

Rumania's first move after replying to the German questionnaire was to pass along her answer to the British foreign office, it was said.

Until word of the Rumanian reply was received here it was not believed Germany had addressed her note to any of Britain's new eastern European allies—Poland, Greece and Rumania.

(In Warsaw, the foreign office said Poland had received no questionnaire and the belief was expressed in well-informed political quarters that the Berlin authorities had left out the three nations whose independence Britain and France have promised to help defend.)

An informed source, although declining to disclose the text of the Rumanian reply, said "I think we can guarantee that Rumania's answer will be the most amusing of the lot."

He said it "started" German officials in Bucharest.

The Rumanian action intensified interest in the visit Grigore Gafencu Rumanian Foreign Minister, is to make to London next week.

Divine Service to Highlight Visit Of King and Queen to Kingston

Ottawa, April 22—(CP)— Divine service at Fort Henry will be the highlight of the King and Queen's visit to Kingston, Ont., on May 21.

The inter-departmental committee arranging for the royal tour last night disclosed the detailed program for Their Majesties trip to Cornwall, Brockville and Kingston.

The royal train leaves Ottawa at seven p.m. E.S.T. on May 20 and proceeds over the Canadian National lines to Coteau Junction where it will be transferred to the main lines of the C.N.R., arriving at Cornwall at 8.40 p.m. E.S.T., and Brockville at 10 p.m. E.S.T.

At each of these cities there will be 10 minute stops when the Mayors will be presented to Their Majesties by Prime Minister Mackenzie King. A number of local officials also will be presented.

The royal train arrives at Kingston at 10.30 a.m. E.S.T. and the Prime Minister will present Their Majesties to the Mayor of Kingston and Mrs. Stewart. The Mayor then will present a number of local officials and their wives. The drive to Fort Henry will follow, arriving there at 11.10 a.m. Divine service will be held on the grounds surrounding the Fort at 11.15.

After the service, the royal party will drive through Kingston and special provision has been made to enable school children and citizens to witness the procession. Their Majesties return to the royal train at one p.m.

No program has been arranged for the afternoon "in conformity with Their Majesties' desire that they be not asked to take part in any formal ceremonial on Sunday," the announcement said.

"It is possible that some arrangement may be made that the King and Queen may take a short drive, if the weather is favorable, but it is earnestly desired that Their Majesties should have the opportunity of spending the afternoon in accordance with their own wishes and that no expectation should be entertained that they will necessarily make another drive through the streets of the city."

'University, Epitome Of Democracy'—Baldwin

Toronto, April 22—(CP)— The university is "an epitome of true democracy," where merit alone is the hall-mark and ordered freedom its birthright, Earl Baldwin said last night in a lecture in Convocation Hall of the University of Toronto.

"Never must that freedom be bartered away," he said. "Universities need money. Much of modern scientific research and teachings work through expensive tools. Money has come to them generously from wealthy men or from the state.

"But let us never forget that the wealthy man and the state are honored by being allowed to take part in the sacred work of education and, while their contributions are received with sincere gratitude nothing gives a right either to the wealthy man or the state to interfere in any way with the freedom of the university itself. It must always be its own master, responsible to its conscience and sound tradition for what it teaches and how it teaches."

As Chancellor of an English and Scottish University, the former British Prime Minister defined his conception of the function of a university in the modern world this way:

"Truth and maintenance of standards; the continuous search for truth and the expulsion of error; the building up of the trained mind that can detect error, however skilfully concealed.

"Freedom from bias in teaching; the capacity to recognize first-class work at all times and in all places and a determination that what is third-class or shoddy shall never be acknowledged as first-class or the real thing. The lowering of standards is an ever-present danger in democracy and a university must be adamant in maintaining them."

Principles Injuring Democracy Assaulted in Fearless Manner By Denton Massey in Address

Brilliant Speaker Addresses Chamber of Commerce and Guests

LADIES WELCOMED

Splendid Banquet at Bridge Street Church Thoroughly Enjoyed

The undeniable charm, compelling platform personality that draws and holds his audience like a magnet, the brilliant oratical ability with which he brings out to the extreme in forceful, yet simple verbiage the fullest of his point and a charming sense of humor that has made Denton Massey, M.P., Toronto Greenwood, one of the ablest and most sought-after public speakers in Canada, was exemplified in a brilliant address "Youth and Democracy" here last night.

Speaking to two hundred and fifty members and guests of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce at their annual banquet held in the Sunday School Auditorium of Bridge Street United Church, the youthful parliamentarian thrilled his listeners with a fearless assault on those principles that are attempting to undermine democracy.

Championed Cause of Youth

In brilliant eloquence he championed the cause of Canadian youth and in expressive language he defined the status of citizenship in a manner that held his listeners spellbound with the very sincerity of the man. He pleaded that the young men and women be given a chance to fill the places of those taken away by the holocaust of war and he appealed to the older generations to put forth efforts to understand what the problem of the youth of today are, and by constructive criticism assist them in fighting the problems that face democracy and the world.

'ARMAMENT TAX' PLACED IN FRANCE

Strong Steps Taken to Strengthen France's Foreign Position

Paris, Apr. 22 (AP)—France took strong steps today to strengthen her domestic and foreign position.

New decrees designed to bring in 15,000,000,000 francs ($396,000,000) of additional revenue to meet expenditures of war industries were published in the official journal.

French diplomats worked hard to rally other nations, particularly Russia and Turkey, to the London-Paris alliance.

The new decrees included:

Establishment of a 45-hour work week to supplant the 40-hour week; a one per cent sales tax—an "armament tax" on all cash transactions; issuance of armament bonds; limitation of profits in war industries; organization for feeding civilians in case of war; cancellation of work projects and the reduction in government expenditures; and checking propaganda subsidies from abroad.

Most French newspapers looked upon the measures as vital sacifiecsr necessary in the face of peril, but the Communist paper L'Humanite said they would lead to unemployment.

PROPAGANDA IS THE ONLY MATTER HITLER ONCE SAID

Chancellor Knows How to Keep World in State of Jitters

IS FIGHTING SERVICE

Methods Used by Germans Are Both Subtle and Blatant

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, April 22—(CP Cable)—In the early days of the infant National Socialist (Nazi) party, before the Munich beer parlor putsch of 1923, Adolf Hitler broke up a meeting of his high-ranking followers by shouting:

"Propaganda! Propaganda! It now is the only matter. Propaganda!

Today Nazi Germany has the whole world in a constant state of jitters through a constant stream of propaganda, directed by Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop and Field Marshal Goering but always with Hitler, the supreme master of propaganda, dominating it.

Understands Propaganda

Hitler understands the fine art of propaganda as well as does any living man. It is not only the propaganda of headlines and radio, which perhaps are the least dangerous of all. It is subtle propaganda on an international scale which, as part and parcel of the Nazi foreign policy, is used to prepare the way for extraordinary and otherwise inexplicable successes achieved by the third Reich.

When German armies marched into Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Memel they met no opposition, largely because people and government had been cowed into submission by constant doses of Nazi propaganda.

Germans have demonstrated that propaganda as they dish it out involves vital problems of defence for the country at which it is aimed. It is the fourth fighting service. So far it has won more victories for Germany than the army, navy and air force combined.

A short time ago, Europe expected Germany to march into the Polish Corridor. One of the reasons was the steady stream of press and radio reports originating in Berlin charging that Poles had attacked Germans living in the Corridor. That is the way they make the propaganda machine work.

Inspiration From Berlin.

There are other ways. Today Europe is a mass of rumors and reports, many of them inspired by Berlin. Troops are concentrating here and there. Minorities are reminded of past grievances and urged to demand their rights. German ships suddenly hold manoeuvres off Spain. The German press breaks into polemics and the radio runs 24 hours a day against some country or some foreign statesman.

These examples are of a blatant type. There are many examples of a more subtle type, such as the undermining of trade competitors, the fomenting of distrust among nations, the breaking of cultural, political and economic ties.

But they all have one purpose—to keep all countries in Europe in a state of nerves wondering what the Fuehrer will do next, or to focus attention on one particular spot while a predatory raid is carried out in another direction.

It is the Nazi way of playing on the nerves of a whole continent, waiting for something to crack under the strain.

'Belgians Will Never Forget You', Says Belgian Diplomat to Veterans

Ottawa, April 22—(CP)— More than 25 years ago a seven-year-old Belgian boy cheered Canadian soldiers as they delivered the village of Verlaine, sipped from their wine bottles to build a headache that lasted three days and gained an admiration for Canadians "that will live with me as long as I live."

The boy, now a handsome, fair-haired young diplomat captured the imagination of a group of great war veterans last night as he described that day in November, 1918, and brought them a message from Belgians who were children when they fought in Flanders.

He is Chevalier Ernest De Selliers De Moranville, attached to the Belgian legation here and a grandson of General De Selliers De Moranville who commanded the Belgian army at the outbreak of the Great War.

"Belgians of my generation will never forget you." he told the 20th annual reunion dinner of First Canadian contingent men gathered at their Red Chevron dinner.

"You gallant Canadians came to the rescue of my country with nothing to gain but in a pure spirit of fairness. Belgians of another generation who were men when you came to us perhaps remember you more clearly. But we young Belgians who were children then are no less grateful for what you did."

The Belgian's message of thanks stirred the gathering of greying old soldiers into a demonstration that lasted several minutes.

They laughed when he told how those sips from their wine bottles put him in bed for three days and there were tears in many eyes at the conclusion of a speech which Conservative leader Manion, a later speaker, called "beautiful."

Precautions Taken After Discovery of Cached Dynamite

'Bottle - Neck' of Upper Great Lakes Waterways System Important Canal in Chain

SPECIAL GUARDS

Type of Dynamite Found Not Handled by Any Explosive Firm in Sault Ste. Marie in Last Two Years

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., April 22—(CP)—Police forces on both sides of the international border at this "bottle-neck" of the upper Great Lakes waterways system were on guard today against any possible attempt to sabotage the important canal between Lake Huron and Lake Superior.

Warning messages from authorities here were sent to police in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., last night following discovery of a cache of dynamite in an abandoned shed beside the Great Lakes Power Company power canal. Royal Canadian Mounted Police and Ontario Provincial Police also were notified.

The cache, 50 pounds of "50-per cent" dynamite, was stumbled upon yesterday by Sergt. Fred Rowe of the Sault Ste. Marie police during routine investigation of theft of brass from a warehouse. In announcing precautions had been taken, Police Chief George Harbottle said "we cannot afford to take any chances."

FASCISTS WOO YUGOSLAVIA TO ROME AND BERLIN

Last Major Central European State's Favor Sought

NEUTRALITY FORECAST

Venice, Apr. 22 (AP)—A Fascist move to bring Yugoslavia into the Rome-Berlin axis was expected by diplomatic quarters during talks beginning today between the Italian Foreign Minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, and Foreign Minister Alexander Cinca-Markovich of Yugoslavia.

With Hungary already under the Italian-German influence and Poland and Rumania holding British and French pledges of support, Yugoslavia is the last major central European state to be involved in the attempts of the Democratic and Fascist blocs to strengthen their rival alliances.

Diplomatic sources indicated that Yugoslavia would attempt to steer clear of entanglements.

The Italian government originally announced the conference apparently to reassure Yugoslavia after the Italian occupation of Albania, a Yugoslav neighbor. After that, however, the central European situation developed. After that, however, the central European situation developed rapidly, with the Rome-Berlin axis denouncing what was called Anglo-French "encirclement".

Montreal, April 22 (CP) —Swirling waters of the Yamaska and Chaudiere Rivers, swollen to flood peak by a Spring thaw, filled the streets of half a dozen St. Hyacinthe and Beauce County towns today. More than 100 families were forced from their homes and double that number were driven to the security of upper storeys.

With the coming of Spring the committee of the Quinte Beaches Association looks forward to a fine year's work being achieved this season.

Mr. Reg. Moncrieff stated to The Ontario Intelligencer that the time had arrived for intensive effort to develop the Beaches and to rouse public interest.

The committee meet on Monday night and he is hopeful that there will be a large turnout of active members, so that the work can be initiated "with a bang" for this year.

Douglas Reed, whose book "Insanity Fair" has been perhaps the most widely read and quoted non-fiction book in a year continues his autobiography and commentary on the European scene in "Disgrace Abounding." For ten years Mr. Reed was London Times staff man at Berlin and Vienna. After publication of his first book, he resigned for greater freedom and since that time has roved the Danubian and Balkan countries seeking first-hand information on which to base his new book. In "Disgrace Abounding", he presents as from an Englishman to his fellow Englishmen at home countless facts about the European situation with sadness and indignation. It will be recalled that fourteen months in advance he predicted the September crisis and its outcome; now, from new information he predicts among other things the handing over of colonies to Germany, Reich advance to the Adriatic, failure of a useful British alliance with Russia and early press censorship in England to prevent such criticism of the government as he himself has written. "Disgrace Abounding" or "The Picnic Papers" as the author prefers to call it, is a brilliant exposition of the present with an eye to the future which earns from William Arthur Deacon the prediction that it will be one of the most read books for weeks to come.

Day to day life in Nazi Germany is graphically presented by Madeleine Kent in "I Married a German." The beauty and romance of old Germany fresh in her mind, she willingly renounced her British citizenship and went with her husband in 1931 to live in Dresden, capital of Saxony. As a German hausfrau she saw events not as the many newspaper correspondents saw them, but intimately through her kitchen and sitting-room windows and relates them intelligently and with awareness of the wider issues involved. Her comments on the 1934 purge and her account of the struggle to liberate herself and her husband from Nazidom are outstanding parts of a book which is amusing, sometimes horrifying and always intensely interesting.

Bertram W. Fowler, a Canadian-born authority on the Co-operative Movement on the American continent has outlined the success of the movement as sponsored and aided by the Saint Francis Xavier University of Nova Scotia in his new book entitled "The Lord Helps Those." He depicts the fisherman, miner and farmer of Cape Breton and Nova Scotia lifted from the depths of poverty and despair as victims of a combination of commission merchants to new heights of success in their different occupations. This was achieved only by the untiring efforts of the principal and priests of Saint Francis Xavier University to teach these same people to educate themselves and to think out their individual problems. Today they are financially able to carry on their industries and have new and inspired hopes for the future. The Co-operative Movement in Western Canada compares favourably with the East, as indicated by Hugh Boyd in "New Breaking." Mr. Boyd deals with the methods used in the marketing of wheat and other produce by the western farmer. He outlines the acts passed and associations formed from the first Manitoba Grain Act in 1900 to the Turgeon Grain Enquiry of 1937 in efforts to meet the demands of the western farmers who were in desperate need, during those years, of financial assistance and reassurance of the future of their crops which meant their livelihood.

Former Boy Dancer With Kilties Band Now Famous Character Actor

Gene Lockhart is Also Writer of Songs and Vaudeville Sketches

MAY VISIT BELLEVILLE

When the grand old boys of the famous Belleville Kilties Band gather here in June for their second Belleville reunion, there is a possibility that among them will be one of Hollywood's most famous character actors.

Those Bellevillians who recall the balmy days when the famous Kilties were winning world renown under the late T. P. J. Power, will probably remember the ruddy-faced six-year-old Gene Lockhart, who won his laurels with the band as a Scottish dancer. His father was a tenor soloist with the organization.

Present day movie fans will also remember Lockhart for his sterling performance in "Algiers".

However, a lot of water has run under the bridge since the days when Gene in his kilts performed the Scottish dances. When he was fifteen he was still on the stage, appearing with Beatrice Lillie, famous stage and screen star, who by the way was educated in this city at St. Agnes School. When Gene began to look for vaudeville appearances his father decided the realm of business was the thing for him so Gene was sent off to Engand to school.

Worked As Salesman.

Back he came to Canada and got a job as an adding machine and typewiter salesman. There was nothing romantic about that job so he took up athletics on the side, playing football and hockey and winning for himself the one-mile swimming championship of Canada. But business activities began to pall on the young actor and he returned to the stage where he did a pianologue in vaudeville.

His versatility is proven by the fact that during his career he has written more than six hundred vaudeville sketches, and the books for three entire musical shows. He has written about one hundred songs his most famous being "The World Is Waiting For the Sunrise".

"That keeps on doing pretty well," he grins, "I am still collecting about $1,000 per year in royalties from it."

Perfect Couple.

Gene and his wife Kathleen are the only man and wife in Hollywood on the screen as well as off. They've been married for fifteen years, and still like the idea which in itself is something unusual for Hollywood. They eat breakfast together — and then go to work.

"A very satisfactory situation," Gene says in a communication to friends in Belleville. "You'd be surprised how easy it is for me to act as my wife's husband—and when the director orders me to kiss her, well—it's the most natural thing in the world."

They have appeared together in fifteen picturs though frequently they work apart. Gene has appeared in approximately fifty pictures since breaking the Hollywood ice in 1934. His latest picture is "A Christmas Carol".

"We've a daughter thirteen years old," Gene says, "and we live comfortably and peacefully. A lot of this trouble one reads about regarding married life in the movie colony of Hollywood may be true, but there is certainly nothing like that about us."

"Most of our friends are actors and most of them are calm decent people who go about their work as best they can and never get in the headlines. That is a side of Hollywood I think should be better known."

"Anyway," Gene concludes, "I think I'm one of the most fortunate men in the business. Leading men may come and go but character actors apparently go on forever—and if we gain a couple of pounds about the middle it doesn't seem to make any difference."

ROYAL SKIING FAN

Police Blotter

Five teen-aged boys were apprehended by Provincial Police trespassing on the property known as the Old Albert College, situated on College Street, early today. The boys were detained at the Provincial Police office and issued stern warnings to refrain from trespassing on vacant properties in the future.

Of a recent date juvenlles have been trespassing on the property previously occupied by the Albert College, where it was found that practically all of the windows of the structure had been broken. Today the boys revealed they were searching for pigeons, known to have been housed there. Provincial Police issued further warnings to "Parents, as well as children, may passing on other people's property. "Parents, sa well as children, may find themselves in difficulties if they do not restrain their children from trespassing and causing wilful destruction of property," added Inspector Frank Gardner of the O.P.P. today.

Fender damage resulted to two motor cars at the intersection of Henry and Coleman Streets yesterday during a collision. The vehicles were driven by Charles Ostrom, 136 Moira Street, and Clem Gardiner, 14 1-2 Bridge Street. The latter was proceeding northerly on Coleman Street when Mr. Ostrom drove out of the Henry Street intersection, resulting in the collision following.

City police are in possession of a bicycle, that was found abandoned recently. The bike is awaiting its rightful owner at the police station.

DEMONSTRATORS FORCED TO LEAVE

Interrupt When U. S. Ambassador Receives Edinburgh's Freedom

Edinburgh, Scotland, Apr. 21 (AP)—Two anti-Catholic demonstrators were ejected from Usher Hall today as they interrupted the ceremony in which Joseph Kennedy, the United States Ambassador to Great Britain, received the freedom of the city of Edinburgh.

John Cormack, leader of the Protestant Action Party in the Edinburgh Council, was removed for shouting "My Lord Provost, I protest!" as Mr. Kennedy was signing the Burgess Roll. The other, a woman member of the party, later was ejected for shouting "no Popery" from the gallery as Mr. Kennedy, a Roman Catholic, was speaking.

The Protestant Action party holds five seats in the council.

Mr. Kennedy travelled overnight from London and received the freedom of the city after Edinburgh University conferred on him an honorary degree of doctor of laws.

Speaking at the Usher Hall ceremony, the Ambassador said that though "covert warfare burns fitfully beneath the surface of international relationships throughout the world" there was consolation in that general war thus far had been avoided.

MUSIC

Canadian Premiere of "Children of the Chapel" To Be Presented Here.

A musical event of importance to Belleville, the Canadian premiere of "The Children of the Chapel" by Sir Sydney Nicholson, dealing with the refounding of the Chapel Royal in the reign of Charles the Second of England, will be sung by the gentlemen and boy choristers of Christ Church in the Collegiate Auditorium on Friday, April 28. Mr. G. N. Maybee, organist and choir master of Christ Church will direct the music and Mr. D. C. Mackenzie Hume will be stage director.

The characters in the opera will be taken as follows:

Story of the Opera.

The action of the opera is based on an authentic historical event, namely, the restoration, by King Charles II in 1660, of English Church music in the churches in England whence it had been banned and suppressed entirely by the extremist policy of the Puritan regime, the choirs disbanded, the organs silenced or smashed and the music torn and destroyed.

This restoration is symbolized in this work by the re-establishment of the King's own church choir comprised of the Gentlemen and Children of the Chapel Royal. It was the greatest honor in the world of vocal music to be selected for membership of that body and admission was by musical merit only—not only ability to sing but also the proper understanding and control of music so that even the "Children of the Chapel", or the boys, numbered among their ranks capable and recognized composers of church music such as Wise, Humphrey, Blow and a lad called Purcel, every one of whom has left a name behind of immortality and whose compositions are still performed nearly 400 years after his death.

These great men in the field of English Church music are portrayed in this opera as at the time they were chosen to form part of the revived Chapel Royal Choir as also is Captain Cook, their exacting but inspired master, from whose genius as a teacher they all owed much of their later ascendency. Samuel Pepys, the peripatetic diarist from whose rambling notes we owe much of our knowledge of the domestic life of that time and some facts about the Chapel Royal personalities, is also portrayed in the interest he took in Captain Cook and his wonderful children.

News of $33,000 Bequest Surprises Local Resident

Ontario Intelligencer Reporter First to Inform Miss Georgina Linn of Her Good Fortune

WILLED BY SISTER

Through an intermediary and the aid of a scribbled note on a pad of paper, Miss Georgina Linn, middle-aged and totally deaf resident of 14 Isabel Street, this morning learned through the Daily Ontario Intelligencer she was beneficiary of a $33,000 estate through the terms of a will left by her sister, Mrs. Margaret L. Crabb, who died in Evanston, Illinois, January last. The will probated this week in Chicago, named Miss Linn of Belleville, sole beneficiary.

A brief news item date-lined Chicago and received from that city late yesterday was the first indication of the good fortune of the local resident. This morning, through the aid of a friend in the home, Miss Linn was advised of the terms through a brief note carried to her bedroom. She had not yet risen for the day.

"I am very much surprised. But of course I can say nothing until I have more definite word," wrote Miss Linn in answer to the news conveyed to her on the pad of paper.

The item from Chicago carried in Toronto newspapers first had not been seen by Miss Linn. Nor had any local friends observed the brief news account.

"Perhaps if you come back later we will know more about this legacy," invited the friend.

172 Transients Housed at Station During Week

Although the majority stated they were seeking employment in the shipping industry, soon to open in Canada, the largest number of transients to stop over in Belleville were in evidence passing through the city during the past week, statistics at the Police Station revealed today. During the past seven days a total of 172 transients were housed at the police station, an average of nearly 25 per night.

Last Tuesday night 47 transients sought shelter in the Belleville police station, with 35 signing the register on Thursday night. The former number is the largest registered in Belleville for a single night's lodging in many years. "Aside from the 47 registered we were forced to turn away at least ten more owing to the lack of accommodation that night", revealed Sergeant Arthur Harman this morning.

Commencing a week ago tonight the registrations of transients at the police station were as follows—Saturday 12; Sunday 15; Monday 12; Tuesday 47; Wednesday 28; Thursday 36 and last night 22.

Close scrutiny of the register disclosed the majority were heading easterly, stating they were seeking employment in the Great Lakes shipping industry, which opens soon. The majority registered were Canadians, although several Dutchmen, a German, a Russian and numerous Britishers were included in the above number.

"The unfortunate part of the matter is the fact that over seventy-five per cent of these men are between the ages of 17 and 25 years", revealed Chief Kidd today.

May Build New Public School at West Huntingdon

West Huntingdon public school pupils may be taught the three "R's" in a brand new building if tentative plans discussed at a meeting of ratepayers this week materialize.

The present building is very much out of date and badly in need of repair it was pointed out, while the school yard is also very unsatisfactory. The present building is over eight years ald and due to the fact that it is built of stone difficulty would be met in any attempts at remodelling to conform to plans as laid down by school authorities.

Nothing definite was decided upon at the meeting, but another is being called in the immediate future where final decision will be made. The meeting was held under the chairmanship of School Inspector McGuire.

PRINCIPLES INJURE DEMOCRACY

"I am a firm believer in the youth of today" declared Mr. Massey after a few preliminary remarks in which he expressed his extreme pleasure at the opportunity of speaking to the Belleville Chamber of Commerce. "The youth that faces toward the east, looks forward not backward, has its life ahead of it; youth that thrills to the romance of illusion and the adventure of life that lies ahead."

The speaker stated he had been associated with youth in all walks of life for 15 years and that his opinion was based on experience and extended observation.

"There are those," he said "who look on the youth of today with half-raised eyebrows, who wonder what sort of fathers they may make, think they are devoid of real individuality and ask so many questions. I heartily disagree with such an opinion.

"After all", Mr. Massey declared, "it is no new idea for youth to break away from the old generation. No new generation can reasonably expect the old to accept them tacitly and without criticism."

The older generations, some of them, are amazed at the sophistication of youth, some admire, others deplore it, he said. "I admire it, and think it an excellent sign when youth asks questions that should be answered. Times change, and have changed this century with amazing rapidity."

Likes New Generation

There are millions living today who remember when there were no radios, cars, motion pictures, airplanes and other modern scientific appliances. They fail to appreciate what tremendous changes have been wrought in society, and what impacts have been made upon the world.

"The new generation is sophisticated and speaks freely of things in the drawing room that before were whispered upstairs. This does not necessarily mean that youth is immoral, but straightforward and to be trusted. I like the new generation," Mr. Massey asserted.

"I am a member of the post-war generation", the speaker declared, "which was carried along on the crest of a wave and did not take things too seriously. The youth of today is faced with the stark realities of the moment, the tragedies of our present society and the shifting economies of the world. This youth does not know the horrors of warfare and only in recent years have they realized that tragic results of that war has been felt. They are today, unconsciously perhaps, prepared to fill that gap caused by the last war. By that I mean the men who would have been 40 to 45 today, many did not come back, many came home not the same."

There are two ways to overcome this tragic loss, the speaker said, first the older generation may hold on longer and second the younger generation may take hold earlier.

"If this nation is to progress as it should, it is highly desired that abilities of our youth be given freedom, the older generation not hold on too long and let the younger generation do their share."

Democracy Purged

"Democracy must be purged of the evils that have been permitted to creep into it," Mr. Massey declared, "Society and youth have suffered because of evil practices within our industrial and commercial systems. Men have been permitted to abuse the rare privileges of democracy with some of the strong taking advantage of many of the weak. These things must cease if Democracy is to prevail."

"It will be youth, quickened by the romance of illusions that will take the place of the missing generation to purge Democracy of its inside abuses. And it is doing it. But the great mistake that youth is apt to make is that it will not seek the advice of its elders, and profit by their experience. The danger is that the young man in his teens will know more than ever in his life again. This should not be the attitude. Youth should pick the brains of their elders but not feed on them. It is a great thing to profit by their mistakes so that the younger generation does not fall into the same pitfalls," the speaker said.

Debunking society has always been the job of youth, he continued, and there is much debunking to be done, but it should remember that the older generations have no monopoly on bunk, and youth in its efforts to purge Democracy should see that its own house is in order.

Constructive Criticism

"In these times," Mr. Massey told his audience, "things must be cleared away intelligently to make way for the new. Clearing away is the first constructive step. Our forebears, mine were U.E.L. stock, applied constructive criticism to the bushlands of Ontario, but building called for destructive tools. But destructive tools must be handled with intelligence and care. All this is true in the realms of the spiritual as well as in that of brick and mortar."

"The lot upon which the superstructure of democracy has been built, freedom, and liberty, is a lot that was purchased throughout the centuries, the speaker declared, "and at an almost unbelieveable cost. Surely, then, if Canadian youth is to purge democracy it should have no desire to destroy these priceless things which have been given us. Tradition, and all for which it stands should be the guiding star of Canadian youth.

Attitude Toward Democracy

Two great influences, the tangible and the intangible play upon us simultaneously, as citizens under democracy, the speaker pointed out. "The realms of the intangible are things spiritual and unreal, the highest things of life. The realm of the tangible are the stark realities of life, problems to be solved personally. And good citizenship is not inherited, it is achieved, an achievement that requires attainment to a real idealism and ideal realism.

"The citizen within a democracy is an individual recognized as an individual of worth and of individual character. He has freedom, liberties and is not part of a coagulated mass reduced to a state of ductility to be pounded about by those who aspire to the control of the state," Mr. Massey declared.

"We cherish our British freedom and liberties, but we must realize that the world today is in a state of flux, that democracies everywhere are challenged. Modern civilization is on the spot."

Society systems and social orders are being changed, some violently others quietly and peacefully, changes which concern themselves with forms of governments, a point that so vitally affects citizenships.

Governments Overthrown

"Within the last 20 years," he said "we have witnessed the overthrow of many governments, including three of the major countries of Europe while the fourth is in the throes of a bloody bitter civil war. Democracies have been done away with and autocracies substituted. Force, fear, intense narrow nationalism have gained supremacy. We, this very evening, as citizens enjoying liberty, are compelled to view with grave concern the events of the past few days. conscious there may be one end which, pray God, may not have to be".

"War is horrible, ghastly, fantastic beyond all expression. It, modern warfare, is the ultima thule of barbarism. But when force is used to promote bestiality and that force grows and grows, insensible to any appeal, to reason or humanity, what can be the answer but that force be met with force itself or a show of force."

Unbridled Monster

"Look at the world today," Mr. Massey asked, "Bestiality, in its most horrible and hideous form, spreading through our modern civilization under the cunning and scheming direction of an unbridled and unbalanced monster who is drunk with power."

With all the force of his eloquence the speaker drove his verbal attack at this enemy of freedom and democracy. "What is he doing," he queried. "Inhuman treatment of his enemies, assassination and slow death in hell holes known as concentration camps, persecution of races, men and women tormented, driven to suicide, expelled from their homes, beaten by mobs, excited by propaganda. He has no regard for truth or honor, signatures ignored, pledges discarded, in fact no form of unscrupulous conduct is too low or too foul, to be left alone."

"The whole of our western civilization is in chaos because of the unspeakable conduct of a handful of men among whom one stands out as the arch-enemy of decency, honor and good government."

Not Realise War

"Nations such as Great Britain, France and the U.S.A., which attempt to maintain their precious heritage of liberty and freedom and government "of the people" are compelled to the sickening realization that though every possible means may be employed to avoid war, all such attempts may fail. Devoutly we pray that sanity and reason may overcome insanity and madness."

People in Canada do not realize the full significance of what it may mean, Mr. Massey said. "No one has come to fit our children with gasmasks; tell us how to dig our garden to construct splinter-proof shelters, or what precautions to take against air-raids. And yet," he continued, "if we face the facts in the light of stark realism, how horrible it is to feel that in order to destroy the beast, peace-loving nations of the world may be forced to use force."

"We are either free or not free, have liberty or none, tolerant or intolerant, honest with the state or dishonest. We in Canada loathe the thought of war, but here no more than other peace-loving nations. To be compelled to take up arms is repugnant to us. God forbid the answer to the present chaos is through the use of force."

"But we cannot attain peace by merely hoping for it," the speaker asserted. "We must use our heads as well as our hearts. We must not forget that our love of liberty, freedom and decency does not only spring from British tradition but it is an integral part of the Christian religion."

"As lovers of liberty, democracy and decency, the spirit of this nation is challenged as never before, challenged to maintain in its dignity greatness and peace that should characterise us as Christian men and women," Mr. Massey declared, "and the challenge to you and me as individuals is to make democracy survive."

"We have watched Russian Communism with its tenet of faith being force; Italy with its Fascism tenet of intense and selfish patriotism and Germany with its Nazi tenet of fear. But in the British Empire we are experimenting social democracy, its chief tenet being individual freedom liberty and right."

Democracy Challenged

"Yet today our democracy is being challenged?" the speaker continued, "We must recognise our obligation as citizens to defend our freedom, liberty and our church. We are challenged to maintain a state where there is both real idealism and ideal realism; where we can worship as we see fit; a state that does not see things merely material but spiritual as well. We cannot have these things without doing something for them.

Citizenship

Lethargy of the individual to exercise his franchise was not a sign of good citizenship, the speaker pointed out. "We live in a democracy in which is vested in each individual the responsibility for the state. Democracy challenges and champions the value of the individual. We have been given the right to vote; a voice in the affairs of our nation; the right of choice of government; thus how unhealthy it is for any nation when citizens take a lethargic attitude toward exercising their franchise." The development of the individual in a democracy is of extreme value. He is not a cog. When he becomes a citizen his voice is just as important as any other."

"Under autocracy, his responsibility to the state ceases. He dare not raise his voice and it is the privilege of the state to do with him what it will. He is a material thing only and his spiritual value ceases to exist," the speaker said. "History has demonstrated that arbitrary power has never been beneficially used. Sooner or later the autocrats come to a nasty end."

Recognition of responsibility as free men in a democracy to attain the heights of real idealism and ideal realism was vital, the speaker declared. "In democracy we select men who make the laws and to replace them is our inexorable right. No laws are forced upon democratic peoples if they are not the will of the majority. People keep the law here because they want it. We as individuals have the freedom of law and no matter what the point of view of the individual, if they keep the law then harmony reigns within," he said.

Rotten Growths Within

"When the individual realizes he is part of the nation he also realizes that there is much that is upside down within our democracy. In other words there is always that within any nation which decays and dies as well as certain rotten growth that spring up, and have a cancerous effect upon society. But this does not mean the national tree is being destroyed. A skilled orchardist can remove the growth so that the three can blossom and grow, but a child armed with a hatchet can cut the tree down," Mr. Massey said.

Democracy Principles Sound

The principle of democracy is as sound as it is good, but it can be abused by the evils of exploitation, the speaker asserted. The use of democracy is the freedom and right of the individual to express as an individual his own attributes and abilities, but an abuse of democracy is the misuse of these rights and the most hideous abuse is the profits to ones self at the expense of the other fellow. A good citizen is he who applies his success to the benefit of those who are less fortunate than himself."

"Man generally is a good fellow" Mr. Massey asserted. "All he asks is security for himself and his family, to be treated fairly and get a just reward for his labors. Only through honest efforts can a nation progress. But if ambition is purely materialistic, we are parting with that foundation upon which the nation was built. Galsworthy said once that unless we mix the spiritual with the material we are sealing our own doom."

"The most powerful force in the days of ancient Rome", Mr. Massey said "was not the tramp of marching Roman Legions but that 'still small vioce' that was hidden underground, taking refuge in secret catacombs, where little prayer meetings were being held by the early Christians. Here the small voice was drowned out by the tramp of marching legions, but today that still small voice' is heard around the world long after the Roman Legions passed on".

Turning again to Youth in his concluding remarks, Mr. Massey appealed to his audience to "be proud of them and encourage them, for upon their youthful shoulders rests the responsibilities of the nation. It is youth who pays the piper and youth who will call the tune. We all owe a debt to the past and the only way we can pay our debt is by putting the future in debt to ourselves. This we can do through understanding and sympathetic devotion to the cause of our Canadian young manhood and womanhood", the speaker concluded.

Introduces Speaker

Prior to introducing Mr. Massey, Charles A. Cameron told the gathering that he had not missed an annual meeting since he joined it in 1920", and this is by far the largest attendance I have seen at any annual banquet", he said. It ws unique in that it was being held in a church and that the ladies were present for the first time at a Chamber of Commerce banquet.

The distinguished guest, he said was a son of one of Canada's distinguished families, and was one who has given much to youth problems. He was well-known as one of Canada's ablest after-dinner speakers, and felt that an introduction to the audience was unnecessary, because most people knew Mr. Massey through the medium of his Sunday afternoon broadcasts from the York Bible Class.

Mr. Massey was born in 1900 and was educated at the U. of T. and St. Andrew's schools, later graduating from Toronto University. He had brilliant career at Boston Tech especially in athletics. Later he attended Yale University returning to Canada where he became interested in social welfare. He spent two summers abroad one in Sweden and the other in Denmark, Mr. Cameron pointed out. "He is a director of Broadview University and a trustee of Toronto Eastern General Hospital.

"And I believe he has some interest in some political party, I think it is the Conservative party,". Mr. Cameron smiled, the remark drawing laughter from the audience.

"In 1925 he formed the York Bible Class, following in his father's footsteps with an ambition to teach Sunday School. He taught his first class when he was 13 years of age. However, the first attendance at the Bible Class was 12. Today it enjoys a membership of 4,000. The broadcasts of the York Bible Class have been on the air the longest of any program in the world," Mr. Cameron said, to applause.

"His subject tonight is 'Youth and Democracy' and I must say there are few people in Canada who can present the subject as adequately as Mr. Denton Massey".

Mayor Bone

Mayor Jamieson Bone was in jocular mood when he arose to extend the appreciation of the officers and members of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce and their guests for the splendid address. "It is without doubt one of the finest I have ever listened to in my life", he said. He enjoyed badinage with Mr. Massey at this point to the amusement of the audience. "Mr. Massey speaks about his ancestors being U.E. Loyalists His Worship smiled. "Well when I was in England a few weeks ago, I decided to look up mp ancestors. I went to Westminster Abbey and found it full of Bones". (Laughter.)

"I said to my wife", Mayor Bone joked "that Mr. Massey seemed a bright fellow. I wonder how he came to be an M.P. There is a resemblance to Abe Lincoln there especially in the eyes and behind the eyes," he smiled.

"Sincerely" His Worship said. "I must say the address I have just heard is one of the most stimulating I have ever heard, and" turning to the guest speaker, "I extend our hearty appreciation and in the words of the Scotsman", May ye cam back soon".

President MacLean Haig

"The Belleville Chamber of Commerce is twice blest tonight", President MacLean Haig, toastmaster for the evening declared in his brief opening remarks "in that firstly, we have the ladies with us for the first time, and secondly we are honored with the largest attendance ever seen at an annual banquet. This I attribute to the popularity of our distinguished guest of honor".

On behalf of his organization, President Haig extended the official welcome to members and guests. Referring to the work of the Chamber, he assured his listeners that it was doing all in its power for the citizens of Belleville. "We are doing the best we can", he said. "There are things we see that should be done, and which we would like to see done and although it may take time, they will be done. The directors are working all the time in the interests of the residents of this fair city".

New Members

A number of new members including Messrs. A. H. Jones, A. C. Campbell, Yanover Brothers of Esquire Clothes, William Bews, H. P. Holway, Joseph Chargois, L. W. Francis, Peter Lambros, H. P. Willson, P. F. Hayward, Nick Chigaros, Geo. Pauley, E. T. Truman, O. W. Duff, Mrs. J. E. Devault, Mrs. Amy Rawson, W. F. Allore, H. J. Bryant, I. Butler and Robt. R. Turney were formally presented and accepted by the organization members present.

In welcoming the new members Mr. Lyle Hunter stated that the best indication of a healthy plant was the rate and vitality of its growth. So with an organization like the Chamber of Commerce, it's success extended as far as "we increase membership and to what extent active interest is taken by members".

He viewed the steady progress of the organization since its inception in 1919 when its original members numbered fifty.

"Today membership numbers 160" he pointed out. "It is satisfactory to see such a steady rate of progress", Mr. Hunter said "and a greater satisfaction to note the increased interest being taken by members". He paid tribute to the fine work done by the Chamber last year under Past-President Jack MacIntosh. "He served in a highly capable manner and we hope this year under the leadership of President Haig to go to further success", Mr. Hunter concluded.

Tributes were paid during the evening to Secretary-Manager J. O. Herity for his efforts in arranging the banquet and to the ladies of Bridge Street Church for the sumptuous repast served.

An outstanding feature of the affair was the fine musical program in which were heard the fine melodic voices of the Belleville Male Quartette in two numbers and the splendid tenor voice of James Bankier in "Maid of Malabar" and "Annie Laurie". Leo Riggs presided at the piano in his usual masterful manner with Mr. S. R. (Sandy) Burrows leading some enthusiastic community singing.

GLASGOW CYCLIST ENJOYING CANADA

President of Glasgow Road Club Having Novel Holiday

Visiting relatives in Canada, Peter Gardner of Glasgow, Scotland, and who is president of the Glasgow Road Club, stopped over in this city last night enroute to Toronto. Mr. Gardner crossed the Atlantic and is cycling through Eastern Canada visiting relatives enroute on a holiday.

Arriving at Halifax, Mr. Gardner proceeded by train to Quebec, where he mounted his bicycle and pedalled to Montreal where he visited a sister he had not seen in over sixteen years. Leaving Montreal on Thursday morning Mr. Gardner reached Prescott that night. After resting Mr. Gardner cycled from Prescott to Belleville yesterday and left Belleville this morning, enroute to Toronto where he will visit other relatives he has not seen since they left Scotland many years ago.

"I miss the hedges along your roads. In Scotland the roads are lined with hedges, but I do find one can enjoy the wide open spaces of this great country of Canada while cycling through," stated Mr. Gardner to The Ontario Intelligencer as he added the only poor stretch of road he had encountered in this country was the road between the Point Anne lane and Belleville along Highway No. 2. "It is a disgrace to the rest of your country," added Mr. Gardner.

Mr. Gardner is president of the Glasgow Road Club and has cycled through the greater part of Europe and the British Isles. "I hope to take in the World's Fair at New York next month and compare it with the great British Empire Exposition we had in Glasgow last year," remarked Mr. Gardner as he pushed off for Toronto this morning.

JOE ASPDEN IS CONTEST WINNER

Oratorical Competition Held in Memorial Hall of Albert College

Competing for the $25 award presented by the Rev. J. McD. Kerr, Toronto, for oratory at Albert College, three young men took part last evening in an oratorical contest held in Memorial Hall, with Jo Aspden being chosen as winner.

The contest took place at a meeting of the College Literary Society over which Jack Blackburn presided as chairman. A high standard of public speaking was reached by the three contestants, Carl Stewart who spoke on "The British North America Act", Jo Aspden whose subject was "Democracy and Dictators" and Vernon Lougheed whose topic was "The Importance of Public Speaking". The judges, Rev. W. J. Walker, Mr. Mackenzie Robertson, and Miss Agnes Gallagher had difficulty in making the decision so close were the scores of the competitors. Announcement was made that the presentation of the prize would take place at the annual convocation of the college.

The interesting porgram included selections by the men's chorus under the direction of Mr. S. M. Anglin, piano numbers by Mr. Anglin and a delightful reading by Miss Jessie B. Tuite. At the conclusion of the meeting refreshments were served in Ackerman Hall.

Boat Owners Prepare Their Craft for the Summer Season

The dull thud of caulking hammers is sounding the first spring song of the awakening water front this week as boat owners prepare their beached craft for a busy season ahead.

Work on the large fishing craft, the F. B. Wright, has been commenced, and ship's carpenters are giving the boat a thorough grooming caulking planks and whiteleading. Considerable new work is also being undertaken on the cruiser Pastime owned by George Loadsman and younger boat owners have spread canvas on handy supports for the first airing of the season at the Yacht Club.

Ice in the upper harbor is yielding under the rays of the sun, and though still heavy at the lower end of the harbor, first breakup has been noted in the upper section.

THIS TARDY APRIL

'Spring, the sweet Spring' has made several fitful starts. An occasional mild day with sunlight or a warm rain gives hope that Spring will burst upon us, but then comes colder weather and the remaining traces of snowdrifts back of northeast corners of buildings seem almost fitting, for such weather. May only nine days away! Without sudden change and the help of the citizen who is so weary of seeing snow that he goes out on his lawn and scatters the snow over the grass where the sun can beat upon it and cause it to disappear, it is just possible that there may be some ice left in the shade of buildings and trees when the glad month of May, the leafing month, arrives. May queens and their coronation this year may receive a less balmy reception than usual for May-day.

A look forward may not be out of place—Susan Coolidge says of May:

"Spring's last-born darling, clear-eyed, sweet,
Pauses a moment with white twinkling feet
And golden locks in breezy play,
Half teasing and half tender, to repeat,
Her song of May."

Oliver Goldsmith speaks of- "Winter lingering" chilling "the lap of May."

Here are some references to the present month:—

"Sweet April showers
Bring May flowers (Tosser.)
"Spongy April" (Shakespeare)
"When proud-pied April dress'd in all his trim Hath put a spirit of youth in everything," (Shakespeare)
"A gush of bird-song, a pattern of dew,
A cloud and a rainbow's warning,
Suddenly sunshine and perfect blue—
An April day in the morning" (Harriet Spofford).

April yet has time to redeem its good name.

LATE LADY ABERDEEN

The Dowager Marchioness of Aberdeen and Temair, widow of the first Marquess, former Governor General of Canada, is remembered in many parts of the Dominion. Her visit in the nineties to Belleville is recalled when the city tendered a reception to Lord and Lady Aberdeen. On the occasion of their visit Lord Aberdeen, accompanied by Sir Mackenzie Bowell and other leading public men, visited a meeting of the evangelists, Crossley and Hunter, in Bridge Street Methodist Church.

Lady Aberdeen was a philanthropist and is said to have participated in more charities than any other woman in the world. She headed the Woman's Health Movement and built sanatoria for tuberculosis sufferers. She was at one time President of the International Council of Women.

The Dowager Marchioness was descended from Thomas Marjoribanks, who in 1541 was Lord Provost of Edinburgh.

In Canada she is particularly remembered for her work in organizing the foundation of the Victorian Order of Nurses.

Lord and Lady Aberdeen left an abiding impression upon Canada, which they came to know thoroughly as they were constant travellers.

THE MEDITERRANEAN

The Mediterranean ('Our Lake' according to the Italians), is very cosmopolitan this week with between 500 and 600 warships of four great powers, Britain, France, Germany and Italy, steaming in and around this sea and outside the Pillars of Hercules as the Romans of old called the straits which now go by the name of Straits of Gibraltar.

The present assemblage of the four navies is unique in history. There is no war, though there may be preparations for war The Hitler navy has left the protection of Kiel and Heligoland and is now somewhere off the coast of Spain. Is Germany making sure her navy will not be bottled up as in the last war or is it necessary to hold ocean manoeuvres? What is Italy planning? The purpose of Britain and France is known: to guard the interests of the two democratic powers in the Inland Sea.

On the chessboard of Europe, the Atlantic and the northern part of the Continent of Africa and it may be in America and on the Pacific, countless manoeuvres may take place in peace as in war. Today there is evidence of fencing for position and advantage.

Cannon and fire-arms are cruel and damnable machines. I believe them to be the direct suggestion of the devil. Against the flying ball no valor avails; the soldier is dead ere he sees the means of his destruction. If Adam had seen in a vision the horrible instruments his children were to invent, he would have died of grief.—Martin Luther.

That on the morrow he hath need of me,
I'll float with him upon the Stygian tide
Without a fear of what his plan may be.
Those whom I leave, may they have cause to say,
"There passes one for whom we have no fear,
He leaves the world the better for his stay,
And those he touched will hold his memory dear.
Then as the Boatman steers his craft to land,
As through the mist he chides me, bids me haste,
Give me one friend to hold my whitening hand,
One with whom I, the trials of life have faced
Then will I welcome he whom many fear,

SECOND HAND BOOKS BOUGHT IN SECONDHAND STORES may not conceal treasures, but sometimes they contain something odd and interesting, from pale pressed flowers suggesting love stories of long ago, or clippings from newspapers of other days whose readers have mostly taken the one-way ride over the hill. One such book purchased recently by a Sidelight Fan contained a copy of a very interesting EXTRA published by the Belleville Intelligencer. The "Extra" was tiny, being six inches long by three inches wide in perfect condition as if it had been printed yesterday, but the news was portentious, being no less than news of the assassination of Hon. D'Arcy McGee, member of the Canadian Parliament, a young Irishman who was making a name and fame for himself in Canada, his adopted country, as poet, orator, writer and statesman. Here's the text of the Extra:

> INTELLIGENCER EXTRA
> Intelligencer Office
> Belleville, April 7, 1868
> 9 o'clock a. m.
> HON. T. D. McGEE ASSASSINATED
> The following telegraph which has just been received is of such an appalling character as to be scarcely worthy of belief. The sad, sad, news is, however, only too true, and will send a thrill of horror from one end of the Dominion to the other:
> OTTAWA APRIL 7th, 1868—HON. T. D. McGEE WAS ASSASSINATED THIS MORNING AT HALF PAST TWO ON ENTERING HIS BOARDING HOUSE - MRS. TROTTER'S SPARKS STREET. THE BALL PASSED THROUGH HIS HEAD AND HE DIED INSTANTLY.

If that does not represent the smallest newspaper ever issued as an EXTRA we would like to see a smaller. Seems as though the book had not been opened since 1868, or this priceless midget newspaper would have emerged long since.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE — In front of a Belleville restaurant hangs a sign which reads:

HOT DOGS 5c

Anyone reading that sign will be sure to remember it, causing one to wonder whether there was not more guile than ignorance in the conception.

REFERENCE HAVING BEEN MADE IN THIS COLUMN TO THE ASSASSINATION of Hon. Thomas D'Arcy McGee, a brief biography of this interesting Irish-Canadian should be interesting to the Sidelight Family, as being new to some and recalling to others early Canadian history and an event which cast a shadow of sorrow and indignation over this young nation. The assassin was caught and hanged.

Thomas D'Arch McGee, Canadian poet, orator and statesman, was born in Louth, Ireland. He emigrated to the United States in 1842 and in three years made an international reputation as a poet and editor on the staff of the Boston Pilot. Daniel O'Connell induced him to return to Ireland as editor of the Freeman's Journal when he was only twenty years of age. McGee became associated with the Young Ireland party and was forced to escape to the United States in 1848. He became one of the editors of the New York Nation and the Celt, which was first published in Boston and afterward in Buffalo. In 1837 he moved to Montreal and started The New Era. Here he became widely known as an orator, entered Provincial Parliament and became President of the Council. He afterward held Cabinet offices as Secretary of State and Minister of Agriculture, and in 1867 was elected to the Dominion Parliament. In 1868 he was assassinated. His published works are "History of the Irish Settlers in America", "History of Attempts to Establish the Protestant Reformation in Ireland", and "Popular History of Ireland."

Ten United Church Presidents

The Presidents of the ten United Church of Canada Conferences in Canada are all men who were brought up in Canada and took their schooling and university training in this Dominion.

Rev. Walter M. Kiteley, President of the London Conference, was born in Wellington County, near Drayton and went to school at Belleville. He then went to Victoria College, Toronto.

Rev. L. H. MacLean, President of the Maritime Conference, spent his boyhood in Strathlorne, N.S. He was educated at Dalhousie University and the Presbyterian College at Halifax.

Rev. A. Dawson Matheson, President of the Montreal-Ottawa Conference, was born in Glengarry County, Ontario. He is a graduate of Queen's University.

Rev. Wendell Phillips Woodger, President of the Bay of Quinte Conference was born at Thessalon, Ontario. He was educated at Belleville and Victoria College, Toronto.

Rev. George W. Barker, President of the Toronto Conference, was born in Oxford County, Ontario. He attended Victoria College, Toronto.

Rev. W. S. Daniels, President of the Hamilton Conference, was born in Ancaster Township, near Hamilton. He also graduated from Victoria College, Toronto.

Rev. Cecil H. Best, President of the Manitoba Conference, was born on a farm near Omemee, near Peterborough. He graduated from University of Toronto and Knox College.

Rev. George A. Wilson, President of the British Columbia Conference is a veteran of the ministry, having gone to the Cariboo district of British Columbia as a representative of the Presbyterian Church in 1894. He is a graduate of the University of Toronto and Knox College.

The eleventh conference of the United Church is in Newfoundland, where Rev. Wilfred J. Woolfrey, who was educated in Newfoundland is President.

Being president of a conference can be taken as just an honor, but most of the men accept the responsibility that can go with the position. As head of a division of their church, they can give leadership and driving force towards establishing and maintaining a vital religion.—W. L. Clark, in Windsor Star.

MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT

An editorial in The Ottawa Journal on Saturday concluded with these words: "Ontario municipalities gradually are being deproved of the freedom they once enjoyed to run their local affairs, and it is high time an issue was made out of this regrettable trend."

To use a slang phrase: "Isn't it the truth?" . . .

Municipal government is the nearest approach to self-government that the people in general can hope to enjoy. If this form of self-government is filched from them it will be a loss indeed to democracy. It might be a good thing for a month or two for all newspapers to worry a little less about alleged loss of freedom and democracy in Europe and in Quebec and elsewhere, and turn their editorial guns on the systematic plan to steal away from the people of the municipalities the right to govern themselves and administer their own affairs.—Timmins Advance.

TWO NEWSMEN

But one Canadian and one English newspaperman will be aboard H. M. S. Repulse when the King and Queen sail for Canada. The Canadian might put in the time disabusing the Englishman's mind of the idea that this is a land of Indians and buffalo—and the Englishman could interrupt now and then to make some observations on what would happen to us without the British Navy. — Windsor Star.

Bowmanville Among the Missing

Poor old Bowmanville is again listed among the missing when the patronage plums are handed out. This time it is the supplementary estimates for the Department of Public Works which were tabled in parliament on Friday. Think of it, over two and a half million dollars for harbors in Ontario and not a penny do we see to dredge, repair or otherwise improve or beautify Bowmanville harbor, which at one time was considered the best naturally protected harbor along the north shore of Lake Ontario.

It's a bit embarrassing as well as annoying for Bowmanville folks to see other nearby towns getting these generous handouts: Cobourg — dredging, $18,400; Port Hope—harbor repairs, $36,000; Oshawa—harbor improvements, $88,000; Whitby—harbor improvements, $17,400; Port Perry — improvements, $15,000. Oh, well, maybe the government and our town council are quite willing to just think of Bowmanville harbor as a pleasant memory and a thing of the past.

To many of us in our youth it was a busy place with high grain elevators, huge coal sheds, three or four-masted schooners bringing coal from Oswego, and taking back grain to the U.S. Then there were passenger and freight steamers which plied between Hamilton and Kingston three times a week. Excursion boats such as the "Garden City" and "Argyle" made trips to Niagara Falls, Toronto and Port Dalhousie.

Then the old lighthouse at the end of the wharf was a popular rendesvous moonlight nights for lovers to spoon in a secluded bench (if they were not all occupied). Do you remember the initials and other fancy carvings all over the lighthouse? As we recall these works of art we would say this building had more carvings on it to the square inch than any other public building in Canada.—Bowmanville Statesman.

Totalitarians Exploit Mass To Very Limit

German and Russian Bureaucracies Alike—Privileged Roll in Wealth, Says Returning S. Scarletta

The following letter appeared in the Toronto Globe and Mail:—

To the Financial Editor, The Globe and Mail: Many people believe that fascism is the antidote for communism. I have visited Nazi Germany and "Communist" Russia and have come to the following conclusion: Nazism and Communism are as alike as two peas in a pod; they have different bosses, but the same endless bureaucracy. Nobody dares do anything in those countries before careful inquiry as to whether he is likely to be shot for doing it. Officials squeal on their own departments to escape being picked up by the spy bandwagon. And those arrested, even when innocent, confess the most impossible things respecting themselves in the hope that they may be kept alive. If they want to be sure to die, they insist on their innocence, and their trial is private.

Germany and Russia are sick — sick with the madness of military nationalism, which looks upon the masses as cattle and cannon fodder. The Hitler-Stalin slogan is: "Defence of the fatherland is the supreme law of life." This affirmation of universal hysteric passion for the fatherland is the basis for all "blood purges," spying, etc. A concentration of political power and privilege is in the hands of bureaucratic castes supporting autocrats more ruthless than Kaiser and Czar.

The privileged class in totalitarian states roll in luxury and wealth, while the masses live in poverty. For instance, the average worker in Russia gets about 200 rubles a month ($40.) while privileged workers get from 600 to 800 rubles a month; and the workers' bosses get from 4,000 to 10,000 rubles a month. Interest to the holders of government bonds and savings bankbooks is about 8 per cent. This is a greater exploitation of the masses than you will find in any democratic country, and is the very opposite to Marx's idea of the society of the free and equal. What I have said of Russia (exploitation of the masses) applies equally to Germany.

Russia is inclined to turn toward capitalist democracy. She is again ready to enter the old system of military alliances.

Lauds Chamberlain

Are we approaching a world war? No. The dictators (Hitler, Stalin, Mussolini) know that a world war would bring revolution in totalitarian states; it would finish the rule of the dictators.

Chamberlain and Roosevelt are attempting to form a European-Asiatic-African Empire under British hegemony. An empire where British democracy, British justice, peace, contentment and happiness will rule. Soviet Russia, I am informed, is willing to become an integral part of this Empire. Stalin is now aware of the fact that the "collapse of capitalism," as the Marxians believed, instead of bringing the expropriation of the capitalist and the dictatorship of the proletariat, will bring a capitalist democracy similar to British democracy. Hitler and Mussolini must follow the leadership of Chamberlain, Roosevelt and Stalin.

Time will prove that Prime Minister Chamberlain is the greatest statesman the world has ever known. God bless him! And he will live to hear himself addressed as "the saviour of mankind."

Toronto. S. Scarletta.

MIXED METAPHORES

Street-corner Orator: "Gentlemen, my opponent suggests that such things are mere pin-pricks. But I can assure him that this pin-prick is my last straw which breaks the camel's back. If it is not uprooted while still in the cradle, its venomous tongue will permeate the very pillars of democracy, and ring up the curtain on the deluge which will consume us all."

NEW CATTLE FOOD

One of the amazing things in the plants where grapefruit juice is canned is the utilization of the grapefruit skins. They are dehydrated, crushed and pressed. In that form they are a most acceptable food for cattle. No use yet has been found for the seeds, but doubtless one will be discovered.—Cincinnati Inquirer.

ALASKAN SWEEPSTAKE

The Spring thaw brings a fortune each year in Alaska to some lucky person. All Alaska joins in guessing the exact minute when the ice will start breaking up in the Nenana River near Fairbanks. One year the winner, who guessed the time to the minute, received over $61,000. Electric wires attached to a clock frozen in the ice ring a bell and stop the clock the moment the ice starts to move.—The Commentator.

CACTUS JACK

Garner, in dress, word and action, typifies Texas. So, not the least of the factors explaining why he is now out in front is the environment from which he springs.

Whether he will stay in front is a question only for Elishas to deal with — as is the case of Mr. Dewey on the Republican side. He, too, is in the lead, but has yet to prove whether he can do the mile or is just a quarter horse.

But certain it is that Cactus Jack from Texas and Mr. Dewey, of Owosso and New York, are the favorites in the 1940 betting.—N. Y. World-Telegram.

PERSIAN ROSE TREE

In India and Persia grow real rose trees, tall enough to shade promenades with their great flowers. In America grow fine apples. The two belong to the same botanical family, and in Santa Barbara the reverend rosiculturist Father Schoener, whose avenue of giant rose trees there is famous, expects that his hybrigization of Spitzenbergs with Rosa pomifera's scarlet seed will presently give the world a fairy fruit, that in years to come we shall harvest apples from rose bushes; spicy, small and sweet.

Father Schoener's apples are so reminiscent of roses that even jelly made from them retains that scent—and undoubtedly this is what Meredith's delicate lass, in future poetical ages, will spread upon a rice wafer at the hour of birdsong and dew; the faint suggestion of just a taste of rose-apple jelly.—N. Y. Herald-Tribune.

FARMHOUSE DOOR

A few weeks ago we commented on the fact that in a considerable number of instances farmhouses possess front doors which are rarely opened, and which, indeed, have no steps leading to them, and wonder was expressed why they had ever been placed in position.

A rural correspondent now tells us of a farmhouse of ample proportions in the Soperton section which is not only without a front door, but which never had one. The reason: The farmer who built it was the father of several attractive daughters and he wished to keep his eye on them.

As he customarily inhabited the kitchen, he could not do so if there was a front door through which the daughters could walk with their escorts. With only a back door in commission, however, he could see with whom the various daughters were "walking out," and, if necessary, question them about their destinations. — Brockville Recorder Times.

Reindeer Herd Taken To Fawning Grounds

Ottawa, Apr. 22 (CP)—Following a successful winter on their inland range, Canada's main reindeer herd, now numbering about 3,500, has been moved to the fawning grounds on Richards Island, a short distance off the Arctic coast, according to reports received by the Mines and Resources Department from the reindeer tation in the Mackenzie Delta area.

Used as a summer range since 1936, Richards Island provides a well protected area for fawning, has an excellent growth of grasses, shrubs, and sedges which form the summer diet of the deer. Fawning usually starts in April and continues into June, and in midsummer the island is the scene of the annual round-up, when the animals are put through the corrals and counted.

The smaller herd of about 900 deer, separated from the main herd last December and established in the Anderson River area under native management, has been brought to the mouth of the Anderson River for fawning and summer grazing, the reports said.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

Acne—Pimples—Can Be Cured

"Nearly four million boys and girls in the United States have acne (pimples). This total may raise a question in our minds; but if you stand by the entrance to one of our large New York high schools and watch several thousand youngsters come rushing out into the sunlight, you'll observe many cases of this blotching that comes at or near puberty as the boy and girl are emerging into manhood and womanhood."

I am quoting Inis Weed Jones in Hygeia.

Some of the ideas about acne have been proven to be wrong but they still persist in the minds of many people. It should be said for once and all time that acne is not due to lack of cleanliness or to "bad" blood. Nor can acne or pimples be given or transmitted to others; and it is not due to any "bad" habits or any "social disease".

Still another mistaken idea is that as acne comes at puberty, the boy or girl will outgrow it and nothing can be done about it in the meantime. As a matter of fact, much can be done about acne; it can be cured or greatly helped in the majority of cases.

Today the family physician recognises the handicap to boy and girl in social and business life from a face covered with pimples and gives the same thought and energy to helping the patient as in any other ailment. "The following methods of correction are now variously combined by both family physician and skin specialists":

1—An incredible amount of face washing to get rid of excess oil. Five washings a day with a mild soap. Wash first with warm water and then with cold.

2—Improvement in the general health and living conditions. Outdoor exercise, plenty of fresh air and sunshine. Go slow on sweets pastries and rich fried foods. Eat instead, fresh fruits and vegetables, plenty of meat or fish and also plenty of milk.

3—Use of ultra-violet rays or X-ray treatments or both. This treatment should be given by an expert.

4—The use of gland extracts—thyroid and pituitary—when lack of gland juice is thought to be the cause.

To these methods may be added the viosterol treatment which has helped many cases. Take ten drops of viosterol daily, gradually increasing dose until at end of two weeks, 20 drops is being taken daily. Continue to take 20 drops daily for two more weeks. Wait ten days and repeat if necessary. Take the dose, ten drops or more, at one time in a half glassful of water.

HEN FACTORY

Hens on the farm of Charles P. Wendig, near New Hope, Pa., 35 miles north of Philadelphia, promise to lay 1,000 eggs per day, on a factory production basis, where 500 eggs were laid before, all through the application of scientific methods and the intelligent utilization of about 23 kw. of electricity. Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co., co-operating with Philadelphia Electric Co., and seven manufacturers of farm equipment, did the job. Electricity wakes the chickens, keeps their chicks warm, heats their water, provides them with 12 hours' light per day the year round, grinds and mixes their feed, sterilises their air and grain, grades their eggs, cleans the shells, and puts the hens to bed at night.—Business Week.

PRESIDENT LEBRUN

President Albert Lebrun, the 68-year-old man from Lorraine who has been re-elected to a second term as the head of the French nation, did not want the honor. He was thoroughly tired of being what the late Raymond Poincare used to call himself— the prisoner of the Elysee. Lebrun was weary of opening horticultural shows, attending dinners and "vins d'honneur"—and all the other routine things expected of a French President. A demon statistician has estimated that Lebrun, during his seven years in office, has signed 200,000 state papers, attended 1,300 official functions, presided over 350 inaugurations, granted 7,000 audiences, travelled 650,000 miles, been godfather to 2,200 children and kissed 72 bouquet-carrying little girls.—N. Y. Herald Tribune.

PLAGUE CONQUERED

For the fact that New York is one of the most healthful of the large cities of the world, Dr. William Hallock Park, who died at the age of seventy-six, deserves a large share of the credit.

Time was when diphtheria and cholera infantum took a dreadful toll among children. Dr. Park put an end to that. He attacked disease on many fronts and, although he did not find all the answers, he made progress in virtually every field of research which he invaded.

At the beginning of his service of forty-three years as director of the bureau of laboratories of the Department of Health, New York was, in all truth, a disease-ridden city; the history of those forty-three years is one of patient experiment and steady advancement. He left no fortune, but he left a name that is an honor to medicine. He was one of the true benefactors of mankind. — N. Y. Herald Tribune.

MRS. J. PRECIOUS FIRST PRESIDENT OF NEW SOCIETY

University Women's Club of the Canadian Federation Formed in City

FIFTY ATTEND

Miss Laura Newman of St. Catharines is Special Speaker

With Miss Laura Newman, St. Catharines, past president of the Canadian Federation of University Women's Clubs as guest speaker, an inaugural banquet, instituting a club of this nature for Belleville district, took place at the New Queens Hotel last evening, Mrs. John Precious being the unanimous choice as president of the new organization. Fifty women college graduates from Belleville, Trenton, Brighton and Stirling were present and were most enthusiastic over the enterprise.

Mrs. Precious asted as chairman for the occasion and a delicious banquet was served the guests, the long table looking particularly attractive with tall red tapers, red tulips and matching crystal. The report of the nominating committee was presented by Mrs. J. E. Bateman, the other members being Miss Erie Grout and Miss Nellie Merry. The following executive was elected:

President—Mrs. John Precious.
Vice-president—Mrs. Wm. Doyle.
Secretary—Miss Jessie Priest.
Treasurer—Miss Hilda McLaren.
Social Convener—Miss Erie Grout.
Program Committee—Miss Agnes Sweeney, Mrs. Stuart Lazier, Miss Bessie Billings.

Messages from Federation.

The chairman read a number of interesting letters conveying good wishes to Belleville organization from Canadian Federation officers, welcoming the club into a federation of thirty-five branches with 2,695 members across the Dominion. A message from Miss I. Everson, formerly of Belleville, and now a member of St. Catharines Club was also read.

Mrs. Stuart Lazier introduced Miss Newman, graduate of the University of Toronto and past president of the Canadian Federation who gave a most entertaining and informative address of keen interest to the college woman. That the impetus for the forming of the Belleville club had come from within and was not the result of intensive organization from the federation was an earnest of an enthusiastic and successful group, the speaker said.

In a most interesting manner, Miss Newman discussed the responsibilities that should be assumed by women who have had the privilege of higher education and the number in Canada was much too small, being only two per cent of the women. In college graduates, even those who did not specialize in certain subjects one looked for broader understanding, a more tolerant attitude, ability to think better and to judge things in a more intelligent way. Such women had much to contribute to the community in fellowship, leadership and service, as the Canadian Federation president had pointed out, while one speaker summed up the university woman's responsibility as "an academic noblesse oblige".

International Aspect.

The Canadian Federation came into being in 1919 when there were five clubs in existence. Many centres could not offer a sufficient nucleus of their own to form a club but Belleville would now make the thirty sixth in the Dominion. The chief work of the federation has been providing scholarships to outstanding Canadian students, eighteen having received the award and the majority had made valuable contributions in research in the field of science. The federation acts as a clearing house for the clubs and brings university women in contact with each other. Miss Newman discussed the international federation, having had the pleasure of attending the triennial conference in Poland three years ago. Since that time a number including the federations of Germany, Italy, Spain, Portugal and Austria have had to disband. The conference this year would present a very different picture.

Mostly individual clubs were left to arrange their programs for themselves for the benefit of members and for the advancement of their own particular community. To the Belleville club Miss Newman extended sincere good wishes for its success.

Mrs. William Doyle expressed in a charming manner the appreciation of the club for Miss Newman's thoughtful and interesting presentation of the ideals and aims of the club. The vote of thanks was seconded by Mrs. R. J. Davidson and a discussion of future plans brought the banquet to a close.

Essay by Fred Noyes Receives Honorable Mention in Contest

Although our neighbors to the south may claim to be possessors of accomplishments in which they excel Canadians generally esey-writing is not one of them. That was substantially proven the other day in a motion-picture contest in which thousands of Americans were entered with only three Canucks submitting their efforts. The results this week announce that two of the three Canadians won prizes, Miss Harriet Smith, Brantford, capturing sixth place with Fred Noyes of Gilbert street, Belleville, receiving honourablee mention when he finished in thirteenth position.

The essays were written on the subject "Why I should like to visit the country of Marie Antoinette". Commenting on the small number of Canadians entered, Mr. George Forhan, manager of the Belle Theatre stated that lateness of Canadian theatres in receiving the first run of the picture "Marie Antoinette" prevented potential hundreds of Canadians from entering the contest.

Following is the essay which won for Mr. Noyes honorable mention in competition with two fellow Canadians and thousands of Americans:

"Because in the country of Marie Antoinette there occurred so many world-stirring events; there lived so many world-famous men and women; there came into being so many world-changing political, spiritual, cultural and social reforms; there, too, were waged some of the world's most important wars.

"Because from France came William the Conqueror to lay much of the foundation on which modern Britain is built; came Champlain, LaSalle and othr explorrs to help found the United States and Canada; came Jeanne d'Arc to unite the French people and rekindle a faith that still comforts and inspires millions; came Davir, Rosa Bonheur, Rodin and many other great sculptors and painters; came Fontaine, Hugo, Rousseau, Dumas, Flaubert, Balzac, Verne, Anatole France, Bourget and other literary giants; came de Lisle, Saint Saens, Debussy, Gounod, Bizet, Ravel and numerous other famous composers and musicians; came Pasteur, the Curies and several more scientists whose discoveries have blessed mankind.

"Because France is a veritable "cradle of history". Scarcely a town, city, province, river, forest or valley but has its important historical associations; scarcely an acre of its soil but has been enriched by the blood of men and women who fought tyranny, resisted oppression and sacrificed themselves for a spiritual, political and social freedom which has inspired all Christendom.

"Because I should like to see for myself a country and people which could build such architectural masterpieces as those of Paris, Rheims, Rouen, Amiens and Versailles; which could create fictional chaacters like Jean Valjean, Sapho, Pere Goriot, Quasimodo and the Three Musketeers; which could produce people like Charlemagne, Rochefoucauld, Napoleon, Robespierre, Richelieu, Madame de Stael, Sarah Bernhardt, Joffre and Foch.

"Because historically, romantically, spiritually and artistically Marie Antoinette's country is for me the most fascinating country in the whole world."

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, April 23

SUNDAY'S horoscope is one of mixed influences. There may be some definite gains for the clergy and the studious and industrious, and some pleasant journeys or romantic adventures for others. But all are beset by undercurrents of deception or treachery calling for vigilance.

Those whose birthday it is are assured of a year of fairly progressive and productive conditions, with returns for labor and steadfastness. But there are also certain undercurrents of treachery or duplicity that might cause financial loss or other hazards.

A child born on this day may be studious, diligent and talented. But it may have undercurrents of unrest and emotional disturbances, making it sensitive and difficult.

For Monday, April 24

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is mainly a disappointing one, although there are some indications of preferment, favors or promotion, with superiors or other high personages friendly and approachable. But there may be anxieties or difficulties with writings, papers and contracts, and there are signs of friction or disappointments in social, domestic or affectional affairs.

Those whose birthday it is may look for promotion, favors or benefits from those in power, but there may be some difficulties with papers, writings or documents. Beware of loss or distortion. In private life there may be inharmonies of a social, domestic or romantic nature.

A child born on this day may be disposed to attain things in the easiest way in business, and may not be amiable in its private affairs. Nevertheless, it should attract benefits from employers, superiors and elders.

KINGSTON ROAD W. A.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Association of the Kingston Road United Church was held on April 4th., at the home of Mrs. Fred Parrott, with fourteen members and three visitors present.

The gathering was called to order by the president, Mrs. MacDonald. After singing, "Joy to the World." Mrs. Farnsworth led in prayer. Following this the minutes of the meeting were read and the roll called. All repeated the 23rd Psalm in unison.

The afternoon was spent in quilting a quilt. A very dainty lunch was served by Mrs. Logan, Miss Logan, Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Parrott added many dainties to the lunch.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Parrott for her home and kind hospitality.

A special quilt has been quilted this week at the home of the president, Mrs. MacDonald.

If you have got a quilt to quilt,
Just ask our W. A.
We quilt them satisfactory,
Or else you do not pay.
We quilt them nice, we quilt them neat,
They really do look gay.
If you have got a quilt to quilt,
Just ask our W. A.

The Kingston Road Woman's Association held a very successful At Home at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. Ridley, Ann Street, on April 14. A large number assembled despite the disagreeable condition of the weather and roads.

Mrs. C. MacDonald, president, very capably filled the chair, and calling the gathering to order, opened the evening's program with hymn Onward Christian Soldiers, after which Rev. Farnsworth led in prayer. A little time was spent in community singing which was much enjoyed. Miss Dorothy MacDonald rendered a very pretty piano instrumental, followed by a recitation by Mrs. Elmy. A very enjoyable feature of the program was guitar and violin music by Mr. Bill Sharp and Mr. Jerry Nolan. A reading by Mrs. Gazely was much enjoyed.

More guitar and violin music by Mr. Sharp and Mr. Nolan was very much appreciated. "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere" was rendered by the quartette, Mrs. Farnsworth, Mrs. Donaldson, Mr. Gazely and Mr. Ridley.

Mr. Nolan favored with more violin music accompanied by Mrs. Farnsworth at the piano. Mrs. Gazely then took charge of a very interesting contest, "Get Acquainted With Your Body." Mrs. Farnsworth then conducted an interesting "Floral Contest" while Mrs. MacDonald was in charge of a "True and False" contest.

The ladies served a dainty lunch after which "Blest Be the Tie That Binds" was sung and the meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

All voted Mr. and Mrs. Ridley ideal host and hostess.

Inspects Belleville Chapter, O. E. S.

Spring flowers and fern made a charming background for the colorful ceremonies in connection with the annual inspection of Belleville Chapter, No. 55, Order of the Eastern Star, held last evening in the Oddfellows' Hall. An unusually large crowd attended and joined with the inspecting officer in expressions of admiration of the splendid work of the Chapter.

Mrs. Ruby Fleming, District Deputy Grand Matron of Colborne Chapter, was inspecting officer and a cordial welcome was extended to her on behalf of the Chapter by Mrs. Law, Worthy Matron.

At the conclusion of inspection. Mrs. Fleming was high in praise of the Matron and officers of the Chapter for the efficient way in which they carried out the duties of their offices, she also left with all an inspiring message on the principles of the order. On behalf of the Chapter Mrs. Law presented Mrs Fleming with a gift, the recipient very graciously thanking the members for their thoughtfulness and for the kind sentiments expressed by their Worthy Matron.

Easter Star Chapters represented at the meeting were: Bancroft, Cobourg, Trenton, Madoc, Tweed, Wellington, Napanee, Toronto, and other Ontario points. Mrs. J. Burrill had the distincton of being the representative of the Chapter farthest away, she being a member of Newcastle Chapter, Wyoming, U.S.A. The Worthy Matron, Mrs. Lillie Law, in a very gracious manner extended a warm welcome to these visitors. The members of the Chapter were pleased to welcome back to her chapter, Mrs. Anna Boyd of Capreol, a Past Grand Matron of the Grand Chapter of Ontario.

Refreshments and dancing to the organization's orchestra, under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Austin brought to a close a very happy event.

ROSES FOR LADIES AT STYLE SHOW

Opening of New Department Marked by Display of New Styles in Interior Decorating

Progress continues to be the watchword of Belleville businessmen who believe in keeping right up to the minute, with the result that Belleville has stores of which any city could be proud of, commented upon enthusiastically by visitors from far and near. Most notable recent improvement in the business section has been the moddernizing of the Sills Book Store, an old established Belleville business, now under the management of Carl Sills, a progressive young business man.

Large, well dressed and attractive windows give promise of an interior worth visiting and modern tendensies. The front part of the store is occupied by the book and stationery departments, with a sheet music department in the rear, and a lending library which is enjoying growing popularity, being stocked with the latest best sellers in fiction and miscellany. Then comes the chief attraction, the new Style Shop, showing all the latest patterns in wallpaper and interior decoration, all displayed in such modern manner that patterns can be quickly and comfortably inspected, made possible by the most modern of store fixtures. This department also contains a paint section which is a marvel of convenience and display science. This room is high ceilinged, bright and attractive, the interior decorating being of a high artistic order very pleasing to the eye.

This new department was fittingly opened with a Style Show Thursday, Friday and Saturday, attended by hundreds of ladies of Belleville and surrounding district, each of whom obtained a beautiful rose and a chance to win enough wallpaper to paper a good-sized house.

Congratulations are due Mr. Sills upon his enterprise in bringing the Sills Book Store premises up to the highest possible pitch of modern merchandising convenience and attractiveness.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

In PRINT AGAIN and most of us are glad, for this year's prints are prettier than ever. A wide corselet section marks a lovely print of rough crepe in delicate gray with a design in cyclamen, fuchsia and deep purple. The bodice is bloused, the skirt is full.

Spring dance always means delicately lovely dresses. A beauty is of chartreuse silk chiffon with square neckline and pointed midriff section. Fuchsia velvet ribbon runs through beading at the neckline and midriff corselet.

Cross your palm with silver. A red suede glove has fine silver thread embroidery and stitching.

Petticoat rule is with us as beruffled taffeta petticoats march out of the stores as fast as they are stocked. The slip of taffeta for the skirt and white taffeta with camisole neckline for the bodice is a success, esepcially when the bodice and skirt portion are joined at the waistline.

You will find colorful tweed suits worn until the warm weather arrives. A very new suit is in rose pink very soft tweed and features a loose, boxy jacket with pockets at the hips and bustline. The square pockets, the revers, front and hem are outlined with stitching.

Into the water go those beruffled suit. A smart swim suit is of white watered taffeta with ruffled trimming at the neckline and skirt.

A shining success is a sailor of gleaming black patent with an upstanding trim of red roses at the crown in front.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Next Time I Marry"
"Fugitives For a Night"

Teaming three of the screen's most promising young players in a refreshing romantic comedy, RKO Radio's "Next Time I Marry" which comes next to the McCarthy Theatre and co-features Lucille Ball, James Ellison, and Lee Bowman in the top roles.

The amusing story revolves around the efforts of a spoiled heiress to make herself eligible for a twenty million dollar inheritance by burning her matrimonial candle at both ends. Since the terms of her father's will stipulate she must marry an American native to qualify for the fortune, the heiress, who is engaged to a foreign count, played by Bowman, arrives at a unique solution.

James Ellison, in the role of a devil may-care W.P.A. worker, is persuaded by the young lady (and a substantial sum of money) to step up to the altar with her, take the vows and then accept a divorce so she can wed the titled foreigner and squander the inheritance on him.

Being a husband in name only doesn't bother the man, especially when the money he receives from the deal pays for a long desired sail-boat, but when the heiress makes him the laughing stock of the country and the butt of every newspaperman, he rebels.

The newlyweds decide they'll go to Reno, each planning to file the divorce suit first, and it is this conflict that leads to the picture's hilarious highlights.

To frustrate the bride, the angry groom locks her in his auto-trailer, and keeping her a virtual prisoner, heads for the west to prove to the world he is the one who wants the divorce. Adding a bizarre touch to this unusual honeymoon, the jealous nobleman joins the caravan to protect his interests, and the daffy experiences of the trio on the cross-country jaunt are said to provide side-spitting comedy.

How the heiress and her titled fiance manage to scoop the young man in filing the necessary papers, only to have the bride awaken to her true love for her would-be enemy, leads to the picture's unexpected denouement.

Miss Ball plays the madcap heiress in "Next Time I Marry", while Bowman is seen as the fortune-hunting foreigners, Granville Bates and Manton Moreland are other players in the production by Cliff Reid directed by Garson Kanin. Dudley Nichols and John Twist wrote the screen play from Thames Williamson's original story.

Companion Feature

Frank Albertson who recently scored opposite Anne Shirley. in "Mother Carey's Chickens" won as a result of that notable performance the leading role in "Fugitives For a Night", the second feature presentation on the same program with "Next Time I Marry". Eleanor Lynn, Allan Lane, Bradley Page and Adrianne Ames, co-star in this production which brings to the screen—the Hollywood you never read about—that seething world behind the make-up a rare and amazing different story of romance and laughs—a picture that you would not expect Hollywood to produce.

"Trade Winds"

For the last times, the McCarthy Theatre will present Fredric March, Joan Bennett, Ann Sothern, and Ralph Bellamy in "Trade Winds" which is a swell picture that we urge all to see. A Popeye Cartoon, a treat in circus entertainment entitled "Circus Co-ed" and another episode "Flying G-Men" also are presented in addition to "Trade Winds."

AT THE BELLE

"The Oklahoma Kid"

"The Oklahoma Kid," Warner Bros.' stirring cavalcade of America's westward march, starring James Cagney, is now on the Belle screen. Also featured in the cast are Humphrey Bogart, Rosemary Lane, Donald Crisp and Harvey Stephens.

It is against an altogether different type of background than is generally associated with Cagney that the tough yet charming young red-head displays in his new picture his inimitable gift for lusty, he-man drama.

This picture is laid in the wild and lawless days when the Indian territory was being opened to settlement and one of its most impressive scenes is the beginning of the famous land rush of 1938 in which some, 30000 homesteaders raced across country to stake out sites in newly opened territory.

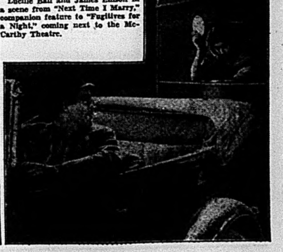
But, though the period and background are different from those of most of the Cagney pictures, Jimmy is essentially the same type of character as he has been in the biggest successes.

At the outset of the story, Jimmy is a young outlaw who has become famous as a sort of Robin Hood of the Southwest. He is blithely pursuing his devil-may-care existence when his highly respectable father is lynched as a result of a plot carried out by Humphrey Bogart — in this as vicious a scoundrel as he has ever played—and his henchmen. The rest of the story deals with his revenge.

The production was directed by Lloyd Bacon.

Walt Disney's Donald Duck in "Donald's Lucky Day," the popular Belle Newsreel and a multiple reel musical comedy "Sundae Serenade," filled with melody and fun plus a cast of screen and radio favorites will be presented on the same program.

Lucille Ball and James Ellison in a scene from "Next Time I Marry," companion feature to "Fugitives for a Night," coming next to the McCarthy Theatre.



THE GOLDEN GIRL

—by—

Agnes Louise Provost and Ladbroke Black

She walked out with two red spots burning in her usually pale cheeks. Parsons sat back in his chair again, apparently looking at nothing in particular, but she knew that his eyes followed her as she passed, and she was sure they were not friendly.

Outside the door she permitted herself the luxury of honest wrath. "I believe she wants to be swindled. If it weren't for Glory I wouldn't stay here another day."

That night she wrote a long letter to Gloria and posted it late the next morning. She had to wait until Miss Endicott went out for her morning drive before she could go back for that bit of printed paper under the rug. And it was there.

"Glory can give that to her detectives," she said grimly, "and we'll see if it is any good.

CHAPTER XVI

Life for Gloria, barring always that lurking uneasiness in the background, had become a kaleidoscopic dream. Frances Payne, always craving pleasure and excitement and bent on making her new venture as entertaining as possible used all her tireless energy and her list of friends to make the day a continuous butterfly dance for both of them. Each morning's mail brought its shower of invitations, and life beckoned gayly on and on. Gloria knew that Frances was spending money lavishly for both of them, but it did not seem to matter. There was always so much more.

Already Mrs. Payne was considering the relative merits of Palm Beach and Cannes for the winter. She knew of a villa at Cannes that Gloria could get for an absurdly low figure. Gloria listened. With all her delicious drifting she still held a light hand on the wheel, as Mrs. Payne had once or twice discovered to her annoyed surprise. One of the immediate results was that even in her most pressing financial straits—and they were numerous—she did not attempt to borrow money from Gloria, and this in spite of the fact that Gloria was most generous with her. Somehow Frances felt that it would be difficult to ask for money and still run in debt for gorgeous gowns. Miss Staunton apparently had some puritanical views about financial matters.

She was reminded of that unyielding quality beneath all the softness and the cream-and-gold loveliness of her charge when she came into Gloria's room at the Bluffs one morning and found Gloria, slim, trim and beautifully tailored, adjusting a smart little hat on her shining hair.

"Darling, you are so energetic!" Frances curled lazily in a nearby chair, but her eyes were suspicious. "How can you be up and dressed for the street at this hour after dancing half the night You haven't forgotten that the Dickersons start at two?"

"I thought you knew I was not coming? I am going to the city on business. I am sorry if there was any misunderstanding."

Gloria spoke mildly. She had no wish to disappoint Frances over the yachting trip with the wealthy Dickersons, but neither did she intend to go. It was a curious coincidence that Mrs. Dickerson was a remote connection of the Endicotts and made the most of it although Miss Harriet Endicott was never heard to mention it. But it was not for that reason that Gloria did not wish to go, nor yet because she did not care for them nor the people they usually gathered around them. The real reason was that she heard Wayne Gorham was to be one of the party on the three days' trip up the coast.

"Oh, Glory, you provoking little wretch!" Mrs. Payne tried to appear good-humored, but her eyes were stormy. "Can't you postpone the silly business? It will be a perfect trip, and the Dickersons have the most gorgeous yacht along the coast. I know she is trying at times, but they do know how to entertain. Please, darling! I shall be so disappointed if you don't come."

Frances coaxed prettily. She had promised Wayne Gorham that Gloria would be there, and Gorham could make himself unpleasant when his plans were disturbed.

"But, Frances, dear, that need not prevent your going. I declined only for myself, you know. I wrote to Mrs. Dickerson yesterday."

Mrs. Payne's pretty face hardened into a sullen little mask. She shrugged a petulant shoulder.

"Of course you will do as you please," she said coldly, "but it will be perfectly obvious to Mrs. Dickerson that you are running away because you don't wish to accept. No one really had engagements in town at this time of the year. She will be furious."

"I am sorry that you fell that way about it. Good-by Frances."

There was a delicate finality in Gloria's voice that was not to be mistaken. She hesitated, and then bent down and kissed the pretty, petulant face.

"Don't be angry, dear. And I have business in town whether Mrs. Dickerson believes it or not."

Gloria took her overnight bag from Cecile and went out leaving Mrs. Dick Payne curled in sulky contemplation against the cushions of her most comfortable chair.

As Gloria went out to her waiting motor a man in flannels idly flirting with the pretty girl at the hotel news stand turned his head and looked after her. A second later he left the news stand and followed, only to see Miss Staunton's car speed out of the drive. Gorham frowned, looked at his watch and said something under his breath. What was taking Gloria Staunton away, evidently on a journey, when she was due on board the Dickerson yacht in less than three hours?

With an impatient jerk he went back and called up Mrs. Payne.

Mrs. Payne was dressing and could not see him immediately. Perhaps, being in a bad humor herself, she kept him waiting longer than was necessary. At any rate he sat in Miss Staunton's private sitting room and fumed because he had been at elaborate pains to get an invitation through Frances Payne to the Dickerson's yachting party which he had been certain would include Gloria.

He was not in love with Gloria Staunton, but he was cynically interested in the brief glimpse of mystery he had caught and the erstwhile secretary's sudden rise from poverty to apparent affluence. If the affluence was real Gloria was worth cultivating for more than one reason, and what he already knew or surmised about her had its value.

When Mrs. Payne entered, he greeted her with little attempt to conceal his annoyance.

"I thought Miss Staunton was going on the cruise? You gave me to understand that she was."

"Really, one might think you were calling me to account for her absence!" Mrs. Payne gave him the benefit of a cool little stare. She was not accustomed to having men talk to her in that way. "I am sure I presented all the inducements," she added maliciously.

"I told her that it was the most gorgeous yacht in the country and that you were going to be there, but there seems to be business in New York. Dreadfully sorry that you are disappointed."

He seemed little disturbed by her childish fling at him. When he spoke he changed the subject abruptly.

"Arcana Oil dropped out of sight yesterday."

"So I noticed. I hope you sold before it went too far."

"You left no orders," he said smoothly, "so of course I felt obliged to hold on. I tried to get you by long distance, but you were off motoring somewhere."

In spite of her poise a haunted look crept into Mrs. Payne's eyes. She had gained a few weeks ago on Zinc, only to get hopelessly entangled in new spectulations. Why was Gorham looking at her like that? Why must she be hounded by debts while Gloria Staunton had more money than she could spend?

"I daresay I am dreadfully in debt," she managed to say.

"Thirteen thousand, eight hundred," Gorham answered in a casual voice.

Frances smothered a gasp of dismay. She had not dreamed that it had gone so far. Gorham leaned forward, his eyes steadily on hers. He spoke bluntly with no attempt at diplomatic fencing.

"I am interested in Gloria Staunton. I am sufficiently interested to be—well, call it jealous. I think there is another man, or was at one time, and I want to know where that affair stands. I want to know where she meets this man, or if they have quarreled. I want to know"—he paused here and let his words drop deliberately—"whether she had always gone by the name of Staunton. You are in a position to get this information for me. If you can, I will cancel your account."

Mrs. Payne sat very still. This wretched creature was offering her pay to be a common spy! Her eyes flamed at him suddenly, but the flame died. The man in the case must be Jack Moreland. Why should Gloria Staunton take him away from her?

She turned to Gorham with a coolness which belied the throbbing excitement beneath.

"Oh, a love affair! That is quite interesting. Yes, suppose we call it a bargain. Will you excuse me now? I have several matters to attend to before we start."

As the door closed behind Gorham she pressed her hands against burning cheeks, but her eyes were bright and hard. So Gloria had secret meetings with Jack and was sufficiently identified with him for Gorham to know of it? She closed her eyes to Gorham's probable motives. She was a jealous woman fighting for the man she wanted to marry, and any weapons were fair.

CONTRACT BRIDGE CHAMP

CHAPTER XVII

Slight as it had been, that little disagreement with Frances Payne seemed to make a subtle change in the relationship between Gloria and her companion. Gloria purposely lingered in town until after the yachting trip was over, and returned to the Bluffs to find Frances apparently restored to good humor, but provokingly curious as to the nature of her errand to New York.

"There must be someone dreadfully fascinating there to make you tolerate the city in this weather," she said pointedly. "Do tell me, Gloria. I love a romance."

"I am afraid you will be disappointed, for all my engagements were hopelessly practical except that I ran across Bill Daimler the last day and lunched with him."

"Oh, Bill is always great fun," Mrs. Payne eyed her lazily. "Of course you know he is desperately in love with you."

"That is absurd."

Mrs. Payne's soft laugh was a trifle malicious.

"My dear Gloria, you are not very good at fibbing, are you? If you ever have a dark secret in the background of your life you will have a dreadful time concealing it."

For a moment Gloria's heart seemed to stand still. "I presume the best way is to keep away from dark secrets!" she said lightly. "Did you say that the tennis tournament was still on? Suppose we go down."

Of course, Gloria argued to herself, it could be nothing more than a chance remark, but it left a lingering discomfort and a feeling of rebellion that it could affect her so. Another thing which disturbed her was the discovery one day that her dressing table had been ransacked. She was glad that several letters from Mr. Carver and her check book on the account of "G. S. Moreland" in a certain uptown bank were safely hidden elsewhere.

August slipped into September and they returned to town, once more settled in a huge hotel. October came, and with it Amy Chase's marriage. It was a church wedding and it was already late when Gloria and Frances arrived, passing through the canopied way into a world of lights, of the fragrance of flowers, of low reverberations of organ music and the subdued rustle of many people, of colors delicate and vivid, and the wink and falsh of gems.

"It's a perfect crush!" Frances murmured, and turned for a moment to answer a question from Mrs. Daimler just behind them.

Hurrying ushers came and went. Alan Chase and Bill Daimler turned toward Gloria simultaneously, but a third usher was coming down the centre aisle and reached her first.

"May I?" It was Jack, smiling down at her with a question in his eyes. That was all. The world — their world—was looking on.

"Surely." She tucked her hand in the arm he offered and they went down the aisle together to the accompaniment of the softly rolling organ and the turning heads of the politely curious. He waited until she took her seat. Then he was off down the aisle again. Frances Payne was coming with Alan Chase, and he passed them with a quick and friendly smile.

A moment later Frances took her seat beside Gloria. She had been resorting to rouge of late, but even so her color was unusually high.

Less than an hour later, in the crowded rooms of the Chase home Gloria saw Jack coming toward her, threading his way expertly through chattering groups and stopping at every other one to respond to friendly greetings. Gloria had just left a flushed and radiant Amy, now Mrs. Tom Bates, and was talking to Amy's father when Jack appeared at her side. Frances had drifted into another room with some people whom Gloria did not know.

"How do you do, Colonel?" Jack held out a friendly hand. "I promised Mrs. Chase that I would find you. She is with the bridal party. Miss Staunton, may I substitute for the colonel?"

The older man looked at the younger and smiled dryly. He had once been twenty-seven himself. Then he left them.

"I don't believe Mrs. Chase sent for him!" said Gloria accusingly. She was half vexed at herself for laughing at the high-handed manner in which he had supplanted Colonel Chase.

"Honor bright! I asked her to as soon as I saw you with him. Come, won't you let me find you a seat somewhere?"

She caught Bill Daimler's glance across the room and knew that he was puzzled to understand how she had come to be on such terms of intimacy with his old friend. Then she lost sight of him as Jack guided her through the crowd to a seat where a bank of tropical plants afforded comparative seclusion.

"You are looking very stunning." He sat down beside her and surveyed her with frank approval.

"I am glad you like my gown." She provokingly refused to apply the compliment to herself. But his eyes, warming suddenly, caught and held hers until she hurriedly changed the subject.

"I've met a number of your old friends besides the Daimlers. You know Mrs. Payne, don't you? She has come to stay with me."

"Why, yes, I've known Frances since I was in knickerbockers." He seemed a trifle puzzled. "I noticed that you came in together. Sort of a companion-chaperon affair?"

"Yes. It is rather amusing for me to need a chaperon now after looking after myself for so long," Gloria answered.

"I'll vouch for your ability to do it again." He laughed. "But tell me more. Remember that I have been an exile for months, and as for letters, well, nobody will ever publish my correspondence after I die unless the Western Union keeps permanent records. But I am learning rapidly. From the looks Bill and Alan gave me I suspect that I shall be fighting duels yet. You are evidently having a gorgeous time."

"Yes," she said half defiantly, "I am having a wonderful time. But sometimes—" her voice hesitated, trailed into silence as her glance drifted beyond him. He looked at her quickly.

"Anything wrong? Has that brute Gorham—"

Her suddenly widened eyes entreated him to silence. On the other side of their screening banks of palms, between feathery splashes of green, Gloria had caught sight of a light gown. That challenge effect of white and black could belong to no other than Frances Payne. They had selected the gown together and Gloria knew it as well as her own.

"Sometimes I get a little bored," she finished quickly. "I really should have a hobby to amuse me."

It was not in the least what she had intended to say. She had meant to tell him of Miss Endicott's mysterious investments and her insane recklessness in keeping so much of her wealth in an old-fashioned "strong-box" in the house, but her opportunity for the time at least was gone.

On the way back to the hotel Frances was silent and apparently bored, and it was not until they were parting at Gloria's door that she mentioned Jack Moreland.

"I see you have met my old friend, Jack Moreland. He is a dear boy, but the most irresponsible creature. Have you known him long?"

"Not very long." Then Gloria surprised herself. "I don't think he is as irresponsible as he likes to appear," she said quietly. "He was very helpful to me—at the time my uncle died."

It was late the next morning, when Gloria awakened and for a while she lay there, her mind drowsily picking up one thing after another that had happened the night before. The oddest thing was Jack's sudden appearance, and the most unpleasant was the feeling that Frances had been deliberately listening to them, on the other side of the palms. Gloria considered that soberly. Frances had been rather difficult of late, moody, impatient and even scornful. It was as if she were forcing herself to some unpleasant task.

When her breakfast tray came it bore a huge cluster of violets with Jack's card. Gloria did not know that Frances, too restless for late sleeping, had seen Cecelle take violets and card from their box and had gone back to her own room in silent fury. Gloria held them off for a moment and looked at them. Then she smiled as she daintily arranged them on the tray again. Violets for breakfast and from one's husband. It was rather nice.

CHAPTER XVIII

There were letters on Gloria's breakfast tray. One of them, bearing only a room number in a downtown office building she recognized at once and tore open. It was from Grantham & Hyde.

Her previous reports from the detective agency had not been illuminating. When she had gone to them to get what information she could of the man Parsons and his activities, they had bluntly informed her that she had very few facts on which to base her suspicions. Then, two weeks ago, she had received Sara's letter containing the circular of the United Rosario Copper Company, and had promptly sent it to them.

She read the letter rapidly:

"The circular seems to be one which was used several years ago in the fake development of alleged copper lands which owe their value only to being contiguous to ore-bearing property. The scheme did not get very far then, as the people back of it took alarm, although some stock was sold in distant states.

"The facts now are these: There are two Rosario copper-mines. One is small, but genuine and yields a fair profit. The other, represented by this circular, is a ridge just across the country line leased cheaply from the original owners because the main lode of the real Rosario takes a sharp twist in another direction. It looks as if somebody, evidently this man Parsons, had dug up the old stock to sell here. Of course it is absolutely worthless, for there is no mine, no company and no capital. The whole thing exists only in the vest pockets of a few crooks. We suggest that you let us put the matter into the hands of the police."

Gloria sat up and gasped. She could imagine Miss Endicott's fury if her name were dragged before the public as the credulous dupe of some vulgar confidence man, and yet—what of other people who might suffer if this were quietly hushed?

It was Jack's right to decide this. She reached for the telephone and called the Daimlers' number. She had heard him tell someone that he was staying there over night.

One of the maids answered. Mr. Moreland had left town on a motoring trip with the Daimlers to call on some friends. No,, the maid did not know where they were going, but they would be back in time for lunch. Would madame leave a number?

Gloria hesitated. Then she pushed caution aside.

"As soon as Mr. Moreland comes in, ask him to call Miss Staunton at the Ritz."

The maid promised. But a perverse fate was playing freakish tricks with Gloria's plans.

Lunch time came and passed with no call from Jack. At three o'clock Gloria swallowed her pride and telephoned again. No, Mr. Moreland had not arrived. It was impossible to say when they would be home.

Meantime Frances came and went, apparently in flippant good humor, but holding Gloria under bright suspicious eyes.

X X X

Gorham was not invited to the Chase wedding, but he knew that Jack Moreland had come home and he sent a brief message to Parsons to keep away from Beechwood.

Gorham was interested in Jack's return. Mrs. Payne had telephoned him that Gloria, after looking over her morning mail, had been trying repeatedly to get Moreland by telephone, thus far without avail. Whether for business or sentimental reasons, however, did not appear.

Gorham made aimless marks on the blotting pad in front of him. Mrs. Dick Payne had given him some interesting bits of information, but she might easily prove troublesome and was quite capable of spoiling everything to suit her own ends. Gorham was following up a mystery trail which might, for the unscrupulous, lead to a very pretty little gold mine, but Frances Payne was a jealous woman fighting for a man who was—or had been—in love with another girl. The matter had its complications.

He came back from luncheon to find a message from Parsons.

"Meet me at the Grandon at three."

He wondered, but he went. Parsons greeted him sullenly.

"I want the rest of my share right away. I've got to clear out."

"What's the trouble?"

World Champions Picked Up Where They Left Off Last Year By Beating Senators 10 to 3

Lefty Gomez Had Only One Bad Innings in the Contest

FELLER SHOWS WAY

Turns in Three-Hitter as Cleveland Downs Tigers 5-1

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

It's time somebody warned the American Baseball League that the New York Yankees fuse already is burning.

Ordinarily the winning—or losing—of a couple of games in a row at the start of the season isn't indicative of anything in particular. But the Yankees are in a class by themselves and they aren't bashful about showing it.

A year ago, the Yankees were never in first place until June. In contrast the club is away to a perfect start this time. Red Ruffing gave a superb seven hit pitching performance in the opener and Bill Dickey helped with a home run and Jake Powell with a timely triple. Yesterday Lefty Gomez did almost as well except for one wobbly inning which Joe DiMaggio and Joe Gallagher offset with two home runs scoring five runs in the third inning.

Feller Subdues Tigers

Bob Feller, Cleveland's maturing boy wonder, subdued Detroit Tigers on three hits which made it easy for the Indians to get a proper 5-1 start. He struck out 10 and the only run by Detroit was Barney McCoskey's homer in the sixth.

Jim Bagby Jr., gave Philadelphia Athletics a five hit diet as Boston Red Sox got into the victory column with a 9-2 score.

St. Browns were rained out against the White Sox, making the Brownies and Chicago fans even. St. Louis hasn't played a game and the Chicago fans haven't seen a game this season.

Cubs Get Started

Chicago Cubs finally got started in St. Louis, giving the Cardinals a 4-2 thumping which showed they are to be reckoned with again this season. Big Bill Lee pitched effectively and Stan Hack and Joe Marty settled matters with homers. . Boston Bees won their third straight and Danny MacFayden almost got a shutout, but gave four walks in the last inning to the New York Giants and had to be content with a 10-3 score.

Vito Tamulis and Claude Passeau shared honors in a pitching duel which left Brooklyn Dodgers and Philadelphia Phillies deadlocked 2-2 when darkness stopped play after 11 innings.

Sports Roundup

New York, April 22 (AP)—As good a bet as any is that football Coach Jock Sutherland will wind up just where he started—at Pitt University. (Don't ask any more questions right now)....One St. Louis book (Carroll's) makes El Chico, Johnstown and Technician Derby co-favorites at 4-1.... Another (Bruke's) puts Johnstown on top at 4-1 and quotes the other two at 5-1....Brooklyn Dodgers haven't changed any......They were invited to be guests of honor at a big blowout in Flatbush....They didn't show up.

Mail box: Fight Manager Julian Black: They're telling strange stories about why you're supposed to be mad at Bob Pastor's manager .... Bill Terry: Mayor Hague didn't tell you it was the first division or else for Jersey City this year, did he? ....Clark Griffith: Moe Berg says you're keeping all those Cubans around to distract attention from a poor ball club.

Today's guest star — Howard Brickey, Wichita Falls (Tex) Times: "Word is getting around that it's no longer any use to try to handle Joe Louis with gloves."

Burgess Whitehead must figure his comeback is a success for he's leased an apartment for the summer....Lou Nova gets in today to start training for Max Baer .... Baer doesn't know it, but the quiet, nice looking fellow who caddied for him at Ferndale the other day, was Mark Warnow, musical director of the Columbia Broadcasting system ....That two-day delay in staging the Yankee opener cost the club $50,000.

Bill Fritz Beaten In Special Race At Montreal

Montreal, April 22 (CP)—Bill Fritz, crack quarter-miler from Queen's University, proved unable last night to spot 25 yards to Vaughan Mason of Montreal in a special 500 yard handicap indoor race here and lost to the Montrealer by a 10-yard margin.

Fritz, who hails from Toronto but attends University of Kingston, Ont., covered the distance in 1.08 minutes, while Mason, who is intercollegiate mile champion, finished in 59 9-10 seconds. Only other entrant in the race, Jim Tedlie of Montreal, was far behind Fritz.

Girls from the Toronto St. Clair Club fared well in women's events of the exhibition tract meet. Jeanette Dolson, Canadian sprint champion, won the 50-yard senior event in 6 2-10 seconds while Mae Fry of the St. Clair Club was third.

Nora Careless of Toronto St. Clair was third in the 50-yard intermediate class, a scant two paces behind Corinne Cooper of Montreal, who won in 6 4-10 seconds. Marjorie Gordner of Toronto came second in the 50-yard junior to Isobel McKean of Montreal, who finished in 6 6-10 seconds.

The four Toronto girls combined to win the 280-yard senior relay race in 37 4-10 seconds.

Ted Kleinhans Outlasts Mike Meola in Mound Duel

BEARS DOWNED

Rochester Behind Henshaw Stop Champions for Second Time

(By The Associated Press)

The International League holds a well-deserved reputation of being a good jumping-off place for young ball players whose next stop is the big show. But the old fellows who are making the same circuit their first stop on the way-down share the responsibility for making it one of the most powerful of the minor leagues.

It was with no great surprise that the fans saw Si Johnson, Fabian Kowalik and Kemp Wicker, all former major leaguers, pitch and win their openers Thursday. Yesterday it was little Roy Henshaw, 28-year-old former Cardinal, Ted Kleinhans, 35, who hurled for Phillies and Cincinnati, and Bill Harris, who admits to 39 years and who was pitching for Pittsburgh when some of the kids who batted against him still were wearing short pants, who followed up with victories.

Harris turned on his old steam with a six-hit performance. He fanned six Bisons and gave no walks while his 1939 teammates, Jersey City Giants, batted out a 6-2 victory.

Henshaw took up where Johnson left off, pitching the Rochester Red Wings to a 12-5 triumph over the champion Newark Bears, while Kleinhans outlasted Mike Meola in a mound duel as Syracuse beat Toronto 3-2. Marvin Duke, who has had considerable experience although he couldn't stick in the majors, hurled the full distance for Montreal to beat Baltimore and Carl Fischer, another ex-major leaguerer 7-6.

JOE DIMAGGIO A GREAT PLAYER

An Unerring Ball Hawk and Can Hit Any Kind of Hurling

New York, Apr. 22 (AP)—Every time you see Joe DiMaggio take that effortless swing of his or race back against the boards to rob some luckless battler of a triple you can't help a sneaking feeling that there, perhaps, is the greatest all-around ball player there has been.

Some old-timers who saw Tris Speaker is his prime say the "Grey Eagle" was a better ball hawk, but it hardly seems possible. Speaker, they say, knew more than DiMaggio does at this stage about playing for different batsmen, hence had a quicker jump on the ball.

Possibly it is true. But DiMaggio starts so fast at the crack of the bat and goes so unerringly to the right spot that there couldn't be much difference. His throwing arm is a slingshot.

As for Joe's batting, the possibilities are limitless. Few doubt he will hit .400 almost any season now, with about 40 home runs in the bargain. Opposing pitchers this year will walk him purposely to get at Lou Gehrig nearly as often as they used to walk Babe Ruth.

If the Yankees were to lose DiMaggio tomorrow they would be no better than an even bet in many books to beat out Boston Red Sox. That's the kind of player this DiMaggio is.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Bob Feller, Indians—Held Detroit to three hits and fanned ten as Cleveland beat Tigers 5-1.

Joe DiMaggio and Joe Gallagher, Yankees—Each hit homers and accounted for all New York's runs as Yankees beat Senators 6-3.

Jim Bagby and Doc Cramer, Red Sox—Former handcuffed Philadelphia with five hits; latter doubled three runs home to break tie and made three spectacular catches in the field.

Vito Tamulis, Dodgers, and Claude Passeau, Phillies — Tamulis spread five hits over 11 innings and Passeau struck out 11 batters in eight innings before giving way to pinch-hitter as teams battled to 2-2 tie.

Joe Marty and Stan Hack, Cubs—Hit homers to provide Chicago's margin of victory over Cardinals.

Al Lopez, Bees—Singled twice with men on base to drive in four of Boston's ten runs against New York.

DETROIT TURTLE WINS

Detroit April 22 (CP)—Skippy, red-painted representative of the University of Detroit, today held the championship of the annual Inter-Collegiate turtle derby. The tiny turtle defeated much bigger opponents as he whipped himself over the five-foot course in one minute and two seconds.

Entered by the University of Tennessee, the favorite Vol was forced to be content with second place. Jeepers the Creeper of Tulane was third.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

We understand Louie Bennett, well known Ontario harness horseman and driver, is anxious to return to Belleville for the purpose of the training of his stable of trotters and pacers this spring. The Kingston Fair Grounds executive is anxious to have the veteran Port Hope horseman train at their track, but Louie prefers the Belleville Fair Grounds site, but although he has made application to train here, no permission has been granted him or recognition of his application made. The presence of a stable of horses training at a track in the spring is usually most acceptable to track officials, as the horses training tend to keep the track alive and also eliminate the growth of obnoxious weeds and other growth that ultimately ruin a good track. The Belleville race track at our Fair Grounds is one of the best half mile tracks in the province, why not invite horsemen like Mr. Bennett to train here, as such men are interested in the track upon which they train and they would take a personal interest in the upkeep of the track, thereby assisting the Parks Commission in that matter.

We were honored in sitting at the head table during Thursday night's annual athletic banquet and presentation of the awards at the O.S.D. At our right was seated the guest speaker of the night A. (Pete) Beach, athletic director at Albert College. During dinner our conversation naturally drifted towards sports. "You know I think the kids in Belleville show more initiative when it comes to organizing themselves for sporting events than is usually the case throughout the province," suggested Mr. Beach.

"Well they have to if they want to participate in team sports. You must remember there is only the Ki-Y groups and the playgrounds, sponsored by the Kiwanis, which help the Belleville kids obtain recreation and even then the kids must organize themselves for the greater part," we replied to Mr. Beach.

"Well, I think that initiative on their part reflects very favorably on them. Just think what possibilities could be accomplished in Belleville if the citizens and other organizations would come forward and put their shoulder to the assisting of sports among the kids here," suggested Mr. Beach as we continued the discussion.

Mr. Beach's home is in London, while his employment is confined to Albert College, but when an outsider can see the enthusiasm exemplified by Belleville's youth and their potential possibilities in the field of sports, surely it's high time we as citizens awaken to this fact and start from scratch to reconstruct Belleville's sporting fraternities, especially in the matter of team competition. Even if only for their own interests the Retail Merchants' Association and Chamber of Commerce, city council and others should take an active and pointed interest in the sponsoring of sport, something that pays splendid dividends. Good baseball, softball, lacrosse, rugby or hockey teams always attract large following from outside points, all of whom spend money to the mutual advantage of all concerned. Perhaps one of the most essential things needed towards this end would be a civic sports field, where floodlights could be subsequently added to the project. All throughout Western Ontario floodlights are being introduced in order to stimulate interest in team and league games, so why not mount the band wagon, it will ultimately come sooner or later anyhow.

A step, that has long been neglected in Belleville baseball circles was made last night at the "Y" when the onus and responsibilities of the game were placed in the hands of the players interested in playing the game. A goodly number of aspiring ballsters were present and signified their good faith in the future of the game. Subsequently the meeting was given into the hands of some 12 or so players present. A committee composed of Bud Wilkins, Harold Reid, Keith "Lefty" Weeks, Johnnie Ronsky and one or two more was formed and these players will henceforth become actively interested in the sponsorship of baseball in Belleville. A review of playing material available proved a revelation. There is ample material in Belleville to insure a splendid baseball club. Now that the players have become actively interested in the welfare of the game, perhaps baseball will return to its former lofty standing in the community. Of course these boys will need the support of the fans and citizens, but if they show their good faith, no doubt the support will be forthcoming.

The voice of the players seemed to lean towards interesting the younger element of the city in playing baseball. The young players have not been encouraged by the veterans in past years, was the feeling of those present and frankly speaking the boys actually had something on the ball in this respect. In previous years press announcements in the pre-season period always tended to refer to the veterans, which discouraged the younger baseball players materially to a certain degree. Later during the playing season the youngsters were pushed aside in favour of players, who had long since seen their usefulness on the diamond. However, this year the team is to be constructed with young blood, a move that doubtless will pay great diamond dividends in the future.

Hither and Yon—With only two games played, the Yankees moved into the lead position of the American League. .Surely coming events are not casting their shadows so early?....The Bees beat the Giants yesterday to keep in the National League driver's seat.... Toronto, Newark and Baltimore have yet to win a game in the International, the latter two losing all games to date on the home lot....Figures show the Goodyears lost money in the Allan Cup playdowns and now are seeking affiliation in the Michigan-Ontario loop, which does not seem too feasible with such long jumps facing them....Rosen only got one hit yesterday, bringing his total to six in three games....Jeff Heath got a hit at Cleveland, and Krakauskas lost his game with the Senators to account for Canada's efforts in the major league yesterday.

STATEMENT ON

After a seven-day barrage of criticism and suggestion on the unemployment problem, Labor Minister Rogers obtained passage of his unemployment relief bill for 1939-40 through committee stage last night and approval of most of his special estimates for unemployment.

Kindly to Suggestion

The Labor Minister took kindly to a suggestion from Howard Green (Con. Vancouver South) that honorary advisory committees of citizens should be set up to assist the Dominion and Provincial governments in formulating plans for reducing the bad effects of unemployment. He said such committees had been of assistance in connection with the youth training plan and might be of value in connection with rehabilitation plans for older unemployed.

"This government relies too much on suggestions from provincial governments," said Mr. Green. "They are hard-pressed and have not much time to think up new schemes and I submit that no government can get the human slant on a problem as well as a group of individuals can."

Mr. Green also suggested establishment of a training farm in British Columbia for unemployed transients of whom some 4,000 were about to be discharged from winter forestry camps. Such a farm might later be used as a home for older men who were unemployable. Mr. Rogers said every precaution was being taken to see that the men leaving the camps were assisted towards employment.

A. A. Heaps (C.C.F. Winnipeg North) said the federal government was right in dealing only with provincial governments in regard to employment. It would get into difficulties if it dealt directly with municipalities.

Very Kind Act

"Last week the Province of Quebec gave Montreal authority to come direct to borrow money from the federal government," said Mr. Heaps.

"Very kind of them wasn't it," remarked Finance Minister Dunning.

"That was a great concession," said C. B. Howard (Lib. Sherbrooke).

"It was a neat way of passing the buck and the Minister of Labor was perfectly justified in standing by the declaration he had made when he said he would recognize only the provinces," said Mr. Heaps.

Mr. Rogers revealed the relief loans to four western provinces now totalled $143,000,000. These are advances made to enable Provinces to pay their share of relief costs when they have not money available for the purposes. Replying to Mr. Heaps, Mr. Dunning said all interest payments on these loans had been kept up to date except by Saskatchewan which was paying a part of its interest.

Will Pay Back Money

"I am glad to have that information," said Mr. Heaps, "because comment is so often made in this house on the amount of money the government is loaning to the West. Given ordinary conditions in Western Canada I am satisfied, that no one would be more happy than the people of the Western Provinces to pay back every single dollar loaned to them."

Statements to the effect Canada had nothing to show for the $900,000,000 spent on relief since 1930 were only partly correct, Mr. Rogers indicated. Of that amount $300,000,000 had been spent on public works of various kinds, chiefly highway construction.

The Minister told Rene Pelletier (S. C. Peace River) an item would appear in the estimates for the proposed highway outlet from the Peace River District to the Pacific coast. The project would be speeded up if the Alberta and British Columbia governments took the initiative.

AMBULANCE SERVICE

ST. CLAIR GORDON

Mr. Drew said he had a high regard for the man to be appointed but must oppose the bill on the ground it was bringing liquor law administration directly into politics. Liquor laws were in the field of emotions and moral arguments and should not be in politics.

Refused Cabinet Post

Premier Hepburn said Mr. Gordon was a man of keen executive ability. He was offered a cabinet post in 1937 but refused because of business reasons.

"I'd like to remove the administration of the Department from politics, but this government has to take the full responsibility regardless of any commission that may be appointed," he said.

Sault Ste. Marie, with the giant plant of the Algoma Steel Company in the city and ore supplies located at a convenient distance, was envisioned as the armory of Canada by Premier Hepburn as he spoke in support of a measure to incorporate the Southern Algoma Railway Company, wholly-owned subsidiary of the steel company.

Under the terms of the measure, which passed second reading, the railway company will acquire and operate 40 miles of yard trackage now owned by the steel company. Building of a half-mile spur to connect with the Canadian Pacific Railway is also contemplated.

Two years ago, said Mr. Hepburn, the Algoma steel plant was on the verge of being closed down. Today because of legislative action enabling the taking of the water out of its stock, it was in a prosperous condition.

Announces Action.

The premier announced institution of an action for $1,387,031 against the Algoma Central and Hudson Bay Railway, with headquarters at Sault Ste. Marie, for unpaid taxes, interest and penalties. The province had refused the company's offer to transfer certain township to the province in satisfaction of the claim.

A report had come to him that the Algoma Central had placed a mortgage on its property and the court action was being taken to protect the province's interests, said the premier.

Two years ago, said the premier, the Algoma Steel Company was on the verge of being closed down. It was reorganized after the legislature passed a bill and millions in watered stock "were put through the wringer". Now the company was doing well and the bill enabled it to do its own railway switching.

Put Matter In Courts.

The Algoma Central Railway had offered the province to return to it certain townships in satisfaction of the province's claim against it, but Mr. Hepburn, as treasurer, couldn't waive the payment of monies due the province and it was finally decourts.

If the Algoma Central Railway were put up for sale, the Algoma Steel Company couldn't operate it without a federal charter. The bill would guarantee the steel company access to the C.P.R. even if the Algoma Central should cease to operate.

"From what the prime minister says it looks as though the Algoma Central is to fold up," said Leopold Macaulay (Con. York South).

"Not necessarily," said Mr. Hepburn. "It may go into the hands of the receiver."

Mr. Macaulay said there was enough business for two railways.

Developments Never Came

The Algoma Central, running 275 miles north from Sault Ste. Marie was built for a development which never came, said Mr. Hepburn. Timber resources along its route were gone. Anticipated mining developments were never realized and there was no possible source of revenue for it.

Former Premier Geo. Henry and Hon. Colin Campbell, Minister of Public Works, clashed again over the matter of gasoline tax debates made to Mr. Henry and his son. The question was raised by Mr. Campbell last night as he wound up the budget debate.

Mr. Henry called for a "full and unqualified apology" for the remark by Mr. Campbell "that Mr. Henry was perhaps trying to get back in rebates what he had to pay". The remark was withdrawn at the time by order of Speaker James Clark.

Yesterday Mr. Henry said His Honor had been questioned. Neither he nor his son had asked for rebate of the gasoline tax on one gallon that had not been used for exempted purposes.

Statement Withdrawn

Speaker Clark said he had no power to make Mr. Campbell apologize. The statement complained of had been withdrawn and the incident should be closed.

"If my honorable friend is not man enough to make an apology, let it go at that and he can sink to the level on which he belongs", said Mr. Henry, bringing Premier Hepburn to his feet.

Mr. Hepburn voiced his oft-repeated charge that Mr. Henry, while Premier, had used $3,000 worth of gasoline, oil and general services from the Provincial garage and had not paid for it until threatened with court action by his liberal successors.

While Premier he was entitled to $1,000 a year in expenses, not accountable for by voucher, said Mr. Henry. He had not drawn one dollar of this, but had frequently used his own motor car on government business.

By BEULAH ROSE

Nellie Bird sat busily knitting in the solitude of her plain but immaculate kitchen, forgetful that dusk was beginning to encompass the little dwelling and that it was her custom to have the lights on an hour earlier than this.

The click of the needles continued but the eyes, beneath their frame of snow white hair gazing steadily ahead, were not absorbed in the knitting.

She got up with a start from her rocker when it finally dawned on her that the house was dark, and the fire must have died down in the stove. Marie, the boy's mother would soon be home, and tea was not even prepared.

The suddenness with which she stood up sent to the floor a bottle of red ink that had been standing in a precarious position on the mantelpiece. She heard the bottle break, and hastened to switch on the light to ascertain the damage.

What she saw nearly froze her blood. the bottle lay, decapitated, and little streams of the crimson fluid were flowing in all directions over her kitchen floor.

Nellie Bird was by nature a frugal person, but this time it was not her loss that made her fall back into her chair dazed, transfixed with the horror of what she beheld.

Incidents, even of a relatively unimportant character, often conjure up scenes with which one is closely associated. These scenes may have been actual experiences witnessed or lived through; or they may be only memories, but felt inwardly to be a thousand times more potent than if actually seen.

The latter was the case of Nellie Bird. She was the kind of mother whose love for her only son had been so great as to have reached almost the point of selfishness. He had been her only one. There had been no other—not even a daughter.

Then the war had come. The glorious, inspiring music, the trumpets and bugles. The call of his country! He had been thrilled.

Her fear and unrest. What a period of torture she had gone through in those days when she feared that he might go—and would not be able to endure it without him.

The day. The awful day on which he had come to her—her son? No. a different man. A strange handsome man in khaki. Straight as a lance. So tall that she felt tiny near his greatness.

"Mother, I'm going to do my share."

How she wished that she might be a man—his father—to say to him in firm, unwavering accents:

"Well said, my son! I am proud that you are ready to serve your country."

"You will take care of Marie and Junior?" He had asked this of her. "There is enough money in my account, so do not worry. I shall be back very soon, I hope, and then we will all be together again."

She had said nothing. Just looked. But her heart had cried, and when he had gone, her eyes had cried.

That was why, when the bottle of red ink fell to the floor, and the brilliant liquid spread out in all directions, her thoughts went back to scenes which she had never witnessed but through which she had lived a thousand times.

The gory battlefields stained with the lifeblood of those who had been taken away from loved ones at home. Her boy—lying in a pool of bright blood—the blood which she had given him!

"Oh, my own dear boy!"

A voice—like her boy's—answered her.

"I can't sleep, granny, I heard a noise."

She looked up. There, in his little bare feet, stood the son of the man who had gone away years ago to give his all for his country.

The child came to her and nestled at her feet.

"I had a dream, granny."

"What was it, child?"

"I dreamed there was a big war, and I was a strong man, and daddy and I both went to the front to help our country."

The aged figure moved to lift him into her arms.

The stiff old bones felt suddenly rejuvenated.

What was this thing called service? The will to fight for someone—for righteousness and liberty!

She had found her answer. It was the same will that imbued a mother with the dauntless power to struggle and conquer all for her boy.

The same will that made her crush to her breast this little boy who might some day leave her as another had done, to serve some worthy cause.

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and pop took a walk to the square on account of it being such a swell day, and we were walking around between the benches and pop said, What a perfect afternoon, this air has vitamins and iodine and ozone and shampagne, anybody that wants better air than this is just plain greedy.

Well G. pop, there's a man dont seem to be enjoying it much, what do you think is a matter with him, pop? I said.

Meaning some fat man sitting on a bench sticking his feet away out and looking at them with a unhappy expression, and pop said, 10 to one he's lonely because he has no one to talk to. When you see a person that lonely in the mist of a crowd it will give you an idea of what fiendish punishment solitary confinement must be, he said.

Well gosh pop, why dont you talk to him a little? I said, and pop said, By gollies I will the next time we pass him, and I may even offer him a cigar if he agrees with my pollitics.

And the next time we went passed the man's bench pop said, Excuse me, old timer, do you happen to have a match? and the man said, No, and pop said, Okay, no harm done, this is surely a lovely day.

I've seen better the man said, and pop said, So have I as a matter of fact, but not since this morning. Just to think, there are one or 2 countries in the world where liberty has come to be such an unknown quantity that the people proberly d[illegible] even dare approve of the weather.

Sounding like the start of pollitics and the man said, Why dont you go back there if you're not sattisfied with the way things are here? and pop said, I will, thanks for the tip, I'll take the first bus.

And we kept on going, pop saying, I was alitely wrong, instead of too much solitude he hasn't had enough, he lives in the same house with his 4 married sisters and their husbands and their husband's sisters.

INSURANCE MACHINE

You may be disposed to amusement on reading a news item from the Chicago convention of coin-machine manufacturers, announcing a slot machine that dispenses accident insurance policies which remain in effect for 24 hours.

But ours is peculiarly a time wherein, the hazards being identified as modern, there is most extraordinary peril of "the terror by night, and the arrow that flieth by day." Broadly speaking, we Americans call it the traffic problem. Within comparatively recent years this jeopardy has been added to those prospects of accidental injury or death which always existed.

If machines which vend accident insurance ever are established for our patronage — they say it costs a quarted to play this one — many a patron will deposit his coin in the spirit of jest to meet with grievous injury before the day is done.—Portland Oregonian.

Four Best Fighting Planes in French Service Crash

Paris, Apr. 22 (AP)—One of the worst series of accidents ever suffered by French aviation cost twenty lives and four of France's best fighting planes today and yesterday.

First of the fatal crashes occurred yesterday when an army bomber burst into flames over northern French Morocco and crashed, killing all the crew of six men.

Shortly before last midnight a second bomber with a crew of five crashed near Beauvais while on night manoeuvres. The crew was killed.

This morning two heavy bombers collided as they were preparing to land at the Tours military airport. Nine officers and men aboard the two planes were burned to death.

TODAY'S MARKET QUIET AFFAIR

Smaller Offering of Produce Than Usual at Little Price Change

In spite of the fact that young cabbage shoots shot green heads up bravely from the confines of wooden boxes, in an effort to inject the spirit of Spring into proceedings the city market today was a drab, colorless affair with small attendance of vendors and shoppers, and business anything but brisk.

Offerings of produce were much smaller consequently, although no noticeable fluctuation of prices was marked. The maple syrup offering was well below that of a week ago with the majority of vendors stating that the season was practically over, with most sugar-bush owners gathering their sap-buckets. Prices showed no change over those of a week ago with gallon lots selling at $1.50 and quarts at 40c each.

Steady rains of the past week aided materially in bringing the maple syrup making season to a more or less abrupt close, vendors stated.

Opinion Divided

Opinion as to whether the crop was a success, however, was more or less divided, as bush-owners from various parts of the district reported higher and lower yields in comparison to those of last year.

Locally, owners stated that the fine runs of the latter days of last week were instrumental in bringing the yield to within the radius of last year's crop, but were of the opinion that the quantity of syrup and sugar made was well below that of a year ago.

Egg quotations were steady at last week levels with extra A-selects offered at 23 and 24c per doz. Slightly inferior qualities were sold at 22c and mediums were quoted at 21c in the main. The chicken display was away below its usual proportion with select weighty yearling birds holding well at from $1.15 each. Fowl and other varieties of Madam Hen of uncertain vintage were quoted from 60c each.

The new cabbage shoots were quoted at 75c per flat, containing 100 plants. In direct contrast to a year ago when new asparagus, lettuce, tomato and cabbage plants made their market debut, there were no green stuffs available today with the exception af few heads of lettuce and onions. These sold at 5c the bunch, with hothouse rhubarb offered at the same price.

Good Quality Potatoes at $1.40

Staple winter vegetables and fruit formed the main attraction on a weak outside market with carrots, beets, turnips and parsnips selling at 50c per bushel lot. Potatoes held fairly steady with good quality "spuds" selling at $1.40. and slightly inferior qualities offered at from $1.25 per 90-lb. bag-lot.

Northern Spies and Stark Delicious headed a fairly good winter apple display with the former selling at $1.50 per hamper lot and the latter a few cents less for the sample quantity. A few varieties of cooking apples were offered from 90c per bushel.

Lovers of fish had plenty to enthuse over today with fresh lake trout and whitefish that sold at 25 cents per pound attracting plenty of attention. Mudcats were offered at 15c per pound, fresh pickerel and pike at 18c and 10c per pound respectively, and mullets at four for 25c.

Six weeks' old pig quotations remained steady with a fairly large number offered at $6 each.

MOSCOW IS CENTRE

dor, Ivan Maisky, from London.

Establishment of a triple entente, such as Russia proposed, was believed to involve a guarantee to the Soviet against any Japanese attack.

Diplomats also were active in Rumania and Poland, since the agreement of these countries to accept some form of Russian military aid was necessary for the effective inclusion of Russia in the Anglo-French front. Rumania was reported to have declared she would not stand in the way of Russia's cooperation.

Continue in Turkey

Discussions continued in Turkey, although the cooperation of that nation controlling the passage between the Black Sea and Mediterreanean, was taken for granted in London. Passage through the Dardanelles and Bosporus would be necessary to British and French fleets if effective assistance were to be given to Rumania.

The Rumanian Foreign Minister, Grigore Gafencu, after discussions in Berlin, talked with Belgian officials before resuming his trip to London where he will iron out details of the British-French pledge of Rumania independence.

EXPECTS 3 FROSTS BEFORE WARM WEATHER ARRIVES

Yet another maxim of weather lore is open for official observation at the city hall.

During the present week the first piping of frogs has been heard in the west side marshes of the city, which has led to the observation by older residents that the ground is due to freeze again three times before warmer weather finally arrives. Three heavy frosts may always be expected after the first song of the frogs is heard, it is pointed out.

CALIFORNIA FARMERS FIGHT LOSING BATTLE WITH 'HOPPERS

Coalinga, Calif., April 22 (AP) —San Joaquin Valley farmers fought grasshopper hordes with dwindling supplies of poison today, and were warned of a potentially greater menace — an invasion of leaf roller moths. John Quail, Assistant Fresno County Farm Adviser, told vineyard owners to dust poison on their vines. He said the moth eggs, laid in lower leaves, were developing in some San Joaquin areas, and could do more damage than the 'hoppers.

"He has been accompanied by a woman and Thursday we believe she left for Canada carrying two large bundles," detective Millard Knuckle said.

No Definite Promise Made by Minister On Flood Control

Hon. Eric Cross Noncommittal in Regard to Local Situation States the Mayor

The promise that immediate attention would be paid to the muddy morass of No. 2 Highway just east of the city "as soon as weather conditions permit" was exacted from the Ontario Department of Highways at Queen's Park by Mayor Bone yesterday afternoon. Accompanied by Mr. C. A. Cameron, K.C. the Mayor visited the Highway Department and made a personal appeal for attention on this stretch of road which has for some days past been under detour.

"Work was started too late last season to complete this section, but as soon as conditions permit, this work will be resumed", promised Deputy Minister Smith, according to the Mayor.

"As for the flood control meeting, I don't know", commented Mayor Bone this morning. "I wouldn't say it was exactly encouraging nor discouraging, because we were given the idea that the both governments were willing to help in the matter of costs for the provision of some method of flood control for the Moira.

"We visited the office of Mr. Cross, Ontario Minister of Municipal Affairs, and were shown every courtesy. But they seem afraid to help Belleville up there because they know then that other cities will also be applying for help along the same lines, municipalities which do not need this help one quarter as badly as Belleville.

"However, we intend to keep fighting, and there is a hope that we will get some of this help if we keep at them hard enough".

EXTRA TARIFF DUTY ON CZECH GOODS

Washington, April 22—(AP) — Customs officials will put into effect at dawn tomorrow the 25 per cent extra tariff duty which the United States Treasury imposed on German goods during last month's crisis over the seizure of Czecho-Slovakia.

German goods, which already pay higher tariff duties than those of any other country, were assessed the extra 25 per cent after a ruling by the Attorney General that Germany's intricate currency system constituted a subsidy to stimulate German exports.

Local City Officials Fear Coal Famine Caused by Strike

Echoes of the soft coal strike in the United States are being heard locally and first intimation that an actual famine of this type of coal might be experienced in Belleville and other cities unless the trouble is quickly remedied is given by city coal dealers.

At a recent meeting of the Belleville Public Utilities Commission, the difficulty in getting suitable supplies of gas coal for the city gas plant was reported by O. H. Scott, secretary-manager of the Commission.

Yesterday marine reports at Toronto carried the unusual news that the collier Coalfax, well known visitor to Belleville port during the shipping season, had already made two trips from Toronto carrying soft coal from that port to Oswego, the first time on record such a reversal of shipping has been noted.

WANTS KING TO COME ON REPULSE

London Paper Strongly Condemns 'Defeatist Apprehension'

London, April 22—(CP-Havas)—Condemning "Defeatist Apprehension", The Daily Mail (Independent) today strongly opposed against any change in the Royal plans to use the battle cruiser Repulse on the voyage to Canada.

"The suggestion is being made in certain quarters," it observed, "that the King should not travel to Canada in the H.M.S. Repulse. Such a proposal takes no account of the facts, and it is uncomplimentary to His Majesty.

"The King and Queen, on this auspicious visit to the oldest of our great Dominions, should travel in one of His Majesty's ships. For the sovereigns of this country above all else are sailors, and it would be an humiliating spectacle for the Royal Navy to see His Majesty sail down the wide waters of the St. Lawrence in any other but one of his own men-o'-war.

"The idea has been put forward that there is a risk in detaching the Repulse from the main body of the British fleet. But even in an emergency of war, there could be no better station for a fast battlecruiser of the Repulse type than the North Atlantic, with its merchant shipping.

"The place of the King and Queen on May 15, when they arrive at Quebec, is on board the H.M.S. Repulse. There has been far too much impertinent gossip and defeatist apprehension about the royal tour."

DISCOUNT STORY OF SEEING 'SUB'

Boat Believed Seen Was Fishing Smack from Banks

Halifax, April 22—(CP)—Report a submarine had been seen in Halifax harbor was discounted today as indications pointed to a case of mistaken identity, with a small fishing smack taken for the undersea craft.

As Defence Minister Mackenzie expressed such an opinion at Ottawa, Captain Ellison Garrison said here last night that he had brought his small fishing vessel into harbor early Wednesday morning—at the same time and on the same course as Captain William Latter of the pilot service reported he had seen a submarine.

Captain Garrison said his craft, a 50-foot smack with a mast far aft has a deck about three feet above the waterline, a cabin well forward and a stove-pipe extending above the deck.

He said he had been questioned by Royal Canadian Mounted Police and asked to bring his boat to the dockyard here for inspection. Captain Garrison refused to divulge the nature of the questions.

Captain Garrison told newspapermen last night he couldn't "understand why the pilots did not know my boat was not a submarine." He said he was returning from fishing grounds at a late hour because of difficulty he had with raising his trawls in the strong tide.

Berlin, April 22—(AP)—A list of negative answers began to arrive at the German foreign office today from countries which Chancellor Hitler had asked whether they considered themselves menaced by Germany.

Hitler is expected to use the replies prominently in his reply Friday to President Roosevelt's peace message which asked the Fuehrer and Premier Mussolini if they were willing to give assurances that their armies would not attack or invade 31 countries.

Finland

Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko of Finland replied that Finland did not consider her neutrality threatend by Germany.

Erkko also said that, in response to a second question by the German government, Finland had stated she had no prior knowledge of President Roosevelt's message last Saturday to Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini advancing certain proposals to promote the cause of peace in Europe.

The Swiss government informed Germany that it believed its neutrality would be respected by its neighbors "who, including Germany, have expressly guaranteed it." Switzerland added it was determined to fight any aggression.

The Netherlands told Germany it did not consider itself menaced by the Reich.

Lithuania Cites Treaty.

Lithuania was reported to have referred the German government to a Lithuanian-German treaty of March 22 in which Germany pledged herself not to resort to force or support force against Lithuania.

The German minister was reported to have asked the question of Premier Hubert Pierlot of Belgium. It was reported the Belgian reply would refer to guarantees given by Great Britain, France and Germany to maintain Belgium's neutrality.

German officials obviously were pleased with the results and it was clear that no answers were expected which would support the thesis that Germany had designs on any neighbors.

Whether all thirty-one countries Mr. Roosevelt mentioned have been questioned was not divulged. At least most of Germany's nearest neighbors were included.

German 'No' Expected.

An authoritative editorial service predicted that Chancellor Hitler would reject sharply President Roosevelt's peace appeal as a "crude attempt" to establish in advance a war guilt thesis.

"This much can already be said without anticipating Chancellor Hitler's speech next week-end: Mediation from overseas, which in the opinion of many represents a crude attempt to establish a war guilt thesis a priori, will be rejected most sharply on the part of Germany," said the thrice-weekly commentary, Dienst Aus Deutschland.

"It may also be asserted that the Fuehrer, just like Premier Mussolini will remind the western powers that peace must not be teated like a dead organism but as a living task of finding just solutions from case to case."

PRECAUTIONS

Special Watchmen

Special watchmen also were on guard at power plants in several other Ontario centres, among them Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission stations along the Niagara River and at Leaside Toronto suburb. Great War veterans guarded the Chats Falls power plant on the Ottawa River, 25 miles west of Ottawa. Officials termed the measures 'precautionary.'

Action was taken following reports of thefts of explosives from some construction firms in recent weeks. It was thought the explosives could be used in possible attempts to damage public utilities and industrial plants if Canada became involved in war. Many Great War veterans throughout the province stand ready for guard duty in this eventuality.

Extremely Suspicious.

Investigation disclosed the dynamite found here was made by Canadian Industries, Limited, and was packed July 19, 1938. It had not been stolen from Sault Ste. Marie firms nor had the type of dynamite been handled by any explosive firm in the city during the past two years.

"The whole thing looks extremely suspicious," said Chief Harbottle. "After looking over the place where the dynamite was found one can readily see how easy it would be to cripple the Sault's industries, seriously damage the ship canal and even wreck extensively the approach to the international bridge."

The shed is only 1,000 yards from the Great Lakes Power plant. The chief said it would be possible for several charges of the explosive to be made up, tossed into the power canal and sent floating into the plant to put it out of commission. "We cannot afford to treat the finding of the dynamite lightly," he added.

Mayor Jack McMeeken appealed to all citizens to act as policemen and report to authorities any suspicious happenings. "This discovery should serve as a warning to every citizen to be on guard against sabotage," he said.

"Crippling of our ship canal and destruction of the international bridge would be a serious blow to the empire in time of war. And anything which halts operations at such industries as the steel plant, the paper mill and the chromium plant would hamper the empire in its defences."

The bridge linking Sault Ste. Marie with its namesake city in Michigan is only 500 feet from where the dynamite was found. Almost the same distance away is the ship canal through which flows lake traffic from Lake Superior to eastern ports. Millions of bushels of western Canadian wheat yearly pass through the waterway. "A charge or two might easily put it out of operation," said Chief Harbottle.

Veterans Enrolled

Possible attempts at sabotage of Canada's vital industries have been the subject of conferences between Ontario governmental authorities and Dominion government officials. The meetings followed reports of thefts of explosives from construction firms in scattered centres.

Through a committee of officials of ex-servicemen's organizations, squads of war veterans have been enrolled for guard duty at important points if a national emergency, such as war, arises. A number of hydro commission workmen yesterday were sworn in as special watchmen, while war veterans have been assigned to patrol the Chats Fall dam and power plant on the Ottawa River.

Pigs Get Troublesome if Allowed to Roam

When the pasture field for pigs has been selected, special attention should be paid to the condition of the fence.

A pig can be a very troublesome individual if he develops the habit of breaking out of the pasture lot. Once the desire to roam about the farm has become established in the mind of a pig, it is practically impossible to keep him in.

The only way to prevent this trouble is to make sure that the fence and gates are in a good state of repair when the pigs are first turned into the pasture field.

Some good lots of hogs received during the week of April 21st., are as follows:

7 POWER CONFERENCE

........From the beginning of the Rome-Berlin orchard-robbing partnership Herr Hitler has gone on gobbling up all the apples without leaving anything for Il Duce—even the cores. And now, assuming that the Fuehrer's next main objective is Poland, Italy stands to be dragged into a bloody and profitless war on the side of Germany—a war in which Italy would have no direct interest whatsoever.

This lends a certain credence to rumors emanating from Rome that the Duce is now toying with the idea of a seven-power conference in which Italy, France, England, Poland, Germany, Rumania and Hungary would take part. We very much hope something like this is undertaken soon. For the sands of peace are running low.—N.Y. World Telegram.

Defence Purchasing Board Bill Examined in Committee

Ottawa, April 22—(CP)—Representatives of the Canadian Manufacturers Association and the aircraft construction industry were heard by the Senate Banking Committee Friday when the government's defence purchasing board bill came under the committee's examination.

W. D. Black, president of the Association, told the committee his submissions were directed chiefly to those clauses of the measure relating to the limitation of profits on armament contracts. The bill restricts these to five per cent.

Mr. Black emphasized the great difficulty on the part of anyone determining of what net profit consisted. The likelihood was that, as in last war, the price of munitions would be governed by prices of like equipment in the United Kingdom.

Competitive Tenders

There was also the difficulty of submitting competitive tenders for supplies with the making of which Canadian manufacturers were not familiar, Mr. Black said.

In the event of war he could not see how any manufacturers could get anywhere with all the restrictions which the bill imposed with regard to ascertaining the relation of costs of production to capital investment, and features of that nature.

"You have said five per cent can not be regarded as a fair profit," said Senator W. A. Griesbach (Con. Alberta). "Now start from there. Is there anyone who can give us an idea of what a fair profit is?"

Situation in Britain

"I would be inclined to accept the situation that exists in the United Kingdom," said Mr. Black.

"Yes, but Great Britain has an armament industry of long standing, and we haven't," said General Griesbach. "We can't get supplies from Great Britain, and it is no use looking to the United States, because, in spite of what they say, the American armament industry is in a very backward condition."

The situation was different from the Great War in the fact that there was now a profits tax, said Conservative leader Meighen.

"Do you know any better methods of controlling the benefits of war production than through a profits tax?" he asked.

"I know no better way," replied Mr. Black, "And the income tax branch is highly efficient."

Disruption Foreseen

Mr. Black said the Canadian Manufacturers Association did not look forward with any degree of pleasure to producing munitions. It meant disruption of their plants. But, in war, it was a duty that would have to be performed, although the manufacturers would be glad to be rid of it.

R. V. Moffett, president of the Air Transport Association of Canada, told the committee his members did not object to the principle of control of profits, but they did object to the methods of computing them contemplated in the bill.

The measure made no provision for including interest on bank loans as a matter of cost. If unusual circumstances arose compelling the companies to employ extra shifts, with not enough liquid capital to pay the employees, the banks would have to be asked for loans to tide the companies over. Yet no provision was made for that, a circumstance that forced the companies to sit down and figure out how soon it would be before they were bankrupt.

Capital Close-ups of Week

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, April 22—(CP)— The sustained opposition attack in the Commons against the government's handling of the unemployment problem appears to leave the Liberal administration unmoved in its determination to continue its present policy. The signs are that the government will not embark on any radical adventure in attempting to cope with this bugbear of democratic nations.

The debate in the House has produced the strangest condemnation of the government on this issue since it came into office. The opposition offensive has been marked by its aggressiveness and the political nature of much of the criticism. It is certain that the unemployment question will once again be one of the major controversies for the husting orators in the coming general election.

Social Crediters hammer the financial aspect of the federal relief policy and urge issuance of new money to meet the situation. The C. C. F. members champion the cause of the transients and single unemployed, charging that these men are not being properly looked after.

There are indications the Liberals are concerned about the persistence of the attack on their policy but Labor Minister Rogers is convinced the government can face the next election confidently on this particular issue and stand on its record.

Mr. Rogers personally bears the brunt of the opposition outbursts and he has had little assistance from the rest of the cabinet during the debate. Liberal private members are not joining in the discussion with any degree of vigor, possibly because of the government's effort to conclude the session for a royal prorogation May 19.

Centre Block Memos

Add epithets hurled in the House: R. J. Deachman (Lib. Huron North) calls Karl Homuth (Con. Waterloo South) "the dark raven of conservatism."...

W. G. Weir (Lib. MacDonald), Chairman of the Agriculture and Colonization Committee, forgot his august committee post during a hearing. Rising to make an observation, he started off: "Mr. Chairman, I would only say...."

Vital Mallette (Lib. Jacques Cartier) received the warmest tribute in the Commons after his death that has been paid a member in recent years. Hon. T. A. Crerar and M. J. Coldwell (C.C.F. Rosetown-Biggar) tell intimates that it was through Mr. Mallette they obtained their real appreciation of French-Canadians....

Prime Minister Mackenzie King takes the most minute interest in the royal tour. He has even written a personal letter to the King asking His Majesty what particular dishes he would like on the menu during the trip.....You can see the taxi business shrinking as members and Senators hesitate when they leave the centre block, sniff the fresh spring air and decide to walk......

Tonight the Governor General, the cabinet, many members and civil servants are taken to task in humorous vein at the press gallery dinner. The annual publication lampooning the government and opposition dignitaries and the international crisis generally is entitled "the jittery digest." Best piece is a satire on debutantes and arms contracts and concerns the $7,000,000 deb party of "Miss Brenda Gunn"...

Commons Spotlight

Mrs. George Black at 70 is one of the Commons' most refreshing personalities. With the debate away off on a tangent she has a fine facility for bringing everyone in the House back to reality with a few well-chosen words. For instance, during the unemployment debate she admonished the members like a mother lecturing disobedient children, told them to stop being so partisan and study the question more objectively. Her advice was reflected in the rest of the debate..

Leslie Mutch (Lib. Winnipeg South) is the champion paper-cutter-outer in the Commons. He can listen to the most involved debates and still turn out patterns with his shears that amuse galleryites looking down on his handiwork....

Political Weathervanes

Claude Bowers, United States Ambassador to Spain, has the inside track now for appointment as Minister to Canada to succeed Norman Armour who went to Chile. There is talk in authoritative circles here, though, that a member of the Washington administration also is in the running. Mr. Bowers is now in Washington and it is a foregone ics in no uncertain terms. Condemned by some for its lack of activity, the Upper House demonstrated in two sittings that it could effectively run through the Canada-United States trade agreement and the defence purchasing board bill, debated for weeks in the Commons.

There was no repetition of similar argument. The elder statesman got to the point in a hurry and did not quibble about technicalities. If they had nothing constructive to say they kept their seats. Those two sessions were the most productive the Senate has had this year....

Arthur B. Purvis might once again leave industrial life to serve the Dominion. Some pressure is conclusion that his strong anti-Fascist views will prevent him returning to Spain under the Franco regime.... The External Affairs Department is none too optimistic regarding the prospects of European peace. The continued tenseness is getting on the nerves of the foreign affairs experts and even the third secretaries in the Canadian diplomatic corps are a lugubrious lot these days.

Some officials feel that this coming week will be Europe's deadline on peace or war—and incidentally will decide definitely whether the King and Queen will make the trip to Canada. Doubt is still expressed Their Majesties will leave England if the clouds get any darker....

The Senate has answered its critbeing brought to bear on the government that he be appointed chairman of the defence purchasing board and the suggestion is being favorably received on Parliament Hill.

There are other reports the national employment commission, of which he was chairman until it was disbanded, might be revived as an administrative body and Mr. Purvis be asked to head it....

The public accounts committee inquiring into the Bren gun and other arms and munitions contracts plods its weary course and probably will continue to the end of the session. Most observers are pessimistic about what it will accomplish. The C.C.F. offensive against the governments handling of contracts has been largely tied up by brilliant lawyers on the government side in the committee. There is not a lawyer in the C.C.F. to match the defence offered by such men as G. G. McGeer of Vancouver and Peter Bercovitch of Montreal....

Madoc

Madoc — The Auxiliary of St. John's Anglican Church held their monthly supper meeting at the home of Miss Jean Phillips. The menu was ably planned and looked after by Misses Jean Phillips, Jean Nickle and Mary Smith. Every one did justice to the well laden table. Arrangements were completed for their tea which was held on Thursday afternoon in the Guild rooms. The tea tables were decorated with spring flowers and the menu took the form of conundrums which made it very interesting. A nicely arranged table of home cooking added much to their finances. Much credit is due their president, Mrs. Hart, and her assistants, for a very pleasant event.

On Wednesday evening the N. C. Co's. Hastings and Prince Edward County held a very successful dance in the armouries, Madoc. Music was furnished by Jack Grant's Aces. A pleasant evening was enjoyed by those in attendance.

The Trinity Young People's Union entertained Ivanhoe Y. P. U. on Monday, with the visitors putting on a very splendid program. At the close a recreation hour was enjoyed and a bountiful lunch served by the Trinity Y. P. U. The singing of the National Anthem brought the meeting to a close.

Mrs. A. H. Watson is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Hillis Fowlie, Niagara Falls, N.Y.

Mr. Jas. Burns who has been spending the winter months in North Bay and Toronto, has returned home. He was accompanied by his aunt, Mrs. Finch, and Mr. Marten, of Toronto.

Mrs. Hoard and Miss Mary McDonald, who have been visiting Mrs. Mary Embury, have returned to their home near Stirling.

Mrs. Bishop (formerly Miss Anley), of Rouyn, was a week-end guest of Mrs. D. Brown. Going on to Montreal where she will attend a meeting of the I. O. D. E. as a delegate from the Rouyn chapter.

Havelock I. O. O. F. Visits Madoc

Royal Lodge No 286 of Havelock paid a fraternal visit to Madoc Lodge No. 179 on Wednesday evening. During the regular work the visitors conferred the second degree on two Madoc candidates. This was the first occasion that the Havelock lodge has visited Madoc in a number of years and twenty-four visitors attended. A banquet was held in the social hall and over fifty brothers attended. Bro. Don Whytock, Noble Grand of Madoc Lodge, was chairman. Following the Toast to the King, the chairman called on Bro. Robert Bristol, P.D.D.G.M., District 45, to propose the Toast to Grand Lodge. The response was made by Bro. Leeson, P.D.D.G.M., District 44. The Toast to the Visitors was proposed by Bro. Geo. White, P.G., and responded to by Bro. Ferguson, N.G., Royal Lodge and Bro. Ford, P.G., of Royal Lodge. Following a song by Bro. William Hawthorne, the social evening concluded with the singing of Auld Lang Syne.

RUMANIAN FOREIGN MINISTER VISITS ENGLAND

British Budget May Approach Six Billion Dollars

Luxury Taxes And Income Levy May Be Increased

Supplementary Estimate Will be Introduced Because of Doubling Army of Territorials

REVENUE SOURCES

Army, Navy and Air Force With Civil Defence to Cost $580,000,000 According to Estimate

London, April 24—(CP)—Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer today reviewed with the cabinet the closely-guarded secrets of Britain's largest peacetime budget, which will be disclosed in the House of Commons tomorrow.

Because of enormous rearmament expenses, the total budget for the 1939-40 financial year is expected to be about £1,278,000,000 ($5,980,000,000) as against £944,398,000 for the past year.

Sir John was expected to announce increases in "luxury taxes" and may even boost the already severe income tax to get increased revenue. The income tax is now five shillings sixpence in the pound, or 27 1-2 per cent.

Taxes on Tobacco, Tea, Gas, May Go Up

Taxes on tobacco, tea, sugar and gasoline and a levy on cosmetics have been suggested as possible fields for new revenue.

The cost of the army, navy and air force plus the cost of civil defence is estimated by the government at a total of approximately $580,000,000. Of this $350,000,000 will be met by borrowing.

Supplementary estimates have to be introduced because of the recent decision to double the territorial army and create a ministry of supply.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Warm air rises! Yes, that is what often happens. When warm air rises it does so not only because it is warmer than the layers above it, for with stable air, the usual and average condition is that air is cooler with increasing elevation, about one degree for each 300 feet. Warm air rises if it is warmer than adjacent air of the same level, or if the rate of cooling is more than a certain amount. If a portion of air begins to rise for any reason, it will continue to rise and cool until it reaches an elevation where its temperature is the same as that of the surrounding air. On the other hand cool air sinks if it is cooler than surrounding air or too cold in reference to temperatures of air below it.

CONSCRIPTION IN BRITAIN IS URGED BY FRENCH GOV'T

Believes This is the Quickest Way to Obtain Russian Support

MAY ENSURE PEACE

Paris, April 24—(AP)— France was said today to have urged Great Britain hurriedly to adopt military conscription as the quickest way to obtain Russian support and to ensure peace.

Informed French circles said Sir Robert Vansittart, chief diplomatic advisor to the British government, took back to London such a suggestion from France for the British cabinet to consider.

They said the French and British general staffs were convinced Great Britain must obtain Russia's aid if Prime Minister Chamberlain's promises to help Poland, Rumania and Greece defend their independence are to succeed in blocking further German-Italian moves.

French men have expressed alarm at what they call the pyramiding of

'If Challenged We Shall Be There' Says Earl Baldwin in Final Address

Toronto, April 24—(CP)— The democracies must strive harder than ever before to make real the twin ideals of social justice and individual freedom, which Earl Baldwin describes as "the pillars essential for the support of any decent civilization....and the one is needed to balance and correct the other."

In his third and last speech inaugurating a lectureship honoring Sir Robert Falconer, former President of the University of Toronto, Earl Baldwin reviewed the post-war period Saturday night. The former British Prime Minister spoke in the University's Convocation Hall.

Recent developments have taught democracies two lessons, he said. They must attain new technical efficiency for self-defence and learn to co-operate. And citizens of democracies must be firmly convinced the countries they are called upon to defend are "more and more worth living and dying for, because they provide more and more the conditions and the elements of the good life—the divine right of the common man."

Most Difficult Form

Reviewing events of the post-war period, Earl Baldwin said the "first failure" of the League of Nations had not disillusioned him, recognizing as he did that "democracy is the most difficult form of government." He believed, unless mankind was to be forever subject to the law of the jungle, the world will have to come back to the covenant of the League.

Reparations ruined Germany and dislocated the economic structure of the rest of Europe, he said. Out of the morass of misery that followed Hitler and Nazi-ism arose.

MOIRA R. FLOODS LOW LAND IN THE FOXBORO DISTRICT

Road to Fairfield's Bridge Flooded — Traffic on 'Mudcat Lane' at Standstill

ROSS'S FLATS COVERED

Foxboro, April 24 (Special—With April showers at last taking effect on the exceptionally deep snow in the northern part of the county, the Moira river at this point has been turned into a raging flood with the terrific volume of water which has reached here from the back country over the week end. Extending all the way from Foxboro to Corbyville, the low-lying fields on both sides of the river are buried feet deep under water, turning the entire district into a miniature lake which extends even across No. 14 highway and on into Sidney Township as the river has backed up through the culverts on Ross's flats and is inundating fields west of the highway. Farmers within the flooded district are in many cases forced to wear high rubber boots in going about their tasks as the water is lapping at the very corners of the buildings and is reminding residents of the more serious flood which occurred three years ago when, owing to the water being held up by ice, conditions were rendered much worse than they are at present with the water running unhampered to the bay.

Flood waters are roaring merrily over the fifth concession of Thurlow between Fairfield's bridge and No. 14 highway and although it is still possible to get through with an automobile, if the water continues to increase in depth the road will soon become impassable. All traffic between this village and Latta through 'Mudcat Lane' has been at a standstill since early last week when flood waters washed out a portion of the road in the vicinity of the long swamp.

APPOINTMENT IS APPROVED BY KING

Rt. Rev. Geoffrey Fisher Named as Bishop of London

London, Apr. 24 (CU)—The King today approved the appointment of Rt. Rev. Geoffrey Fisher, Bishop of Chester, to succeed Rt. Rev. Arthur Winnington-Ingram as Bishop of London.

The See of London is one of the most important ecclesiastical posts in the world and the Bishop's position in Britain is subordinate only to that of the Archbishops of Canterbury and York. The annual salary is $47,000.

Dr. Ingram, at 81, is retiring after holding the post for 38 years. No Bishop of London has had so long a tenure of office for at least three centuries.

The diocese contains 600 parishes and is staffed by more than 1,000 priests.

Dr. Fisher, the new bishop, is 51. Before becoming Bishop of Chester in 1932, he had been headmaster of Repton School for 18 years.

YUGOSLAVIA TO JOIN THE AXIS

New Victory Against the Stop Hitler Bloc Claimed by Italy

Rome, April 24—(AP)— Italy claimed a new victory today for the Rome-Berlin axis.

Weekend conversations at Venice between Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano and the Yugoslav Foreign Minister, Alexander Cinca-Markovich, ended yesterday with a statement promising "faithful collaboration" of Yugoslavia with Italy and Germany.

The same word—"faithful"—had been applied to Hungary's relations with the axis after talks earlier last week at Rome when the Hungarian Premier, Count Paul Teleky, and Foreign Minister Stephen Casaky visited Premier Mussolini and Count Ciano.

The first formal demonstration of Yugoslavia's relations with Italy, political sources said, will be a visit by Prince Regent Paul to King Victor Emmanuel next month.

A further tightening of the axis line-up was expected through arrangement of a non-aggression pact between Hungary and Yugoslavia, at odds because part of Hungary's loss was Yugoslavia's gain in the great war territorial settlement.

Guarantees against attack were understood to have been offered Yugoslavia to keep her out of the Anglo-French system of military aid guarantees.

Greedy Communicants Too Fond of Communion Wine Thinks Clergyman

London, Apr. 24 (AP)—A Church of England clergyman asked his parishioners yesterday to be more sparing with the wine at communion services.

Rev. Leonard Spiller, Vicar of St. Martin's Church in West Acton, a London suburb, wrote in his parish magazine:

"We should be grateful if communicants would take only a tiny sip from the chalice.

"Three times recently it has been necessary to reconsecrate wine although plenty of wine was put in the chalice at first.

"One of the first communicants practically drained the chalice."

Push Forward Clocks Next Sunday Eastern Canada Cities Fall in Line

By The Canadian Press

A group of eastern Canada cities will push forward their clocks next Sunday, joining Regina in adoption of daylight saving time for the warm months.

Regina began the switch to "fast time" April 9, three weeks ahead of the customary turnover date for most of those Canadian and United States cities which annually change to daylight saving time, giving citizens an hour's extra daylight in the evenings. Regina won't go back to standard time until Oct. 8, a week after most of the others revert to the regular basis.

A few municipalities will wait until late next month to go on summer time, while Sudbury, Ont., will make the change June 4. But for the most part daylight-saving communities will switch at midnight this weekend, headed by the cities of Montreal and Toronto. Residents of those cities will give up an hour when the clocks are changed.

Ontario cities besides Toronto which will change time next weekend are Belleville, Brockville, Guelph, Hamilton, Kingston, Niagara Falls, Ottawa, St. Catharines and Welland. Peterborough will fall in line May 20.

The return to standard will be more staggered. Toronto and Montreal will make the switch Sept. 30, along with large United States cities and Ottawa and Peterborough.

Belleville, Guelph and Sudbury plan to return to normal time Sept. 24, Hamilton, Sept. 10, and Kingston, Niagara Falls, St. Catharines and Welland Sept. 24.

Winnipeg and Vancouver are the largest cities which will not turn to daylight saving time. A large group of Ontario centres headed by London and Windsor, will remain on standard.

Grigore Gafencu Opens Talks With Viscount Halifax

Expected to Tell What Hitler and Von Ribbentrop Told Him While in Berlin.

STATEMENT EXPECTED

Sir Neville Henderson, British Ambassador to Germany, Leaves Unexpectedly for Berlin

By PAUL-LOUIS BRET

By The Havas News Agency

London, April 24—(CP Havas) — Official circles attribute "extreme importance" to the political and economic talks that Grigore Gafencu, Rumanian Foreign Minister, began in London today.

Their outcome is expected to determine whether Rumania will remain in the Anglo-French bloc or decide on closer cooperation with Berlin. British leaders apparently have decided to make a vigorous effort to prevent Bucharest drifting into the totalitarian bloc and with this in mind they expect economic phases of their talks with Gafencu to dominate the political conversations.

England Confident

The departure Saturday of the British economic mission headed by Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, chief economic adviser to the government, for Bucharest before the arrival of Gafencu was interpreted as an indication that Great Britain is confident of the outcome of the talks here.

It is hoped these conversations coupled with the Leith-Ross mission will prevent any expansion of the German-Rumanian commercial accord as a result of Gafencu's visit to Germany last week. The Rumanian Foreign Minister conferred with Sir Frederick at Brussels before the latter continued his journey to Bucharest.

London, April 24—(AP)—Grigore Gafencu, Rumanian Foreign Minister, called at the foreign office at 10.55 a.m. (4.55 a.m. EST) today and began his talks with Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary, on

WOULD ESTABLISH PRESS COUNCIL

Sir Percy Hurd Favors This .... Rather Than Press Controller

London, April 24—(CP Cable) — Sir Percy Hurd, Conservative, will ask Sir Samuel Hoare, Home Secretary, in the House of Commons Thursday to invite recognized organizations of the press to establish their own representative council of conduct to "uphold fully the traditional dignity and responsibility of British journalism."

The question declares this action which if necessary, would be backed by statutory powers, would avoid the necessity for any form of state interference with the freedom of the press and would follow the example of other professions.

Last Thursday in the House, Sir George Broadbridge, Conservative, gave notice he will ask the Home Secretary to appoint a "press controller" to prevent newspapers from taking advantage of the freedom of the press to "scare the public mind in these critical times by indiscreet headlines and articles."

Hamilton, Ont., Apr. 24 (CP) — Summer-like conditions arrived in Hamilton today when the thermometer reached 74 in the shade at noon.

ANIMAL CRACKERS

Peterborough, Ont., April 24 (CP) —A kerry blue terrier, frightened when a vacuum cleaner was turned on in a downtown building, jumped from a third-storey window. The dog's body struck the ground with great force. Then the animal arose and walked 60 feet before falling dead.

Guelph, Ont., April 24 (CP)— Strolling casually down a main street and undisturbed by bright lights and traffic, a bold muskrat gave many residents a bit of a shock recently. Furry coat glistening in the lights, the animal enjoyed a short walk then disappeared. Muskrats frequently reach city streets here through drains.

Petrolia, Ont., April 24 (CP) — Twin colts, rarity in the equine world, are being reared on a bottle at the farm of Councillor Ernest Ferguson, Enniskillen Township. The mother died at the birth of the twins last week. It is seldom that twin colts live, especially after the death of the mother.

Stratford, Ont., April 24 (CP)— Three sparrows and a starling waged a fierce battle over a three-storey apartment bird house here recently —and the sparrows won. The starling chased the sparrows from the house then stuck its head in the small opening. The sparrows attacked. The starling couldn't get the rest of its body in the house so it came out and fought. After 20 minutes the starling made a final lunge at the sparrows then flew away.

INQUEST ORDERED AFTER 3 KILLED ON FISHING TRIP

Car Fails to Round Curve and Crashes Into Culvert Guard

Sudbury, Ont., April 24—(CP)— Arrangements were being made today for an inquest into the death of three men whose week-end fishing trip ended in tragedy when the auto in which they were riding with three companions crashed into a culvert guard railing yesterday.

Frank Ceccarelli, 30-year-old Sudbury mine worker, apparently lost control of the car as it rounded a curve on the Sudbury-Sault Ste. Marie highway 11 miles east of here yesterday. The car struck the railing with terrific force, killing Ceccarelli instantly. Otto Jarvi, 53, and Mark Pellis, 30, died soon after being freed from the wreckage.

The shock of the crash to Chester Pickark, 31, August Ceccarelli, 24, and Willie Rivard was so great the full extent of their injuries could not be determined immediately. Pickark was known to have a fractured lumbar vertebra and was paralyzed from the waist down. August Ceccarelli, a brother of Frank, was suffering from head and face lacerations and possible fractured limbs and Rivard received facial

At a reorganization meeting of Kingston Cheese Board on May 6 in the agricultural rooms on Market Street in Kingston, the main question under consideration is expected to be the proposed change in time of regular Saturday afternoon meeting to Thursday weekly meeting as suggested some time ago by Montreal exporters. Mott, during which time a close inspection of the river as far as Foxboro was undertaken by the engineer for the purpose of making further report on flood control plans. Swollen by recent heavy rains and the water from melting lakes in the northern part of the county, the Moira River is now carrying its heaviest burden of water observed in years.

PAIR RELEASED ON THEFT CHARGE

"There is absolutely no identification connecting these men with the crime they are charged with. I refused to proceed against them on such evidence", announced B. C. Donnan K.C., County Crown Attorney, during the trial of Randall Smith, 22, and Gerald Stapley 18, two local youths who appeared charged with the theft of a quantity of groceries, said to have been taken on the night of April 8th last from a parked truck, the property of John Smallhorn, on Park Street.

"I agree, there is no identification connecting these men with the charge. The charges against both Smith and Stapley are dismissed and will be released immediately," agreed His Worship. Smith and Stapley have been held in custody since the night the groceries were stolen. Restitution was made for the greater part of the missing goods, Mr. Smallhorn stated in evidence today.

The lack of identification by Clarence and Frank Sligh, relatices of Smallhorn, who chased the persons to have stolen the groceries and apprehended one at the time, failed to identify either Smith or Stapley today, which resulted in the sudden culmination of the proceedings and the dismissal of the charges. Jacob, Goodman local barrister, appeared for the accused men.

Police Blotter

Alex Mountenay, 16 Mary Street, complained to the police tools had been stolen from his boat, moored in the slip near the old Allen dock. Mr. Mounteny had been used the tools to repair the craft. A plane and hand drill were reported stolen.

V. M. Smith, Bell Telephone official, reported to police the damage of a telephone pole situated at the rear of the Belvedere Hotel. The pole had apparently been struck by a motor vehicle and damaged, Mr. Smith informed the police.

A valuable beagle hound dog, which was being shipped enroute via motor transport escaped from its crate while in Belleville over the week end. Later however, Thomas Thorne, local pound keeper, recovered the missing canine on East Bridge Street. The animal was returned to the transport company and later shipped to its destination.

SEES PALESTINE COCKPIT OF WAR

Mr. Eric B. de Pendleton Speaks of Germany's Designs on the Holy Land

"World peace is trembling on the brink of chaos", said Mr. Eric B. de Pendleton of the British-Israel-World Federation when he addressed more than 100 people last night in the Y.M.C.A. in an illustrated address "Hitler's designs on the Holy land".

He claimed that Hitler's plans were practically completed in so far as Drang nach sued-osten — the famous drive to the southeast was concerned. Already Hitler had seized Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, and now Jugo-Slavia and Hungary have come under the control of Berlin and so are reduced to more economic dependencies for the third Reich. Turkey is uncertain, while Roumania is teetering on the fence. Mr. de Pendleton claimed that the prophecies of the Book foretold that this precarious peace would eventually break, and that Palestine would be the cockpit with Jerusalem as the storm centre. "For I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle".

Deliverance of Jerusalem

The speaker said that the deliverance of Jerusalem in 1917 A.D. by Lord Allenby in reality heralded the present critical epoch in world affairs because of our Lord's own words. "And Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles shall be fulfilled". In 1918 the great world empires crashed as a direct result of the world war. Fascism, Naziism and Communism were likened in the prophecies to three evil frogs croaking out subversive propaganda by night, the arising of ten dictators who later were to be controlled by three supermen. This has largely been accomplished he stated.

By means of the coloured slides Mr. de Pendleton showed how Palestine was prior to 1917 A.D. a veritable wilderness of desolation. Then as the British began to free Jerusalem from Turkish domintion the rains fell, and for the first time in centuries Solomon's pools filled to overflowing. The actual deliverance in itself was a miracle for as Allenby and the army chiefs were praying for divine guidance, some British planes hovered overhead and the inhabitants shouted out 'The Turks are running away, the day of deliverance is at hand'. Without the dropping of a bomb, or the firing of a single shot Isaiah 31:4-5 was fulfilled. 'As birds flying so will the Lord of Hosts defend Jerusalem, defending also He will deliver it, and passing over He will preserve it". Now Palestine is the most fertile country in the whole world, and the scene is laid in readiness for the final drive southeast, which Mr. de Pendleton continues tonight under the title "Can Hitler be Stopped?"

OBITUARY

ALFRED O. MERRILL

(Percy Township)

Following a heart attack, Alfred O. Merrill, Reeve of the Township of Percy, and one of the most widely known residents of the district, passed away suddenly on Sunday morning last, April 16th at his residence in the Wilson Settlement. Apparently in his usual health, he was in Campbellford on Saturday afternoon last.

Born in Percy, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Merrill, the deceased had attained the age of 64 years, 7 months, and had spent his whole life in his native township, where he carried on successfully as a farmer and dairyman. Actively interested in all departments of farm life and work, he attained various positions of prominence. As a member of Percy Agricultural Society he had served in many capacities and had been chosen first vice-president for this year. President of Beaver Cheese Company for a number of years, he acted for the factory as salesman on Campbellford Cheese Board. He was a past president of the Eastern Dairymen's Association, and for a few years past held the office of vice-president of the Northumberland County Cheese Producers' Association.

Following his election to the Council of his native township about ten years ago, he rose to occupy the position of Reeve in 1932, and as one of the representatives at the Counties' Council served on various committees, where his counsel and advice were adequately valued. As Reeve for the year 1939 he was regarded as a probable candidate for the Wardenship of the United Counties if re-elected for the following year.

The late Mr. Merrill was a member of the Meyersburg United Church and held official position on the Board for many years past. In the year 1900, Mr. Merrill married Miss Alice Parks, of Rawdon township, who survives. There are no children. One sister, Mrs. R. B. Nelson, of Percy, also survives.

The funeral took place from his late residence on Tuesday afternoon and was largely attended. Service was conducted in the United Church at Meyersburg by Rev. J. A. Plant and the remains were laid to rest in Warkworth cemetery.

Numerous floral tributes from organizations and friends adorned the casket. The pallbearers were David Durran, Wesley Remington, Wesley Wilson, Walter Weir, Leigh Isaac and Edward Duff.

Surviving her besides her husband is one sister, Mrs. Harold Butler of Trenton.

The funeral took place this Monday afternoon, April 24th. Service was conducted in the Anglican Church at Brighton and interment was made in Mount Evergreen Cemetery, Trenton.

LATE MISS MARY E. GAILEY

The funeral of Miss Mary Elizabeth Gailey, late residence, 286 William Street, took place Saturday afternoon, April 22nd., from the Pinkston Funeral Home, Church Street. The bearers were Messrs. T. G. Bell, Harry P. Alford, John W. Cook, Fred Cook, George F. Sprackett and Dr. M. J. Clarke.

LATE CHARLES H. TRUMAN

Saturday afternoon the funeral of Charles Henry Truman, late residence Cannifton, took place from the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street. The service in the chapel and at the graveside in Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, Vicar of St. Thomas Church.

The deceased was a soldier in the Imperial forces and served in Australia and at Gibraltar. In the year 1914 he enlisted with the first Canadian Contingent and served overseas during the Great War. The bearers were all veterans of the Great War and were as follows: Messrs S. Pointer, T. J. Clarke, F. Hammett, A. Williamson, S. Sheppard and F. High.

At the close of the committal service the Last Post and Reveille were sounded by Bugler J. Flindall.

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, April 25

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A DAY in which probitable issues depend upon individual composure and self-control is presaged by the ruling planetary influences. There is a possibility of indulgence in too strenuous or rash behavior, this serving to incite hostility from elders and others who may be needed for promoting important new ventures. There is an indication of change in place or personnel.

Those whose birthday it is are advised that very profitable and constructive programs are dependent upon cleverness, sagacity and control during the year. There may be a major objective negatived by rash, impetuous or quarrelsome conduct, which may offend elders or superiors, making them hostile. Restraint, diplomacy and subtlety should prove lucrative.

A child born on this day, although creative, talented and original, may have a sensitive nature, provoking impetuous or reckless conduct to its detriment. Its moodiness or eccentricity may beget hostility.

50th Wedding Anniversary For Marmora Twp. Couple

Mr. and Mrs. John Archer Enjoying Splendid Health

VISITED BY FAMILY

Marmora, April 24.—(Special)— One of the most genial personages of Marmora Township, together with his benial better half quietly celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding on Sunday.

On April 23rd, 1889, John Archer, then resident of Toronto, was united in marriage to Sarah Rebecca Knox by Rev. William Beer, then resident Methodist minister of Marmora, at the home of the late J. W. Pearce for whom the bride had been housekeeper. "It doesn't seem long ago but there have been a lot of changes around here since," observed Mr. Archer as he took the natural retrospect of the past half century, "I am the fourth generation of a family of miners, which worked in the silver and lead mines of my native county of Cumberland, England."

I was only three years old and my father was thirty-five when our family came to this country. We settled in Brantford and my father was latter attracted to the Williams Gold Mine, near Deloro", further remarked the man, who is still an arduous prospector.

Born in England

Mr. Archer was born at Kenthead near the Pass of Alston, Cumberland, England, on May 11th, 1867, but leaving his native soil at so early an age, does not recall much of the glories of the Lake district. His parents were the late Edward Archer and Mary Wilkinson. His father was a mine mechanic who did such masonary as was called for in the mining operations of his firm. Mrs. Archer's parents were the late William Knox and Isobel Beers of Seymour Township, her father being a doctor by profession. Before returning to Marmora Township about twenty-three years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Archer lived at Toronto, Longford Township and Niagara Falls. During that period Mr. Archer worked on the construction of power plants at Niagara Falls. He was also general foreman of the construction of the waterworks tunnel under Toronto Bay. Work on this tunnel was commenced at both ends and a bonus of fifty dollars was offered by the contractor to the gang who should break through first. There was no little excitement as the men under Mr. Archer were successful. How a visit to a doctor indirectly saved his life will ever remain in his memory.

He started for work one morning carrying his lunch as usual but made the decision enroute to visit the doctor for treatment as a result of which he did not report for duty. However, he visited the scene of his labours to witness a bad accident in which four were killed outright (including the man who took his place in the carriage) and three died of injuries caused through the snapping of a new cable.

Mr. Archer is possessed of a fine physique and enjoys splendid health. He is gifted as an elocutionist and can still sing well for one of his years. He had a partiality for Harry Lauder's songs. Regarding his recitations and songs which caused surprise to many of his juniors on the occasion of a grand-daughter's wedding party a few months ago he remarked "I'm purely amateurish you know".

Mrs. Archer who is about two years older than her husband is also a delightful person to meet despite the fact that her health has not been the best for the past few years. To the congratulations extended by their three children, William, Marmora; Mrs. Roy Shepherd, Toronto and Mrs. Thomas Young, of Marmora Township will be added those from a wide circle of friends.

AT THE BELLE

"CAFE SOCIETY"

"ONE THIRD OF A NATION"

Madeleine Carroll, first in the hearts of beauty-appraisers everywhere, returns to the screen for a fling at romance with handsome Fred MacMurray, her new leading man, in Paramount's "Cafe Society", which will be presented next at the Belle. Shirley Ross, as chief runner-up for MacMurray's affections, completes the starring trio.

Miss Carroll, who has climbed to screen fame via "the Case Against Mrs. Ames," "The General Died at Dawn", "Lloyds of London", "Prisoner of Zenda" and "Blockade," gets ample opportunity to show the devastating blonde beauty which prompted one famous artist to call her "lovelier than Romney's Lady Hamilton"—his highest tribute. Cast as a millionaires of New York's smartest set, she wears more than twenty striking new costumes especially designed for her by Edith Head. Running the gamut from yachting costumes to glamorous evening gowns, the clothes represent the perfect wardrobe for the member of "Cafe Society."

The romance of Miss Carroll and MacMurray, who plays a young newspaperman, is one of the righest-geared to reach the screen in many a month. It goes into action when, assigned to cover her arrival on the "Queen Mary," he treats her so contemptuously that she waits her time to get even with him. It comes when she succeeds in getting him to fall in love with her and marries him simply to crash the gossip columns.

"One Third of a Nation"

Taking its title from President Roosevelt's inaugural address, in which he stated: "I find one third of a nation ill-housed, ill-clad and ill-nourished...." a romantic and stirring motion picture, "One Third of a Nation" is the companion feature attraction. Brilliantly filmed under the direction of Dudley Murphy, this Paramount adaptation of the popular Broadway play dramatically and powerfully puts over its message. It's a story that any playgoer with human sympathies cannot afford to miss!

Sylvia Sidney is the star of "....one third of a nation...." and acquits herself admirably as a romantic girl of the slums whose spontaneous and forceful persuasiveness brings about long sought reforms from a son of the "idle rich." Leif Erikson, in the latter role, is at his best. Other members of the large cast who give excellent performances include Myron McCormick, Muriel Hutchison, Sidney Lumet (whose fine portrayal of the crippled boy is outstanding), Hiram Sherman, Iris Adrian and Percy Waram.

The popular Belle News of the day will be presented on the same program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"NEX TIME I MARRY"

Romance takes to the highway on a cross-country journey with a laugh for every mile. That is a thumb-nail description of "Next Time I Marry" sprightly offering now on the screen of the McCarthy Theatre.

Lucille Ball, fast becoming one of the screen's top flight comediennes, is teamed with James Ellison and Lee Bowman. The former pair's antics as a pair of kissless newlyweds with divorce as their cherished goal supply an abundance of screen-fun, Bowman, as a titled foreigner, aids and abets the merriment.

The amusing story deals with a tempestuous heiress who impulsively marries a handsome young relief-worker in order to qualify for an inheritance. The entire deal is a business proposition, with the young man promising to permit an immediate divorce so the bride can marry her fiance, the nobleman.

But through a series of unlook-for complications, the wild scheme backfires and launches a mad race to Reno, with the bride and groom each vowing to obtain a divorce first. To keep Miss Ball from winning, Ellison holds her prisoner in his auto-trailer and heads for the Nevada town, with feverish newspaper reporters, the girl's relatives, police and the dismayed nobleman in hot pursuit. It is all a merry mixup, especially when the captive heiress finds herself actually falling in love with her hired husband who believes she is a contemptible double-crosser.

Deftly directed by Garson Kanin, "Next Time I Marry' 'was produced by Cliff Reid. Dudley Nichols and John Twist are credited with the screen adaptation of Thames Williamson's original story.

Second Big Feature

"Fugitives For A Night" which is presented as a companion feature hit in addition to "Next Time I Marry' 'offers a new and refreshing story on a unique phase of Hollywood life.

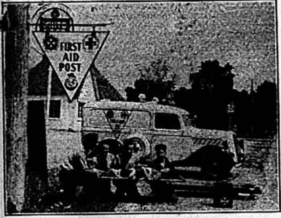
Frank Albertson who shares feature billing with Eleanor Lynn has one of the leading roles, portraying a Hollywood stooge, a little known but important human factor in the realm of movie-making. Miss Lynn has the other in the character of a studio publicity woman.

The story revealed by this comedy-drama is a phase of Hollywood life never before shown on the screen—the Hollywood you never read about—that seething world behind the make-up—a picture you would not expect Hollywood to produce.

The supporting cast includes popular Allan Lane, Bradley Page, Adrianne Ames and Paul Guilfoyle.

We recommend the above two features, as each outstanding and entirely different one from the other in fine entertainment value, be sure to see them.

Highway First-Aid Posts



"Roadside Samaritans" at drill, showing Patrol Ambulance in the background. This service is operated by the Red Cross, St. John's Ambulance Association and the Ontario Motor League.

At least three persons among the 174 injured motorists who received prompt treatment by trained First Aid crews last year, would, it is believed, have lost their lives but for the operation of the Highway First Aid Posts in Ontario.

Of the 174 injuries treated, 145 were minor and 29 serious disabilities.

The 40 some Posts in operation are situated at strategic points along the highways of Ontario where the greatest frequency of accidents occurs, and are manned by some 70 specially trained volunteers.

A Highway Patrol Ambulance works in conjunction with the First Aid Posts. Last year, this ambulance travelled over 21,000 miles, mostly during the summer, and on its trips rendered first aid to one serious and eight minor injuries.

This highway First Aid Service which is increasing the number and effectiveness of its Posts each year, is operated under the joint direction of the Ontario Red Cross, the Ontario Motor League and the St. John Ambulance Association.

WOULD LICENSE ALL CATS TO SAVE SONG BIRDS

Edmonton, April 24 (CP)— A request for licensing of cats was considered yesterday by Acting Mayor Douglas Grout. The request, filed by the Northern Alberta Fish and Game Protective League, held "the cat family — domestic, stray and otherwise", was a menace to the songbird life. A well-fed cat kills up to 50 birds a year, and a half-starved cat accounts for between 75 and 100, the league's letter said.

Singapore, April 24—(CP—Reuters)—The Straits Settlements' Legislative Council today approved an additional gift of £1,000,000 ($4,680,000) toward the cost of Imperial defence. Governor Sir Shenton Thomas expressed thanks in the name of the British Government for the gift which brings the total defence contribution of this strategic British outpost to £1,750,000.

German Propaganda Being Outlawed by French Government

Paris, April 24—(AP) — The French government struck today at German propaganda in Alsace-Lorraine by outlawing three organizations, including that of the Prussian-born autonomy leader, Hermann Bickler.

Sources close to the government said the effort to smash autonomy organizations in an area along the vital Maginot Line was but the forerunner of widespread measures to assure French unity during present international tension.

These quarters disclosed the government decreed dissolution of three propaganda units at last Friday's cabinet meeting but kept the move secret until today. In addition to Bickler's youth organization, those outlawed were the Erwin Von Steinbach Club and the Alsatian People's Intellectual and Cultural Union.

Decision After Report

Sources close to the government said the decision was made after a report by vice Premier Camille Chautemps, charged with supervising the administration of the border provinces which France won back from Germany at the end of the Great War.

Another law decreed by the cabinet was reported to have established heavy penalties for efforts "to provoke hate and discord among Frenchmen because of race or religion."

Bickler, so-called "Fuehrer of Alsace-Lorraine," has been hailed by his followers as the man who might some day lead the Provinces back to Germany. Naturalized French after the war he has declared it to be a "self evidence cause" that the "people of Alsace-Lorraine constitute a national minority inside France." He said "the entire world no doubt has learned that we are of German character and language."

While most of the nearly 2,000,000 inhabitants of Alsace-Lorraine speak German, French officials dispute Bickler's claim that the population is of "German character."

H. VON DIRKSEN

The British Embassy said no arrangements had been made for him to call at the Wilhemstrasse and that he was carrying no special message. Nevertheless, his reappearance in Berlin was deemed by the average German to constitute triumph for German diplomacy.

May Urge Moderation

There was little doubt in the minds of men who follow the political game that Sir Neville would urge moderation in Chancellor Hitler's reply to President Roosevelt before the Reichstag next Friday. It was further taken for granted that he would explain to Berlin authorities that Great Britain has no desire to "encircle" Germany.

Newspapers generally printed only a few lines on Sir Neville's departure from London but Rudolf Kircher, editor of the Frankfurter Zeitung, expressed belief Great Britain was "doubting the wisdom of her policy and her ability to carry it through."

"It is possible that the high point of English activity already has been reached," he said. "A tendency to return to the old policy and way of thinking is to be observed."

Important Visit

Nazi circles placed great importance on the coming visit to Berlin of the Yugoslav Foreign Minister, Alexander Cinca-Markovitch. Berlin morning newspapers carried long dispatches on the weekend talks in Venice between Cinca-Markovich and the Italian Foreign Minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano—reported in Rome to have ended with a Yugoslav commitment of "faithful collaboration" with Italy and Germany.

The Berlin press used such headlines as "Rome and Belgrade destroy encirclement aspirations," and "entente manoeuvre wrecked: Yugoslavia sides with axis."

Redoubled efforts to clinch Yugoslavia to the Rome-Berlin axis were expected to come upon the arrival here Wednesday of the Yugoslav Foreign Minister.

military commitments they and Great Britain have given smaller nations while Russia has not given her support.

Psychological Effect

The French view is that conscription would have a decisive psychological effect on all countries, particularly the Soviet Union. Some expressed the view that Russia and others must be convinced that Britain intends to fight if necessary and that nothing less than conscription would achieve that.

At Le Havre, Cesar Franck, 19-year-old Alsatian watchman, was under arrest, charged with incendiarism, in connection with the fire which swept the French liner Paris at her dock last Tuesday.

Authorities said there were contradictions in Franck's story of the part he played in discovering the fire and evidence of negligence which prevented quicker action by firemen.

A private soldier, acting as secretary to the colonel commanding the fourth regiment of engineers on the Italian border, was arrested yesterday. He was charged with espionage. He was alleged to have supplied —with a Swiss girl's aid—secret documents to a foreign state. They related to mobilization of French Alpine frontier forces.

Paris, April 24 —(CP-Havas)— Robert Coulondre, French Ambassador to Germany, is likely to return to Berlin, following the example of Sir Nevile Henderson, the British Envoy, who is already back at his post. Shanghai, April 24 —(AP) — Chinese reports today said a Japanese offensive westward through Kiangsi Province had suffered a severe setback during the weekend, when the invaders were said to have lost 1,000 killed and many more wounded.

The defenders maintained that Chinese counter-thrusts had put the Japanese on the defensive.

A Japanese statement said that between April 9 and 15 a total of 3,000 Chinese troops were killed in fighting along the Tientsin-Pukow and Lunghai Railways.

Gibraltar, April 24—(AP)— An order designed to provide sufficient food supplies for any emergency was issued today by the government of this western gateway of the Mediterranean.

The order placed the importation of flour, sugar, meat, cereals, tea, coffee and other vital foodstuffs under control of licences issued by the Governor.

Importers having licences would be required to increase their basic stocks to a minimum level regarded as consistent with safety and this level would be maintained.

Bucharest, April 24 —(AP)— A body of British financial and industrial experts, led by Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, arrived in Bucharest today to map out a program for extension of trade between Great Britain and Rumania. Government sources said another object of the mission was to establish arms and munitions factories to make Rumania independent of the Skoda works of Czecho-Slovakia, now in German hands.

There were reports that Germany, which last month completed a plan for extensive exploitation of Rumanian oil fields and agricultural lands, was watching the Anglo - Rumanian negotiations closely and planned counter-moves.

Theft Charge Will Be Heard Later

George McGowan, West Huntingdon, was arrested in Belleville on Saturday on a charge of the theft of a quantity of automobile parts and accessories, said to have been the property of Walter Townsend. McGowan was admitted to bail on Saturday.

Police alleged McGowan was employed to clean up an old garage, operated by Mr. Townsend, and during which the accused took a quantity of automobile accessories and parts which were in the building. The offence is said to have taken place one year ago this month, McGowan having been apprehended on a warrant issued some time ago.

When McGowan appeared for trial before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., today, however, Crown Attorney B. O. Donnan K.C., informed the court the prosecution was not ready to proceed.

When arraigned McGowan pleaded "not guilty, there were no intentions of stealing." remarked the accused.

INCOME TAX DAYS

Income tax forms have been made the subject of much wit and humor in jokes and cartoons and in radio broadcasts. There is no doubt of the intricacy of the forms to the uninitiated person whether he is a taxpayer in the United States or Canada, though the Canadian form is probably as simple as it can be made.

The worries however over income returns are moreover lightened by staffs who advise and offer whatever assistance is necessary in the preparation of the annual statement. This saves anxiety and labor by those who probably at no other time of the year have to make out forms and to whm any form whatever would be a worry.

The last few days for filing statements and making part or full payment have arrived and this week only remains before the time is up.

SEES DICTATORSHIPS ON DECLINE

Europe's dictatorial regimes have passed "their culmination point", says one of Europe's former statesmen, Dr. Eduard Benes, president until last October of the now lost Czecho-Slovakia.

Continued bold front to the dictators would end in ultimate triumph for democratic principles. "Here and there, there may be another democratic collapse but on the whole the period of new reaction of democracy against the authoritarian regimes of Europe does now approach. That is the fundamental law of every revolution. Democracy after the Great War was a great revolution; the reaction came after its mistakes and failures. The dictatorships are today another great revolution; their mistakes, failures and inefficiency provoke inevitable reaction".

Dr. Benes' view is that "Europe will not collapse. She is in a great new fight for democracy and freedom which will finish sooner or later in an inevitable and decisive victory of the high, free and democratic civilization."

Dr. Benes is a great and practical student of international politics and of the law of movements in civilization. He has placed the fall of Czecho-Slovakia as the low point of the reaction against the democracies. He is perhaps the first to use the word "inefficiency" with respect to dictatorships. Yet that is what they are — by suppressing so many elements, liberty of expression in public, in the press, in action, the freedom of elections, government by the people, the dictators squeeze out of the situation the very sources of permanent national strength. Demcracy can go on, dictatorships are brief, because generally no second dictator arises and because the people grow restive. Germany and Italy today are like the gigantic armored animals which once roamed slowly over the earth. The very weight of their bony armour plate brought about their extinction. Germany and Italy have armed men, guns, ships, airplanes, but they lack world trade, because Germany for instance has used up 47 per cent. of the people's income in armament. A study of the activity of the German plants handling metals last year is a revelation of a vast development in production for arms purposes and leaves some persons with the expression of doubt as to whether Germany, armed to the teeth, dare to fight a war, because they doubt whether she can fight, because of lack of trade and money.

MANY ANNIVERSARIES

Sunday April 23rd was a day rich in British anniversaries and traditions. Three great events were marked on this day. Twenty one years ago the British navy performed the famous exploit at the Mole of Zeebrugge, one of the great achievements of the World War. Men who went through that gallant experience are to be found in all parts of the Empire and in Canada the occasion was observed with due services.

St. George, the patron saint of England, whose cross appeared on the shields and armour of English soldiers in the great days of chivalry inspired them in their heroic struggles on many a field of conflict. His traditional heroism in the slaying of the dragon has been a symbol to the English people of the conquest of evil and sin. Yearly the day of St. George is observed and lessons taught from the traditional life of the saint. St. George too has given the St. George's Cross to the Union Jack under which British democracy moves onward.

Three hundred and seventy-five years ago there was born at Stratford-on-Avon William Shakespeare, who lived to be the world's greatest dramatist and poet, who has profoundly influenced literature and spread the British spirit throughout the world. His serene vision and cosmopolitan outlook on life have never been rivalled. He died on the anniversary of his birth on St. George's Day.

Did you ever stick to the business grind,
To the ceaseless whirr of the mills,
To the shuttles that fly with the shining hours,
While your heart's away in hills?
Away far out on a mountain side,
Where the wild azaleas bloom;
And your spirit thralls
Within four walls
Of a spindle throbbing room.

Did you ever cling to the daily task,
So bitter and hard and long;
To the links and bars of labor's chain,
When the lilt of a medlark's song
Resounded in your inner ear
All through the weary day,
And your soul was sick
Of stone and brick,
And yearned for the broad highway.

Did you ever cling to the work and toil,
Where the traffic clangs and roars,
When the wanderlust was in your heels
And your thoughts where the sea gull soars?
When your thoughts were out on the anchorage
Where the tossing ketches ride,
And the white sails gleam
In the sun's last gleam
As the boats go out with the tide?

Did you ever have the languor come
As the feeling o'er you steals,
That you're tired and worn with the work and sweat,
And the noisy clash of wheels?
That you want to follow your heart away,
To hill or billow or lea,
And take the track
Of the flying wrack,
On hill or valley or sea?

Well, that's the lot of a host of folks
That plug through this funny world,
And never a chance to hurl their pike,
Or see a sail unfurled,
And so we roll down through the age,
To the edge of the outer rim,
Till we catch our breath,
And peer at Death,
And the flick-ring light grows dim.

PETERBOROUGH EXAMINER CALLS ATTENTION OF MERCHANTS to a man travelling from town to town in Western Ontario and headed East who has been giving businessmen a headache. Police have been asked to locate him. His racket is selling advertising space on telephone cards. Arrangements are made with a local printer to print the cards but no money deposited, hence the salesman fades away with the money and the cards are not printed. Says The Review:

"The salesman never returned and that is why the police are looking for him. In all these villages and towns the merchants would have access to the columns of their own newspaper to tell the people about their business, but it is surprising the way in which many of them will tumble for the travelling salesman who comes in and suggests that they buy space on some newfangled scheme and pay for it in advance. Certainly the police should catch the salesman if possible. and if opportunity affords, thwy might also have a word to say to the merchants."

What super-salesmen are these who can sell something which is generally nothing, and collect for it in advance. Let the local printer or publisher try to collect in advance and see what happens — the roucous notes of the horselaugh.

SPEAKING FROM EXPERIENCE

The boy had been spending the afternoon getting into all kinds of trouble until finally a neighbor collared him and asked him why he did not go straight home after school, with the other children.

Boy (in surly tone): "I'm locked out."

Neighbor: "Why locked out? And where's your mother?"

Boy: "Down at the Mothers' Club meeting, telling them how to raise children."

IT DOES

But the codfish doesn't cackle

And so we praise the artful hen,

It pays to advertise.

When Commentators Get Together

On Sunday The Journal "listened in" while a radio "commentator" in New York talked with radio "commentators" in London and Paris. The talk was about war. As an example of cheap melodrama, plus the irresponsibility of this sort of radio "stunt", it could scarcely be surpassed.

The technique of the thing was obvious. The New York speaker, opening the proceedings, made the build-up. There was a glib, lurid word-picture of Albania and its possible consequences, suggestions of reports and rumors ("about which we have no definite information here") of tremendous impending events, including a German attack on Holland; then a request—it was almost a plea in bated breath—that the radio men in London and Paris tell "what is going on over there."

The radio men in London and Paris, obliging, had nothing to tell except what they had learned from the usual news-agency channels. The British cabinet had met, and there had been conferences with certain foreign ministers in London. There had been a meeting of the French general staff. And so on and so forth. One of the commentators, the man in Paris, was so bereft of information, he read extracts from editorials in the French newspapers.

Yet the whole business, put on on a day when there were no newspapers. was calculated to frighten. The New York commentator, three thousand miles from the scene of action, discussed the situation as though be was in the complete confidence of Chamberlain, Daladier, Mussolini and Hitler. Actually he had nothing before him but the news bulletins of the American Associated Press and the United Press, but the uninitiated might easily imagine that he had just put down the telephone after a conversation with every chancellory in Europe. Add to this awesome tones, and it required only Mr. Or-imagine that the next thing to come would be the sound of Gabriel's trumpet.

Dialing off the "commentators". The Journal picked up the Sunday edition of the New York Times, turned to the comment of its informed expert on foreign affairs, Mr. Edwin James. What a contrast! Here was a man, obviously, who knew his Europe, discussing Albania and its possible consequences soberly and intelligently. Instead of melodrama and hysteria, one got solid information, logical reasoning, intelligent deduction; common sense.

The pity is that for the one who reads the official statements and informed comment thereon, thousands listen to the radio commentators. take in and are taken in by their irresponsible handling of report and rumor. The psychology of fear is spread like wildfire. It is one of the infernal nuisances, and evils of the times. — Ottawa Journal.

Nature Puts Safety in Colors

Nature dipped her paint brush into pots of brilliant color when she painted the fire-bellied toad, the blister beetle, the robin, the rainbow fish and many other creatures. Their exciting colors may or may not be responsible, but most highly-colored creatures are an unsatisfactory source of food. They are quite distasteful, even to animals. Instead of "safety in numbers," their motto seems to be Safety in Colors.

A bright scarlet waistcoat was Nature's gift to the fire-bellied toad. The little fellow is so unpalatable no animal will attempt to eat him if the creature is aware that his prospective meal is a fire-bellied toad. The smart toad seems to realize that his flaming vest is an asset and if he finds himself in danger, he bends his head and the rear part of his body as far back as possible, displaying his scarlet costume. He even twists his arms and legs so that the under parts of each are visible because they, too, are crimson in color. He doesn't move or try to hop away, he merely relies upon his flame-coloured vestments to discourage his foes.

Blister beetles and robins are brightly-colored creatures that are seldom, if ever, captured for the sake of providing an appetizing meal for another hungry animal.

The tiny rainbow fish is a creature of dazzling colors, but quite unfit for human consumption. The rainbow has formed a queer alliance with the sea anemone. The anemone is as ugly as the rainbow fish is beautiful. He resembles a large burlap bag with a huge, gaping mouth. When the tiny rainbow attracts the attention of another fish, the cunning creature darts quickly into the anemone's huge mouth. The unwary pursuer follows and Mr. Anemone has an appetizing fish supper. The little rainbow is never damaged by his encounter with the cavernous interior of the anemone and when there is no longer any danger, he comes out of his hiding-place and sets out to lure another tempting morsel to his friend, the anemone. —Mildred D. Crehan in Our Dumb Animals.

Spring Philosophy

(By GEORGE H. CARVER)

"It's open season for mumblin' and grumblin', and from all sides there comes the rumblin' of winter-weary folks who yearn quite audibly for spring's return. They're sick to death of ice and snow, and think it's time that they should go afar from scenes in winter's clutch, of snow-filled roads and woods and such, to where the sun shines all the day (though where that is they cannot say)."

"They're tired of wearin' winter duds, and crave a feed of new-grown spuds. The maple syrup yield's a flop, the weather ruined all the crop—the cows are poor, the horses thin, and grandpap's got the ague agin. The season coal-bill's way past due, it can't be paid because the "flu" took all the extra cash they made, and last year's taxes aint been paid. And mother's gotta have a hat (we'll kill a pig to pay for that), while father's pants are wearin' thin in spots but then it seems a sin to spend the money for a suit, when patches serve the old galoot. Then sister's fin'ry's not complete, she has no "barges" for her feet while sonny's mad, won't hit a rug this spring (the little jitterbug) because his suit is out of date, and wants a new one, eight-ninety-eight.

"Some city folks and farmers too are getting in an awful stew, because of lateness of the spring, in fact they growl at everything. If they should ponder 'fore they growl and rant and rave and cry and bowl about the hardness of their lot, and all that old depression rot, they'd know that not so far away are folks a lot worse off than they, who, like the bees within the hive are happy just to be alive. They take life as it comes and smile, tho they've not eaten for a while, in rags 'tis true, but health complete, life's mostly bitter, little sweet. They're thankful for the birds and bees and little children at their knees—and while old winter lags they say that spring can't be so far away. But if at times their lot does pall they know that wealth and pelf's not all. Their creed—it's simple, pointed, terse: 'There's nothing bad but might be worse'."

ATLANTIC JAUNT

This Summer Imperial Airways are starting a regular air service to Canada. Perhaps they will carry passengers and perhaps they will not. The chances are that they will want to run an experimental service with mails only for at least a year, before they publish timetables and fares, and undertake to carry passengers. Their policy is "safe and sure".

However, if they did decide to start this year, they would not have far to look for passengers to fill their cabins. Bookings have been coming in since 1935 and there are already 100 names on the waiting list. Some of those who have booked seats are going to be disappointed, but that can't very well be helped. They all want to be "in" on the first trans-Atlantic passenger flight, and there simply isn't going to be room for them all. — British Empire Review.

COUNTRY CHURCH

Time and circumstances seem to have affected adversely the attendance at the country churches all over the province. One writer laments the fact that the rural church, within reasonable distance of the cities, is next thing to being deserted.

Not so many years ago the country churches were filled to the doors every Sunday and the people were enthusiastic in their attachment to the church, the Sunday School and other established services.

Today. the fact is sorrowfully noticed that the motor cars take the young and some of the old people right past the doors of the humble little church in the country to the big churches in the city. and the ministers and the few who are faithful to the little church of their fathers are hurt because the old place is practically deserted.

In matters of religion, as in everything else, the lure is of the big church in the city. — Guelph Mercury.

ANOTHER STORY

The woman who told us this story said she meant to tell us about it a long time ago, but had never gotten around to it. It's a little late, but still good.

It happened when she went to see "Robin Hood" several weeks ago. As she was leaving the theatre she was walking behind two elderly women, who were commenting on how much they had enjoyed the picture.

"Only one thing I was disappointed about", one of them said. "It never did show him shooting the apple off his son's head."

"Oh, that didn't happen in this story", the other said. "That happened in 'Arrowsmith'." — Springfield (Mo.) Leader.

CRUELTY ABOUNDS

In this age of scientific wonders it is surprising that the American Humane Association should find it necessary to continue the quest for humane traps for wild animals that are caught for their furs. The Humane treatment of animals has made great progress, and in the cities sick and injured creatures are conveyed to hospitals in ambulances, anaesthetized if necessary, and skilfully operated upon. But in many places animals are slaughtered with cruel if unintentional clumsiness, for human food.

Our breakfast bacon on the hoof may still be living when it is plunged into boiling water to scald the bristles off. Cattle may be hammered on the skull till they drop, and shellfish are put into cold water which slowly comes to the boil. Women who put warm coats and even shoes on their dogs in wintry or muddy weather, will buy a fur coat that has been produced by a torturous living death, without a thought other than that the coat looks swell and will make that next-door woman look envious.

There is an appealing amount of cumulative torture in the trappings of wild animals. It is common knowledge that an animal caught only by one foot will chew its leg off to escape. Many die painful and lingering deaths before the trapper comes along, perhaps a week later, to club them out of misery. If men and women saw how some of their fur coats are obtained, they would wear only cloth materials.

What the Humane Association aims at are traps that will catch without inflicting pain, or kill outright.—Stratford Beacon - Herald.

Definite Signs Are Found in Organic Heart Disease

A professional boxer motoring to a city 250 miles distant to take part in a bout that same evening was involved in a motor accident which overturned his car into the ditch. He was unhurt but somewhat shaken up. When examiner by the Athletic Commission physician he was 'shaky' and nervous and the physician refused to permit him to box owing to the condition of his heart. After a conference with another physician he finally was allowed to box but he was so upset about being rejected by the first physician that he boxed very poorly and lost the decision. He decided he would retire from boxing.

Arriving home he consulted his own physician and told him his story and his decision to retire. After listening patiently, his physician explained that the automobile accident had caused shock from which he had not recovered when examined by the Commission physician. After a careful examination he advised him that his heart was now absolutely normal and that he would never be rejected again unless he continued to worry about his heart. He resumed training and three months later won the championship of his class.

When an individual is upset and becomes worried about his heart, the emotional disturbance may actually upset the rate and the rhythm of the heart beat which, with a slight breathlessness due to nervousness or worry, gives some of the symptoms of an organic heart ailment.

When an organic condition of the heart is present the physician will find definite signs and symptoms. Thus Dr. A. G. Gibson, in Medical Record, says

"When organic disease of the heart (enlargement of the heart); not much reserve power (heart a long time getting back to its normal rate after exercise); blood pressure—systolic and diastolic—high; and organic murmurs can neither be found nor definitely suspected, then some reason—emotional—should be sought. In these cases tacchycardia (fast heart rate) of 120 beats to the minute, at the beginning of the consultation, may be 100 at the end, and a little exercise instead of increasing the rate may lower it.

The thought then is that rather than worry or wonder about your heart, you should undergo examination. The examination by exercise, use of Xray (fluoroscope), electrocardiograph machine, and other methods, will definitely show that you have, or have not, true or organic heart disease.

I.O.O.F. ATTENDS DIVINE SERVICE ON ANNIVERSARY

Members Addressed by Rev. R. E. Newman of Holloway St. Church

BAND LEADS PARADE

"Your order was born to meet the need of others and like the religion of Jesus Christ is based on such principles, to help the discouraged and those in distress," stated Rev. R. E. Newman at the 120th anniversary of the inception of the Independent Order of Oddfellows as that order and kindred societies attended their annual divine service at Holloway Street United Church Sunday morning.

Paraded by the Belleville Municipal Band, led by Lieut. Fred Jobson, members of the Rebekah Quintena No. 33, Cantons No. 8, with George Cornish as Captain and the two local I.O.O.F. lodges, Belleville No. 81 and Mizpah No. 127 paraded from the I.O.O.F. Temple to divine service and return, with R. Goodfellow as Marshal.

After welcoming the visiting lodges, Mr. Newman outlined the institution of the I.O.O.F. "Your Order was formed in Manchester, England, in 1814, the first lodge in America being opened at Baltimore, the Washington Lodge in 1819, thus today we are celebrating the 120th anniversary of your order on this continent.

Order Non-Partisan

"Your order was born to meet the need of helping those in distress and the discouraged, on the basis of the religion of Our Saviour. Your order is non-sectarian, as was the religion of Jesus, which was filled with non-sectarianism. Your order is also non-partisan and we need more of that spirit of brotherhood in Canada today," remarked Rev. Newman.

"Every member of your order must believe in a Supreme Being. There are 1,500,000 Oddfellows, who believe this and who are supposed to uphold the belief in God, which is for the common good of humanity.

"We can't live without God, through the teachings of Jesus Christ, who taught us to serve God, thy neighbor and thyself. The teachings of your order are ideal, based on the Golden Rule, which should be our ideal and objective if we hope to attain a high standard and noble position" stated the speaker as he referred to the color emblems of the I.O.O.F., white for friendship, blue for love and red for truth. The speaker continued with parables to exemplify his words, relating the story of the Good Samaritan, upon which the principles of the I.O.O.F. are based.

"The lodge room is not your home, country or church. It can never take their place and there is no greater revelation of God than through Jesus Christ, therefore I urge you to be worthy brothers for the price He paid for the world," concluded Rev. Newman, who took the 27th verse of the 1st chapter of James as his text.

During the service the Holloway Street Church male quartette, consisting of Messrs Cordes, Anglin, Elarby and Atkinson, sang "Beautiful Threads of Gold", by Towner, while, during the offertory an organ and piano duet, "Serenata" by Moszkowski, was given with Mrs. Hubbs at the piano and Wm. Connor, M.A., at the console of the organ.

WHY LET "CHEAP" PAINT SPOIL YOUR HOME?

Painting may be paid for out of income through a Home Improvement Loan. Your Painter will arrange the details.

Only the best is good enough for YOUR home — "cheap" paint is made with substitutes for Pure White Lead in Oil. "Cheap" paint cracks, chips or peels soon after it is applied, colours fade, appearance is ruined — surfaces are endangered.

Pure White Lead in Oil is unsurpassed by any other painting material yet discovered. It has more than twice the life of "cheap" paint. The tough, elastic film of Pure White Lead in Oil does not crack or flake.

TRAFFIC OFFICERS CHECK PERMITS

Those Not in Possession of Same Will be Summoned

"We found conditions slightly better in the matter of possession of individual operator's licences," stated Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine today following an all-day check of the possession of 1939 driver's licences made by Motorcycle Patrol Officers Ervine of Belleville and Caldwell of Trenton along highway No. 2 yesterday.

Taking a stand in the vicinity of the Belleville Cemetery the two officers made a thorough check-up of all motorists passing. Several delinquents were found and summonses will be subsequently issued them to appear in police court on charges of failing to procure their 1939 operator's licences and failing to produce the same, when driving upon the King's Highway.

During the course of their check-up the Officers apprehended Victor Headdy, of the Trenton Air Base, on charges of operating a motor car with defective brakes. The officers "flagged Headdy down" as he approached from the west. In attempting to stop Headdy's car went a considerable distance down the highway, striking a mail box post, breaking the post off at the base.

Subsequent investigations revealed to the officers, that the brakes of the vehicle were inefficient and defective. A Trenton tow truck towed the vehicle to a Trenton garage, where it was held by police until the brakes had been remedied. Subsequent check-ups on motor licences will follow, the two officers warned.

Will Inspect Canadian Building With Prime Minister

TO ORGANIZE CANADIAN WOMEN FOR DEFENCE

A movement to egister all Canadian women for defence service in case of an emergency, was announced by Miss Margaret Hyndman, K.C. in Toronto. The plan, similar to England's A.R.P. (air raid precautions), was not initiated by the federal government but has the support of that body, according to Miss Hyndman. According to present plans a survey will be made of available woman-power in all provinces but Quebec. The proposed registration will be entirely voluntary. Senator Cairine Wilson (upper left); Mrs. George Black, M.P. (upper right); Mrs. George Drew, wife of Ontario's Conservative leader (lower left); Senator Iva Campbell Pallis (lower right), and Mrs. Mitchell F. Hepburn, wife of Ontario's Premier (inset), have been asked to form a provisional committee for the organization.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.
(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Allergic to Boredom

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The other day at a friend's house, I saw some books you recommended to a would-be writer. I've forgotten their names, and the girl who had them wasn't overly cordial about lending them to me. I'd like to write, and think that I've had more experience in life than this girl, and would be better at the writing game than she would.

I'm bored to death with housekeeping, taking the children to school every day, escorting them home again at three o'clock. I'm tired of studying about vitamins, seeing that the family is provided with balanced rations. My husband is kind but dull, and we haven't enough money to entertain. If I have friends in to dinner, it means extra work.

Bored

Sure I'll send you the names of the books, but there is no guarantee you'll be a successful writer after studying them. After a while I think you'd be as thoroughly bored with the "writing game" as you are with keeping house and the monotony that goes with it. There are probably a million women who'd be glad to change places with you, and who wouldn't be bored to tears by vitamins, balanced rations, escorting children to and from school or even the dull husband. With you, it's the case of the far hills looking greenest. If you put more spirit into your homemaking, become interested in the development of your children, and realize that the dull husband is doing his best, I believe you'll be happier.

Fed Up With His In-Laws

Dear Miss Fairfax:

When we were first married we went housekeeping, but my wife became ill and I broke up my home to live with her parents, and stored our furniture. And believe me, I'm sorry I did this for I am sure fed up on my in-laws. We had a quarrel, and she told not only her mother about it, but also mine.

I got sick over it and sent for her, but her mother wouldn't let her come to me, and said, as my wife was only 20, she was still her daughter's boss. We have a boy six months old, which complicates things.

And now my wife's people are moving into the country, and that means I'll have to go with them if our marriage is to continue. I'm wondering if I should rent a house, take my furniture out of storage, in the hope she will return, or whether I'd better get a divorce.

Don't Know What to Do

It seems to me, in the interests of that six months old son, that you and your wife should try to compose your kid quarrels and make up, and that the in-laws should keep out of it. Granted that your wife is only 20, why should she be bossed by her mother? Better have an understanding with your wife as to her plans, before you start solo housekeeping.

Random Thoughts on Being a Successful Hostess

To give a successful and delightful party, it is not so much the budgeting of money that counts, as the budgeting of taste.

When you plan your party, leave nothing to chance . . . . and leave nothing to a last minute rush.

Genius in giving a party is like genius in anything else . . . "the infinite capacity for taking pains."

One of the most brilliant hostesses I know, my ideal of a hospitality "perfectionist", after she has given a party studies it and analyzes it. With pencil and note-book she sits down and tries to figure out what details were short of perfect, and how her next party can, with a bit more attention to certain details, more nearly approach perfection. Being willing to take the trouble to be an excellent hostess makes for successful parties. The greatest artist is always working to improve his or her technic.

It's a comfort to remember, in these days of decreasing budgets and limited service, that simple meals are smarter than fancy ones. Some of the most amusing parties given nowadays are given on shoestring, and we have more fun at the parties than we do at those that unnecessarily strive to be elaborate.

For the small-budget and no-service party, the wise hostess knows that the buffet party is the triumphant solution.

No matter what kind of party she is giving the imaginative hostess dramatizes as much as possible her table setting. Her linen and china and glass may be of the most simple and inexpensive kind, but she sets her table with an air and a flair.

Consider your guests . . . in relation to each other, not in relation to your obligations to them. There is nothing more disastrous to successful entertaining than an uncongenial assemblage of guests. As you are considering your prospective guests, keep asking yourself . . . . "Would they enjoy coming to the same party?" If you think primarily and always of your guests' pleasure you will have gone a long way toward being a successful, even a brilliant, hostess.

Get the dinner-party rehearsal habit. Work up one or two simple but perfect menus, and try them in your family, with every detail of preparation and service just as you are planning for the real party. There's nothing like this idea to give you confidence.

Activity is Best Way To Cure Beauty Ills

VIRGINIA GREY

Get plenty of fresh air, sunlight and exercise

By HELEN FOLLETT

YOUNG muscles are elastic and lithe. It it the impulse of youth to dash about, be active. Circulation is on the gallop, appetite is keen, sleep sound. Activity is the law of life and somebody should tell the older lazy girls more about that.

Little Stay-in-the house is doing herself an injustice. If she doesn't get fresh air, sunlight and exercise, she will have plenty of beauty griefs. The complexion will lack coloring, the figure will lose youthful lines she will acquire the settled appearance. By the time she is 30 she will be muscle-bound, which means that she will not walk in glory like the night, but will be stiff and awkward.

If she doesn't like to walk, has no interest in outdoor sports, she should have her ten-minute workout daily. Let her hold a cane crosswise of her body, keep her feet close together, squat slowly, place the cane on her knees; then up on her toes, lifting the cane above her head. Yes, there may be an upset. What's that in the cause of beauty?

This exercise will normalize the calves and thighs, and have a beneficial effect upon the fibres of the arms and chest. Good fun. The whole family should do it; it will keep them in form.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

Poke a bonnet back of your forehead if it is young and smooth. The new bonnets are eye-catching worn by the right young faces, of course. A crisp model is in white waffle pique with streams of navy picot ribbon and a veil.

Designed for a daytime or a dinner length skirt is a fine, tuck-front dinner skirt, its narrow collar finished by a tailored self-bow. Comes in silk chiffon in lovely colors.

Make way for the navy green that is the newest color sponsored by Molyneux. In some lights it looks more black than not, but actually it has a deep green cast, a sort of pine shade. It is lovely with touches of white. Navy green soft woollen is used for a handsome suit with a high, snug cummerbund setting of the pleated skirt. The tiny bolero fastens with gilt balls.

Just the thing for Spring is a lovely nightie with matching robe. The gown is of silk sheer in a tiny flower print and has a low V-neck, shoe lace shoulder straps and a high, molded waist. The full length coat is of matching print, but in satin, and has tiny puffed sleeves. It closes at the waist with tiny self-covered buttons. Brides will adore it.

Young things go mad over a new dinner outfit. It consists of a high-waisted skirt done in an exotic silk print and a diminutive angora sweater in a pale pastel version of one of the colors in the print, worn with gypsy coin jewelry.

Interesting indeed is the new dinner pajama designed by Bruyere, famous for her coat creations. The trousers are so full that they are almost two skirts. Comes in soft satin or crepe held at the waist by a wide pigskin belt studded with square brass nail heads. Wide shoulders extend into tiny cap sleeves. Soft pleats on collarless, V-neck bodice.

Experts Pack Queen's Wardrobe For Trip

(By Edwin Johnson)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 24—(CP Cable)—The important business of packing the Queen's wardrobe for the Canadian tour has begun in earnest at Buckingham Palace.

Under direction of the Queen's dresser, Miss Catherine Maclean, a small staff of experts will be busy for the next ten days wrapping and folding the delicate fabrics of scores of gowns and ensembles and fitting small hats in special boxes.

Not since the transportation of Queen Mary's Durbar gowns to India have such luggage problems been encountered. Special trunks are being used to ensure that fragile whale-boned crinolines are not crushed and that other apparel will withstand the rigors of the long journey.

Revive Old Fashion

When the Queen arrives in North America she will revive fashions for one-collar schemes and ensembles in shaded tones of the same color, with white fox favored for trimming. Similar fur trims many of her evening wraps.

Blues will predominate in the Queen's daytime clothes although there will be lilac shades and greys. One pastel blue day ensemble has a lavish white fox fur collar. Grey and navy have been banned as colors the Queen regards as unsuitable for her.

Some of the evening gowns are white and beautifully embroidered. Wild rose pink is another of her evening colors.

Tulles and satins, mostly white make up the Queen's crinolines. Some are richly embroidered in gold, others in silver, all her skirts for evening wear just sweep the ground.

On more formal occasions the Queen will wear a diamond circlet—the base of her crown—but otherwise she has not decided on evening headdress.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Child's Mental Capabilities

Mental development in children is so difficult to observe accurately that parents are often baffled. They see the child growing out of his clothes; every few months he seems an inch taller. They can see that, for their is something by which they can compare. But there is very, very little by which they can measure mental development.

Just as is the case with the physical, the mental processes usually increase in activity during the adolescent period. There may not be any sudden, noticeable mental jump at adolescence, but physical growth is so rapid then that parents often choose this time to give special study to the child's mental growth.

In recent years—say, the past twenty—psychologists have learned a great deal about these things. They have evolved all sorts of tests to measure the intelligence quotient. Some claim that they now can tell at an early age how far a child is able to advance mentally.

Whether these tests are any good or not I don't know, for they aren't in my line. But I do know that it is important to discover early in life—just as early as possible—whether a child is mentally slower or quicker than the average.

If he is definitely slower in school, then it is a mistake to send him to classes with children of average mentality. If you do that, he plods on, taking two terms to absorb what the others do in one. Worst of all, because of this experience, he develops an inferiority complex that retards him still further. He gets to the point where he takes it for granted that he is not as smart as the others.

It is much better to take the backward child and put him among others of the same mental capacity where he will get equal treatment and derive a feeling of equality.

This backwardness may just be temporary. However if parents should find that their child is definitely below the average mentally, they should realize what it means, for they will then have to give up, or at least change the ambitions they had for the child's future. Rather than force him on in school toward a profession they would like him to enter, they should realize that he can never reach this high goal. After all, it is his own happiness that is most important, and such a child will in all likelihood be much happier working at a vocation he can master.

Even when parents have satisfied themselves that their child is normal, their responsibility doesn't stop there. They do well to make sure that the child isn't in a school group which is lower in intelligence than himself. When this happens, and it sometimes does, the child has to wait for the other children. While they are being taught more slowly than he needs to be, he could be learning more advanced courses.

Parents will usually find that school teachers are only too willing to help them with the child, whether he be better than average intelligence or not.

W.C.T.U.

The annual business meeting of the W.C.T.U. met at the Y.M.C.A. building on Friday, Mrs. Andrew Sharpe presiding and Mrs. (Dr.) Moore at the piano. The meeting was opened with the hymn "Stand up for Jesus". Prayer was offered by some of the members, Mrs. Baker and Mrs. Coulson making special prayers for all enemies of "Peace and Righteousness". Mrs. Cooke read the Scripture, after which the "Crusade Hymn" was sung.

A few changes however, were made in their manner of serving, the most encouraging feature being that Mrs. (Dr.) Moore consented to hold the office of President for the coming year. The report of corresponding secretary, Mrs. McMartin called forth a standing vote of thanks for letters she had written to and received from leaders in Parliament re sweepstakes and Sabbath observance.

IF CHALLENGED

result of war. It would certainly perish as a result of Nazi-ism triumphant beyond the borders of the country of its birth. To whatever ideology a people may submit itself, that is its own concern. But when that ideological system is imposed on other free countries, that is the concern of all free men.

Will Answer Challenge

"And now we know that should the challenge come, we shall be there. In Luther's words, 'we can no other.' We were there when the Spanish galleons made for Plymouth. We were on those bloody fields in the Netherlands when Louis XIV aimed at the domination of the world. We were on duty when Napoleon strode the world like a demi-god and we answered the roll call, as you did, in August, 1914. We can no other. So help us God."

In a contest between democracy and tyranny, the dictators "start with solid advantages," Earl Baldwin said. They could impose beliefs and demand obedience to a creed which roused the baser nature of man.

Win in Long Run

The advantages of democracy lay not primarily in the realm of organization but in the very nature of freedom. "The free man can win, if not in the short, then in the long run. But warfare in the air, as I have said many times, has revolutionized the problem. There would be no long run for those who are unprepared.

Conditions of the struggle between might and right had changed, although the nature of the issue had not. Today no blood needed to flow.

"Plans can be prepared in secret and applied overnight for the enslavement of a whole nation and for the swift incarceration of its leaders by the hundred or by the thousand as required. All this we have seen in Europe in 1939."

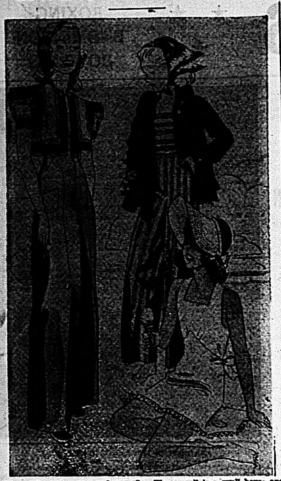
SMART AS MOTHER'S



Why wait on the sand and waves? The overall is a swell house and backyard garment for youngsters three years and up.

By Irunella Wood

The youngest school child knows that when Daddy starts on holidays beach and play clothes will be included in the luggage. Mother's concentrating on wardrobes for outfitting the entire family, thus getting one big problem off her mind.

An attractive get-up for the adolescent is sketched on the left, a yellow desert cloth overall topped by a gypsy-striped bolero and attached hood. Small fry aren't inclined to be bothered with sunshades, which get in their way, but will take kindly to this suggestion for protecting their hair.

The centre costume combines another overall of multi-color seersucker and a Shirley Temple style of jacket with cuffed pocket and wooden beads. It's cute as can be, and laundering is practically nil. It comes in sizes three to twelve.

The waffle pique play frock over romper bloomers, right, very much like mother's, comes with the matching sunbonnet visor, in white.

New Accessories for the Home Have Both Beauty and Utility

By Eleanor Ross

THERE ARE lots of interesting ideas and novelties in accessories and appointments for the home in the new showing of the Merchandise Mart. The manufacturers contributing to the show seem to have put more effort and ingenuity than ever into their products this year, and the pretty hasn't been neglected in favor of the practical, so beauty and utility go hand in hand.

We liked so much the new version of the whistling tea kettle. The new kettle is fashioned of heat-proof glass and can be cleaned in a jiffy by going-over with a clean cloth. Because glass is non-porous, no flavor from the tea-kettle can ever be detected.

The line of glass skillets, glass double-boilers and glass percolators is getting bigger each season. Especially nice are the glass double boilers, most helpful for the cook who is a novice at the game.

In Dining Room

And in the dining room there are new ideas, too. Cellophane ferns for use as table ornaments have excited a lot of attention from store buyers and are being promoted as something new for dining table centrepieces. The new horticultural specimens have crinkly fronds in red, blue, green, pink or yellow, and they ensemble beautifully with any setting. Also in cellophane are the new flower pot holders that are designed to fit over the rough clay pot in which your plant is delivered from the florist.

Lamp Novelties

There are plenty of novelties in the new lamp collections, too. We were interested in the lamps designed for the game or rumpus room, lamps with a distinctly sporty motif. For instance, there's a lamp that has a nail-studded dog collar for the lamp base and a twisted dog leash for the stand. The parchment shade of the lamp is hand-painted with dogs of various breeds. It's a swell gift for the dog lover, or for the owner of a kennel and nice for a garden room or porch, too. Other versions of these game room lamps include a ski-pole lamp and a horse-shoe lamp.

The ski lamp has an authentic bamboo pole, colored a brilliant red, with trimming and thong tying in white leather. The shade is parchment with skiing figures. The equine lamp has a real horseshoe at the base, and on the shade is a sketch of gallant "Man-o'-War" with Earl Sande up. Both floor lamps and table lamps are included in this very new sports lamp line, and we think that men especially are going to be very appreciative of a lamp of this type.

It's Not too Early to Launch Your Campaign Against Moths

By ELEANOR ROSS

It isn't a bit too soon to start that campaign against moths. The annual safety and prevention plans must be carried out before the invasion starts. All barricades must be up before the innocent-looking insect arrives, for once he curls up in your wool bathrobe or in the nice deep upholstery of that overstuffed sofa or chair, and starts to raise a family, there's usually little chance to do anything but patch up the pieces that remain.

Despite all the scientific helps, compounds and such, the first line of defense against the pesky moth is still cleanliness. Spots and stains are the tempting morsels that larvae prefer to feast on, leaving nice wide open spaces in the fabric where soiled spots used to be. How those larvae love to lap up grease. So it is only after clothing and household furnishings have been thoroughly washed or dry-cleaned that the second line of defense comes charging into action.

The Preparations

By that we mean the camphor balls, the powders, the crystals, the tablets, the compounds and other moth-proofing preparations. If placed with spotless, grease-free articles in closed containers, these substances can be counted on to discourage further invasion. But no amount of mouth-repellent will do a scrap of good if eggs or larvae remain. Which explains why so many housewives speak in angry or disgusted tones about moth-repellents, for they can keep moths away from clean garments, but they can't do anything about the eggs or larvae present in garments that are not free of dirt and grease.

Clothing that cannot be washed—coats, suits and such things—should be sent to the dry cleaner, or at least brushed thoroughly and hung out-of-doors for several hours in the sun and air. Trouser pockets should be turned inside out and thoroughly brushed, the same for all coat and dress pockets. Washable clothing and household furnishings that are to be stored away should be put into the laundry without more ado. Dresses, underwear, blankets, mittens and scarfs will benefit by a plunge into soapy water, even though no spot or stain is detectable.

Sprinkle the things with a patent preparation in which you have faith, store them away and your worries should be over, no matter how many moths may flutter around the living room lamp. For against these twin bulwarks of defense—cleanliness and the odors of napthalene and similar products—they will beat their wings in vain.

Study of Starches Reveals Variations

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

IMPORTANT practical work, checked by scientific standards, is being done on the value of various foodstuffs and methods of cooking them as it affects their digestibility. There is a common belief that imported starches, such as arrowroot, tapioca and sago, because of their greater digestibility, are superior to the domestically-produced starches derived from our own corn wheat and rice grains.

The work of Day on the digestibility of cooked starches from various sources indicates that the factors influencing digestibility are substances known as rose and blue amylose. In the course of cooking apparently rose amylose is changed to blue amylose. This is the chemical change that makes cooked starches more readily digested and absorbed. There is more rose amylose in wheat, corn, rice and barley starches and relatively little in potato, arrowroot, tapioca and sago.

Takes Two Hours

It requires about two hours to change the rose amylose into blue amylose so a shorter cooking time is required to render potato, arrowroot, tapioca and sago, digestible. However, the difference is more theoretical than real because the greater appetizing effect of cooked corn and cereal offsets the question of cooking time.

Other experiments in which not only the length of time it took for digestion in the stomach to occur but also intestinal digestion and absorption, would indicate that corn wheat and rice flours are more completely digested than potato and the other starches noted.

The most rapidly-absorbed starch of all is the simple sugar, glucose, and, according to A. C. Roberts, who made "a study of the speed absorption of glucose", it enters the blood stream much more rapidly than any other type of carbohydrate and as an energy food would thus be the most efficient of all.

In cases where there is a sensitive digestive tract, in convalescent and other states, the exhibition of glucose as an energizer has good theoretical reasons for its use. In any such considerations the study should take into account not only the food itself but also the consumer, and the state of mind and physical health of the human individual is just as important as the food itself.

For a healthy individual we may assume that any vegetable starch cooked to his taste will be as efficient as any other, but these studies do indicate that the popularity of the potato and of corn has some sort of experimental scientific basis.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

J. L.—"I would like some information on neuralgia. What is the cause of neuralgia? Would it affect the entire side of one's head, causing headache, making the eye extremely sore, sore cheek bones, sore teeth?"

Answer—What you are describing is probably tic-douloureaux, or trigeminal neuralgia. Probably the best treatment for this is injection of the nerve, which can be done by an experienced physician. The use of trichlorethylene, which is a volatile liquid, by inhalation has been successful in many cases.

Daily Eye Wash Is Not Necessary

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

THE EYE needs no treatment to keep it healthy if it is already healthy. I mean that a daily eye wash is unnecessary. The eye wash is unnecessary. The eye washes itself, with a constant flow of a neutral lubricating fluid secreted by the lachrymal, or tear, glands. The fluid is slightly antiseptic and prevents the growth of germs under ordinary circumstances. It washes out or dissolves all sorts of dust and foreign matter which naturally gets into the eyes on account of their constant exposure to the air.

To put drops in the eyes at night or in the morning, or to use an eye cup to wash them when there is nothing the matter, is not only unnecessary but positively likely to bring on trouble as the eye wash probably weakens the defenses.

Defenses Break

The eye, however, as we say, is constantly exposed to irritation and infection, and sooner or later, in all of us, the defenses break down and it succumbs. There is hardly any human being who has not once had a case of pinkeye, or at least irritation of the lids with some little gummy secretion in the morning.

When these minor irritations occur, it is then time to use the boric acid—a saturate solution —either dropped in the eye with a medicine dropper or used in an eye cup. The eye cup should be nearly filled with the solution. Lean over at your washstand, press the eye firmly into the eye-cup, then throw the head back, and with the eye-cup held partly by suction, open and shut the eyelids rapidly four or five times until the eyeball is completely cleansed. The boric acid should cause no pain or discomfort, but on the contrary should be soothing.

Infections along the lids, consisting of small hair follicle infections, hardly big enough to be called styes, are annoying and should be treated with a ten per cent solution of alcohol gently brushed over the edge of the lid with a camel's hair brush. An old, reliable remedy for this is ointment of the yellow oxide mercury, standard strength. Many oculists, however, think this old remedy is ineffective and prefer ointment of zinc sulphate.

In conjunctivitis, which is the stylish name for pinkeye, for an acute form, the latest advice is that we can save six to eight days of discomfort by using one-half per cent solution of zinc sulphate. Boric acid is too weak in these cases and argyrol, a favorite remedy, in the solution of ten per cent has comparatively little effect in cases of acute conjuncivitis. Methylene blue in very concentrated solution is effective, but should be used only by an expert oculist.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

V.D.—"I would like to know if you could tell me a cure for granulated eyelids. In the morning a scab or crust is formed over them. I wash them, but this only makes them red and bad looking."

Answer—The chances are that this might be a case of trachoma, in which event you certainly should consult a good oculist. Ordinary granulated eyelids clear up with the use of a weak solution of methylene blue and painting the edges of the eyelids with a ten per cent alcohol solution.

F.K.—"I would greatly appreciate your advice on the efficacy of liver injection by hypodermic for secondary anemia."

Answer—If the diagnosis is correct and it is really secondary anemia, iron is better than liver extract.

Go anywhere and the chances are that you will run into these shirtwaist dinner dresses A beauty of a dress has a wide pleated skirt of deep cyclamen chiffon while the tucked shirtwaist blouse is of chiffon in pale cyclamen. Moonstone buttons and cufflinks lend interest.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Let's Be Pro Canadian

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been in love with the same girl for six years. I've actually loved her since I was a kid, but someone or something always caused trouble. Her family would always try to keep her away from me, though I was consistently a gentleman in my dealings with her and her family.

The school we both attended had a dance, and while she had turned me down several times before I again asked her if she'd go with me, but she refused. Another boy asked her and she accepted. I am of foreign descent, and believe my girl's family may not like my nationality and object to me on this account. I'd like to know if you have any suggestions.

Very Unhappy

You're Canadian born, and it seems to be silly, to say the least, for a family to hold these grudges. Whatever the country, from which your ancestors came, may be doing at the present time, not always were they ruthless. Your ancestors' country has a magnificent cultural history. And please remember that dictators are not immortal.

As you've cared for this girl so many years, don't you think it would be well to wait and see if she will not be patient and wait till her family becomes more reasonable.

A Broken Promise

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I became acquainted with a young man through my girl friend and liked him immensely. He asked me twice for a date, but each time I had another engagement so could not accept. Recently I was invited to a house party and asked to bring a friend, and he accepted my invitation and we had a wonderful time. On the way home he said he'd call me the next day, and then on his first evening off we'd go to the theatre, and to a dance the following Saturday.

I haven't heard from him since. Now my problem is—how shall I meet the situation when I do hear from him or meet him?

Bernice

Unless the young man has a very good excuse to offer for failing to call you up or to keep any of these engagements, I'd go slow in restoring him to favor. Young men sometimes are too sure of themselves, because girls spoil them so. And this makes them feel at liberty to break "dates" without going through the formality of making an excuse, fictitious or otherwise.

Dr. Dafoe's Column on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Parents Should Set Time For Inoculation When Baby is Born

I believe sincerely that every baby should be toxoided. To prove I mean this, let me tell you that we toxoided the Dionne Quintuplets. They didn't seem to mind it either.

We gave them a small injection, waited three weeks, gave them another and then three weeks later gave them their third injection. Not only did we give them injections, but we had pictures taken of the operation. These pictures showed the babies looking rather reproachfully at us as we used the needles on them. We had no bad reactions from these injections. In fact, the children weren't upset in the least. Believe me, if I hadn't been convinced that these injections were necessary as well as quite safe, they never would have been given to those five babies.

Toxoiding is best done during the child's first year of life, for several reasons. I've often told you before in these columns that a baby inherits a certain tendency to immunity to disease from his mother. That inherited immunity lasts for about six months or a year. So before the end of his first year, he should be toxoided in order that he will be protected when his inherited immunity wears off completely.

If adults were toxoided, there would be a small percentage who would have very sore arms for a few days. Some of us might even run a fever. But with young babies and children under the age of five, this isn't true. They don't get any swelling or soreness at all at the spot where the injection was given. Neither do they have any general reaction to the inoculation.

So I say this to you parents: when your baby is born, it is wise to set a time at which you will have him toxoided. This time is most satisfactory with normal children about the age of six months, I think.

This stamping out diphtheria has been a great boon to the medical profession, particularly the country doctor. For years I have gone into a home and had the unmistakable smell of diphtheria hit me as soon as I opened the sickroom door. I will always remember how my heart would sink when I got this odor. When you're out in the country, you haven't any laboratory handy to examine smears of the throat to see if the patient really has diphtheria so you have to develop other ways of finding out.

In past years when I found a case that even looked like diphtheria, I immediately filled that child with antitoxin. If I waited for a laboratory report to come in, then it might be too late and anyway, the only other thing it could be would be a bad case of tonsilitis. I found the injections helped this, too. Certainly, they didn't do it any harm.

In most cities, this toxoiding service is supplied free by the health department. You don't now what grief and suffering you may be saving yourselves and your children.

Making Your Own Clothes Now? Use Care in Choice of Fabrics

By HELEN FOLLETT

THERE'S a great frenzy on for home dressmaking. A nice idea it makes for domesticity. If girls can drive motor cars, fly airplanes, hold down good jobs, they ought to be able to turn out a frock for themselves now and then. It's fun.

Hence and therefore it appears timely to chime in a few words about fabrics. The choice of material to be used is all important. Let the little girl avoid heavy textures and large patterns they don't suit her. She looks best in materials of small designs. And she should avoid black, which will diminish her inches.

Velvet, the most royal fabric of all, should not be draped, neither should heavy brocades. Neither one calls for much decoration. Satins are inclined to be harsh in effect upon the face; softer fabrics are flattering. Intelligent choice of goods and design imparts chic, smartness.

There is the matter of color. Think that over carefully. See what it does to your skin, eyes, hair figure. This year has many new offerings; avoid those that are over popular. Look for richness of tone.

DO THE TOWN in smart colorful clothes. A nice suit is of sheer woollen in black, the short jacket having wide revers of pink faille. The blouse is of deeper pink chiffon with a big self bow at the neckline.

Looking ahead to summer we find that cross-barred organdie is due for a come-back since many

Pay Heed to Beauty Insurance Or Birthdays Will Catch You

By Helen Follett

TAKE OUT beauty insurance; the birthdays will catch you if you don't watch out. Arm yourself for the fight with Old Man Time. He doesn't do right by anybody. Attend to your beauty duty; don't be a slacker. On with the campaign for pulchritude.

Take a clean, creamed face to bed with you. Shake off make-up with a cleansing oil, use soap and water, then on with the fragrant emollient. Brush your hair because that's good for a lot of things that may all it in the future. Massage and oil your finger-nails. You can do all that in five minutes, ten at the most.

Stand tall all the time. If you let your muscles huddle they will lose youthful resilience. Exercise every day even if you hate to do more than flutter an eyelash. Get out-of-doors and hoof it. Don't indulge yourself by traveling in the family truck. Use your legs. Walking is an excellent exercise, has a good effect upon the complexion.

Eat wisely. Stop eating when you've had enough. Nearly all people eat too much. Drink plenty of water; it helps the organs of elimination—skin, intestines and kidneys—to function normally. Get eight hours' sleep every night even if you miss out on a few wild parties. Keep sweet. The last order is of prime importance.

The young face is given smooth, full contour by its firm underlying tissues. When health is impaired or the years have marched along, these tissues become impoverished. They soften. The skin falls into fine lines.

Massage, the free use of a heavy cream and plenty of cold water will have a vitalizing effect upon the facial fibres. Use the cream at night, in the morning have your cold water splashing.

When drying the face, cover the flattened hands with the towel, go patting upward with brisk movements. That practice is a beauty treatment in itself.

Feet should be tucked away neatly no matter how pretty they are. We all know the girl who sits in a low chair, crosses her knees, has one foot in the air for everybody to fall over, displays more leg area than makes for charm and modesty.

An ugly habit is resting the feet on the sides. A strain on the ligaments of the ankles, that practice, and the most horrid pose one can assume. The rule is to sit well back in the chair with no chest slump, to place the feet fairly close together on the floor or to cross the ankles. Any sort of pedal spread is gawky and ill-mannered. No sprawler will ever made the beauty grade.

GOOD MANNERS

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Notes for Brides

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

1—Is it correct for the bride to write notes as wedding invitations to her friends and relatives, or should her mother write such notes?

1—Can this be done rather than having engraved invitations?

3—In entertaining the bridal party at a tea or supper, should only the bridal party be present?

4—Should the minister and his wife and the organist be included in this party?

5—Is the organist paid?

6—If the reception is to be at home, is it proper to ask the bride's girl friends to serve the refreshments?

7—If so, should she give them a gift?

8—If the bride wears a long white dress, what should be worn on her head? Could white flowers and tulle combined be used?

9—Can a shoulder length veil be worn at an informal wedding by the bride?

10—Must the bride's corsage be all white, and where should it be worn?

11—If the bride is thus attired, is it correct for the groom to wear either a business suit, or white flannels and blue coat?

H.

1—The most appropriate form of invitation to an informal wedding is a note written by the bride's mother. It is proper too for the bride-elect herself to write these notes, but it does seem more suitable that these notes should be written by the bride's mother, since she is to be the hostess of the occasion.

2—If the wedding is to be formal, the proper thing is the written notes of invitation. Engraved invitations indicate that the wedding is to be formal.

3—When the wedding party is a large one, and a dinner is given in their honor, usually only the members of the wedding party are invited. But when there are so few members as you list in the wedding party, and a tea or supper is given, the number of guests may quite properly be increased.

4—It is not customary or necessary to invite the minister and his wife and the organist (unless the organist is a very close friend of the group in the wedding party) to this party.

5—It is my opinion . . . that the organist and soloist should be paid for their services. They are usually professionals, and as professionals they should be paid.

6—The bride's girl friend will be delighted to be asked to take care of the serving of the refreshments.

7—Although it would not be at all necessary to give gifts to these deputy-hostesses, it would be thoughtful of you to give each a little memento, or perhaps send each a simple corsage.

8—The type of head-dress that a bride should choose depends so much on her type that it is impossible for a stranger to suggest what would be most becoming and appropriate. She might like to wear a small, close-fitting hat, a bandeau of real or artificial flowers (real flowers are very much in fashion), or a combination of white flowers and tulle, as you suggest.

9—If you wear a formal long white bridal dress and a shoulder-length veil, your wedding will come into the formal classification.

10—Not necessarily. You might carry an old-fashioned bouquet of small flowers, or a cluster of colored roses or orchids.

11—If a bride wears a bridal dress and veil, the bridegroom should wear formal day clothes; cutaway coat, dark striped trousers and appropriate accessories.

Starting a Date Right

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

1—Should a gentleman precede a girl out of her own home when he has come to call on her?

2—Would it be correct for a girl to go out of the house, if she is ready, and join her friend who has come to get her without inviting him into the house?

R.

1—No. The man opens the door for the girl and follows her out.

2—The girl who is a good hostess invites the man to come into the house, even if she knows that he will decline because there "date" is elsewhere.

Wedding Attendants

Dear Mrs. Beeckman.

If a bride is to wear a formal wedding dress and bridal veil, does she necessarily have to have more than one attendant?

Jane

She may have as many as she wants.

Schoolboy Rowe of Tigers Back to Stay in American With Shutout Over Indians

Finest Comeback Seen in Sport in Many a Year

ARM DEAD IN 1937

Yanks Maintain Record of Not Being Beaten by Southpaw This Year

(By Judson Bailey, Associated Press Sports Writer).

His four-hit 8-0 shutout of Cleveland Indians as noble a comeback bid as sport has seen in many a year, didn't cause New York Yankees to lose sleep last night, but it certainly raised Detroit Tigers into consideration for a sport better than their fourth place of last year.

The big Texas righthander, who pitched Detroit to an American League pennant in 1934 and helped less spectacularly in their 1935 repeat, showed no trace of an arm ailment yesterday in his first appearance this season.

He struck out four and walked only one man. The hits he yielded were three scattered singles and a double. The effort fulfilled Detroit's fondest dreams.

Retired in 1937

Rowe's arm went dead in the spring of 1937 and after he worked in 10 games with no success, he retired from baseball and pathetically travelled up and down the country ferreting out any doctor, bonesetter, rubber or what-not anyone ever had heard of.

He failed to comeback last spring in four games with the Tigers, but had a moderately good year with their Beaumont farm in the Texas League. Now he looks like the hero of old. Incidentally, he contributed a triple and a single towards his team's rout of the Indians.

In contrast to Rowe's return was the rebuff received by Paul Dean, who also sought to come back yesterday for St. Louis Cardinals after losing his pitching feel in 1937 and spending most of last season in the Texas League trying to get it back.

Dean Belted Out

Dean was belted out of the box in the fourth inning by Chicago Cubs and charged with the 6-5 loss. He worked three scoreless innings on one hit before the Cubs crashed through with five hits and four runs in the fourth.

In the other National League games Harry Gumbert struck out 11 and permitted only one hit for six innings as New York Giants subdued Boston Bees 4-2; Cincinnati Reds took their second straight from Pittsburgh Pirates, 7-2, behind the six-hit pitching of Bucky Walters; and Philadelphia Phillies took another of their hair-raising exhibitions from Brooklyn Dodgers.

It was the Phillies third extra-inning game of the week-old season and little Heinie Mueller won it for them 5-4 by singling with the bases loaded in the 12th.

Yanks Maintain Record

New York Yankees maintained their record of not having lost to a lefthander (against whom they're supposedly weak) by knocking Ken Chase of Washington Senators out of the box in the fourth and going on to win 7-4. This victory and Cleveland's defeat returned the Yanks to the top of the American League.

Chicago White Sox amassed 19 hits, including four doubles by Marv Owen which tied a major league record, to wallop St. Louis Browns 17-4 and Philadelphia Athletics reared up with a six-run flurry in the eighth inning to decide a weird contest against Boston Red Sox 12-8. Each team used five pitchers.

Yankees Humbled

In Saturday's American League games Washington humbled the Yankees 3-1 and Boston Red Sox beat Philadelphia 5-2 while Cleveland won 2-1 over Detroit. St. Louis Browns drubbed Chicago White Sox 5-1.

In the National League the Cards shutout Chicago 9-0 and the Giants eked out a 6-5 win over Boston. Cincinnati turned back Pittsburgh 4-2 and Philadelphia rallied in the ninth to win 5-4 from Brooklyn.

GREENBERG GOING AFTER HOME RUNS

Detoit, Apr. 22 (CP) — Hank Greenberg, who said during spring training that base hits and runs driven-in were his objectives this reason, has changed his mind. The big first baseman of Detroit Tigers has decided that the public wants home runs and that's what he figures on giving it.

It wasn't altogether the roar the crowd here let out Thursday when Hammering Hank lifted the ball into the bleachers to win a 14-inning game from Chicago White Sox that changed his mind but that certainly helped. With No. 1 homer tucked away Greenberg has only 60 to go to beat Ruth's all-time record.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Lynwood Rowe, Tigers: Held Cleveland to four hits in first comeback attempt.

Henry Mueller, Phillies: Delivered single with bases full in 12th to beat Brooklyn.

Bucky Walters, Reds: Effective six-hit pitching beat Pittsburgh Pirates.

Ted Williams, Red Sox: His home run, double and two singles stood out boldly although Boston lost to Philadelphia Athletics.

Joe Marty, Cubs: Got second homer with one on base to help defeat St. Louis Cardinals 6-5.

Harry Gumbert and Burgess Whitehead, Giants: Former struck out 11 and gave only seven hits; latter tied common record with 11 assists in great fielding display at second base to beat Bees.

Marv Owen, Eric McNair and Mike Kreevich, White Sox—Owen equalled major league record with four doubles; McNair and Kreevich homered to account for seven of Chicago's 17 runs.

Jake Powell, Yankees: His single scored two runs and insured victory over Washington.

BOWLING TITLE WON 2ND TIME

Seagrams No. 2 Rolled 3,747 in the Team Event

Toronto, April 24 (CP)—A Toronto five-man team was the talk of the bowling alleys today after winning the Canadian Bowling Association's team championship for the second year in succession, setting a record without precedent.

Seagram's No. 2 squad rolled 3,747 points in the C.B.A.'s 13th annual tournament here Saturday night to gain the Grand Challenge trophy and $200 cash. To accomplish the feat they had to beat 314 team, many of them from outside points.

Another feature of the five-pin bowling classic was a tie for the grand aggregate award, first in the tourney's history. Joe Dostal of Brantford and E. Hawkes, Toronto, garnered 2,402 points apiece to share prize money of $40.

Doubles competing numbered 460 and singles 704. The doubles title went to Hamilton, Harold Cadman and Jimmy Morris having set a high of 1,630 Friday night that bowlers Saturday were unable to surpass. W. Brown of Toronto won the singles event with a score of 910 for three games.

Pears No. of Toronto took second money of $100 in the team play and Karry's of Ottawa, with 3,673 poins, placed third. Besides winning $75 they were awarded $40 for being the highest scoring out-of-town team.

Another of the few outside teams to share in prize money was one from Preston, awarded $25 for having the second highest total. They finished sixth with 3,207.

Up for the first time in competition since he was teeing off on Chicago Cub pitching last fall, walloping William connected with one of Lefty Grove's fast ones for a home run, one of the two runs his team was able to get in beating the highly-fancied Boston Red Sox 2-0.

ROYALS HOPING TO EVEN SERIES

Port Arthur Favored to End Series in Game Tonight

Montreal, April 24 (CP)— Port Arthur Bear Cats, on the road more than a month in their quest for the Allan Cup, hope to reach the end of the trail tonight in the fourth game of the best-of-five final against Montreal Royals.

Ahead two games to one, Bear Cats can win the Dominion senior amateur hockey title, and the Allan Cup, with another victory. The Ontario team won the first two games 6-5 and 3-1 and, although they dropped the third 6-4, are favored to end the series without further loss.

Royals, a stronger team than at any time in the playoffs, think they can stop the streamlined Lake Head club and force a fifth game Wednesday.

Coach Frank Carlin, who sent most of his charges to the Laurentian Mountains after a workout Saturday morning, said last night Royals would be in top form.

Both teams plan to start the same lineups as in the last game Thursday.

Largest crowd of the series is expected, which means 12,000 or more fans will crowd into the Forum. Standing room and rush end seats only were available today.

TORONTO LEAFS ATTAIN FIRST WIN OF SEASON

Divide Doubleheader With Baltimore Winning Last One 7-5

RED WINGS ON TOP

Rochester and Montreal Setting Pace in the International

(By The Associated Press)

In view of the notorious lack of success St. Lolis Cardinals and their "Chain Gang" had last season, there wasn't a great deal of attention paid to Rochester Red Wings in pre-season figuring of International Baseball League pennant possibilities.

But at the end of the opening half-week of the campaign, Rochester is tied for first place with the likewise-neglected Montreal Royals.

It was the Red Wings, belted out of the Governors' Cup playoffs by Newark's champions in 1938, who took the first crack at the Bears this season and won two out of three games. The Birds followed up yesterday with a 5-4 triumph over the well-liked Jersey City Giants.

Although the score was close enough to send 16,795 Jersey City fans home in a comfortable frame of mind, it was only a last-inning rally that made it that way. The Red Wings belted out Johnny Hubbell in seven innings with eight hits and four runs and continued against John Meketi. Dusty Cook set the pace with three singles.

Chiefs First Defeat

Montreal earned its share of the first-place tie by handing the Syracuse Chiefs their first defeat in three starts, 4-2, in a 10-inning mound duel between Bob Porter and Jake Mooty. Porter survived a bad first inning and hurled effectively to win out when Chris Hartje tripled in the tenth—the sixth hit off Mooty—behind a pass to Ben Sankey then scored the final run on Mooty's error.

Buffalo Bisons followed Rochester into Newark and outslugged the champs 7-5. They picked up their winning runs in the ninth after rookie John Tulacz had held the Bears to one hit in the last 5 1-3 innings and Ollie Carnegie, last year's home-run king, had belted the first Bison homer.

Leafs Broke Even

Baltimore and Toronto broke even in the season's first doubleheader. A 16-hit assault gave the Orioles the opener, 10-9, although Manager Jack Burns hit two homers for Toronto. The Maple Leafs came back to win 7-5 as three flingers held the home club to five hits while seven walks and some poor support spoiled a six-hit flinging by Tom Hughes, 18-year-old Baltimore rookie.

While Saturday's Toronto-Syracuse game was called off because of cold, the Baltimore Orioles won their first victory of the season 13-4 from Montreal and Newark downed Rochester 5-1. Jersey City defeated Buffalo 4-1.

AS BOSTON MARATHON ENDED

One athletic event that Canadians usually distinguish themselves in is the annual Boston marathon, won this year by Ellison (Tarzan) Brown unemployed Indian stone mason from Narragansett, Rhode Island, who set a new record in coming down in front. Brown is shown crossing the finish line, his skin glistening in the rain, one of the accompaniments distance runners frequently run into. Shown in the inset is Walter Young, Verdun, Quebec policeman seen as he finished in third place, leader of the Canadian entrants, four of whom finished in the first 10. Young wo the event in 1937.

Everton is assured of the championship of the top division in English soccer football league circles for 1939. Although defeated 2-1 by Charlton on Saturday, the Wolverhampton Wanderers were held to a escoreless tie by Bolton thus eliminating the Wolves from any possible chance of overtaking the leading Everton squad. The two leading squads each have two games to play, but the Wanderers are five points behind their Lancashire rivals, the leading Everton team, who can now win regardless as to the remaining results. The Raith Rovers, after only one season in senior Scottish football company, were relegated to the second division on Saturday. Next Saturday sees the annual classic—the English Cup final—between Wolverhampton Wanderers and Portsmouth. Although the Wanderers are slight favourites, the south of England is going up to Wembley Stadium prepared to back the Portsmouth squad to the limit.

In a test race prior to the Easter holiday season, when professional motorcycle racing annually swings into action in England, George Pepper, Belleville's gift to the "big time" of that thrilling sport, had a spill and narrowly escaped serious injury. However, he was able to race on Good Friday and finished second to one of England's premier riders. There was a large field included in the event. Only last week his parents had received word that George has tested the "bike" he assembled while visiting home last winter, and he was not only quite satisfied with its performance, but stated the machine by far excelled any performance he had expected. However, in a trial run prior to the Good Friday races George had a bad spill and for a time it was thought he had sustained serious injury. Fortunately, however, such was not the case and following some hasty repairs to his bike, George made a splendid showing in the opening day races. Providing he can obtain a suitable machine for road racing George will fly to the Isle of Man, where he will represent Canada in that event this year.

Asserting that the keystone sack will likely be the key position to pennant calculations this season, Sid Keener, sports editor of the St. Louis Star-Times, calls attention to the marked shortage in capable second base candidates at major league training camps this spring.

"Major league baseballers are confronted with a new mystery," writes Keener. "Managers, scouts, field sleuths and likewise club executives are unable to solve the cause for the current shortage of second base material.

"In the days gone by, a manager would sneak around to his backyard, shake a tree and presto — Napoleon Lajoie, Johnny Evers, Eddie Collins, Miller Huggins, Rogers Hornsby, Frankie Frisch, Stanle Harris, Tony Lazzeri and Billy Her man would drop to the ground.

"Second base seems to be the ke position to all pennant calculation for the big league clubs in trainin this spring. 'Gimme a second bas man and we'll challenge those Yankees', says the Cleveland Indians 'If we can plug that gap at secon base we may meet the Yanks in th World's Series next fall' moan several managers in the National League. Every time these manager and coaches look at the New Yor Americans, they shout this messag to Joe McCarthy: 'You're a luck guy, Joe.' They have Joe Gordon i mind.

Honoring their champions, the hockey fans of Boston tendered the champion Boston Bruins a testimonial banquet on the site where they won their second Stanley cup, the floor of the Boston Gardens, some 2,000 attending. In addressing the banquet President Frank Calder, of the N.H.L., stated the 1938-39 Bruins were the greatest team ever t perform in the big time. For some time Art Ross has publicized the fact his team was the greatest hockey machine he had even seen in his 37 years of hockey experience. President Calder substantiating this statement. Regarding the ability of Eddie Shore, Ross added—"Show me any one whose name is on the Stanley Cup who could come up to the standard of play which Eddie showed this past season—his 13th in the league. If you do I'll eat that old [illegible] quoth Ross, to which we add great mammoth 'amen.'

"While we don't think that tho of the present generation ever wi forget his contribution to baseball Charles Segar of the New Yor Daily Mirror, nevertheless, believ "that the late Col. Ruppert's identification with the growth of th game should be perpetuated changing the name of his ball par Let's recommend that hereafter shall be known as Ruppert Stadium.

The Royals and Bearcats resum their Allan cup feud tonight whe the Royals must win to remain the picture. A win for the Bearca will give them the honored mu The Goodyears lost good hard ca in this year's Allan Cup playdown and more recently the Port Arth club went into the red. Fortunate however, the sport-minded fans the upper end of the Great Lak came to the financial assistance the "Cats" with money in which tide them over until tomorrow. decade ago or so the Allan C finals was completed long befo sighting May Day. How the am teur puck moguls can expect prolong their series, make lo jumps during the playdowns come out with a bank balan hard to understand. We never a vocated the going back to ho and buggy days in any line sport, but in the Allan Cup ser of more recent years the govern could use a little more diploma in the matter and from more ang than that of finances.

"Shutout" Bill Lee Puts Some Major League Zipperoo on the 'Ball

An early-session pitching demonstration is given by Bill Lee, ace of Chicago Cubs' mound staff. Bill, who was quite prolific in hurling shutouts last year and was the spearhead of his team's late season drive to a pennant, is one of the big reasons the Cubs have been established as batting favorites for the flag again this year.

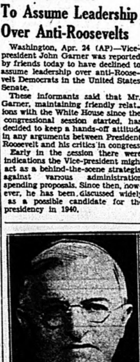
Garner Declines To Assume Leadership Over Anti-Roosevelts

Washington, Apr. 24 (AP)—Vice-president John Garner was reported by friends today to have declined to assume leadership over anti-Roosevelt Democrats in the United States Senate.

These informants said that Mr. Garner, maintaining friendly relations with the White House since the congressional session started, has decided to keep a hands-off attitude in any arguments between President Roosevelt and his critics in congress.

Early in the session there were indications the Vice-president might act as a behind-the-scene strategist against various administration spending proposals. Since then, however, he has been discussed widely as a possible candidate for the presidency in 1940.



MAY BECOME CARDINAL

Most likely successor to the late Cardinal Hayes as Archbsihop of New York is said to be Archbishop John T. McNicholas, ABOVE, of Cincinnati. According to reports from the vatican, Pope Pius XII will shortly name him for that position and later elevate him to the cardinalate at a public consistory in St. Peter's, the latter to take place late in May.

bone fractures. Doctors said they would be operated on today.

The men, with the exception of Rivard, were returning from a fishing trip to Whitefish Falls. Rivard entered the car just before the crash, having flagged it a mile from the scene of the accident when his own car ran out of gasoline. He expected to obtain the gas at Naughton, three miles farther on.

The crumbled car, its occupants jammed together so tightly they could not be moved immediately, was found by Harry Watson and T. Torvi of Sudbury, who drove up a few minutes after the crash.

LORD HALIFAX GOES WALKING WITH HIS FAMILY

FAMOUS BRITISH TRAIN ARRIVES AT WORLD'S FAIR

Having completed a tour of the United States, the famed British luxury streamliner, Coronation Scot, is shown as it arrived at the railroad station of the New York World's fair, where it will go on exhibition. Spectators were awed by the magnificent appointments of the crack train which averages 61.7 miles an hour on its regular run between London and Glasgow.

GRIGORE GAFENCU

Anglo-Rumanian cooperation to resist further aggression in Europe by Germany and Italy.

M. Gafencu, who has an appointment with Prime Minister Chamberlain at the House of Commons this afternoon, was expected to tell Lord Halifax what Chancellor Hitler and Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop had to say when he met them in Berlin and to discuss British financial aid for Rumania to speed her rearmament.

Mr. Chamberlain was expected to make a statement in the House on the surprise return of Ambassador Sir Neville Henderson to Berlin. The Envoy left unexpectedly for the German capital yesterday. He had been called home March 28 to report on Germany's annexation of Czecho-Slovakia.

Gives Use to Conjecture

Sir Neville had not been expected to go back until after Hitler's reply Friday to President Roosevelt's peace message, and his earlier departure gave rise to a wave of conjecture. Some believed he had "special instructions" to emphasize that Great Britain planned no "encirclement" of the Rome-Berlin axis as the Germans have charged, but in informed quarters it was said the Ambassador was not carrying any special message to Hitler.

Sources close to the government stressed that Sir Neville's return did not mean a modification of British plans to resist aggression in Europe. In fact, conversations aimed at strengthening the Anglo-French alliance continued in London and Moscow.

Probably British Loan

The Rumanian Foreign Minister, who arrived yesterday, also was to meet Oliver Stanley, President of the Board of Trade, to talk over the expected British loan to Bucharest in which probably £2,000,000 or £3,000,000 ($9,400,000 or $14,100,000) will be granted for rearmament.

The cabinet was called to hear the budget plans of Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer. The greatly increased cost of the territorial army and other financial needs will swell the budget so that it will be the biggest since the Great War. Increases in direct taxes have been predicted but informed sources believed unlikely another rise in the already severe income tax.

The cabinet also was expected to discuss conscription, a growing question mark in British politics. A number of members of parliament as well as the French government were reported to have urged the government within the last few days to introduce compulsory training.

TO CARRY MAIL OVER ATLANTIC

Flying Boats Ready to Inaugurate Service in Few Weeks

By EDWIN JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, April 22—(CP)— Lashed to the deck of the freighter S. S. Beaverford, two converted bombing planes are en route to Montreal for assembling as refuelling tankers for Imperial Airways Atlantic flying boats this summer.

The planes, twin-engined Harrow Monoplanes, will be reassembled at Fairchild Airport, Montreal, then flown to the Newfoundland airport at Botwood, intermediate fuelling base on the proposed route between Southampton and New York.

Four airmen who have undergone a special course of training in Sir Alan Cobham's refuelling school have also sailed to man the tankers. They will serve as crew under two former Royal Air Force officers, Flight-Lieutenant R. Atkinson, who will join the party later.

Flight Early in June

Trans-Atlantic operations will be launched shortly after Botwood harbor is free of ice, with prospects of the first flying boat taking-off early in June from the Shannon base in Ireland. According to present plans the service will operate at first on a regular weekly schedule, carrying mails only. Passenger service will not be inaugurated until a satisfactory flying schedule has been worked out.

Four air-liners of the Cabot class are now waiting on the river Medway, 50 miles from London, for the signal which will send them into the air on their trans-Atlantic adventure. Bearing the names "Imperial Cabot", "Clyde", "Connemara" and "Caribou" they are regarded as the last word in flying-boat efficiency. Four-engined and weighing 24 tons, they are capable of carrying 14,000 pounds on a flight of 1,000 miles from a ground take-off.

Mid-air Refuelling.

Through mid-air refuelling, however, their range is materially increased without reduction in payload.

Air refuelling is accomplished by means of a 200-foot rubber hose through which petrol flows from the tanker to the flying-boat at the rate of 120 gallons a minute. The operation is carried out while the aircraft are travelling at approximately 125 miles-an-hour. More than 1,000 gallons of petrol have been transferred in this manner in experimental tests at varying heights, often during unfavorable weather.

Sir Alan Cobham believes an around-the-world air service will ultimately become a reality. The idea he says, could be tried out by establishing mid-air refuelling bases at twenty strategic points along a globe circling route.

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss—lie awake and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and sleeplessness, headache, backache often follow. If you don't sleep well, try Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite remedy. 103

Butter Sales Slow Eggs are Steady

Toronto, Apr. 24.—Butter prices were shaded down as eggs and cheese maintained former levels during Saturday's short session of the Toronto open produce market.

The butter market drifted lower under lack of demand. There was no apparent selling pressure, but supplies were ample for requirements. It is reported that English buyers are showing little interest in Canadian butter at the present time, and although domestic prices have eased in the past week, the market generally remains above an export level. Saturday, Ontario creamery solids sold in small volume at 20¾c for No. 1 grades and 20c for 38 score. Some points were holding out for 21c for fresh receipts of the first grade product, while sales of regraded were reportd at ¼c discount from prices quoted.

A slightly firmer undertone appeared on the egg market, with reports that higher prices at Montreal were attracting shipments. Offerings moved well locally at previous prices. Graded shipments closed out the week at 20½ for grade A-large, 19½c for medium, 18¼c for pullets and 18c for B and C grades. Government inspected lots packed in new cases received ½c premium.

Montreal, Apr. 24 (CP)—Prices generally were steady on Montreal open produce markets last week, according to reports from the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22½ cents a pound and solids at 22.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases sold at 22 cents a dozen for A-large, 20-20½ for A-medium, 19-19½ for A-pullets, 19½ for B-large and 18-18½ for C. Receipts: 12,558 cases, against 9,314.

Mr. Sitwell's position as district game and fish warden is only temporary in this area, it was announced by authorities today.

WALKS ACROSS ROAD, IS NOW ABLE TO SELL UNPASTEURIZED MILK

Ingersoll, Ont., April 24—(CP)—George D. Hutchinson, Ingersoll district farmer, evades the law banning unpasteurized milk selling in Ingersoll by stepping across a narrow township line and meeting his customers from Ingersoll in North Oxford.

Hutchinson was fined a few weeks ago for selling unpasteurized milk here, but now sells 100 quarts of milk daily by just taking the short walk across the road. It is not against the law to sell unpasteurized milk in North Oxford Township.

"I do not consider it bootlegging nor dishonest in any way," Hutchinson said.

GUEST PREACHER FOR BROTHERHOOD

Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe, of Peterborough, Speaks at Baptist Church

"We are in the midst of an unfinished purpose," declared Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe, M.A., B.D., of Murray Street Baptist Church, Peterborough, before a large congregation in Victoria Avenue Baptist Church last evening, "and that purpose is the establishment of the Kingdom of God."

Rev. Mr. Sutcliffe was guest preacher for the annual service held under the auspices of the Baptist Brotherhood. The visiting minister was introduced by Mr. G. H. Bray, president of the Brotherhood and Rev. C. T. Olmstead, pastor of the church, assisted with the service. The anthem, "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say" was effectively rendered by the choir.

The reverend speaker spoke of the Kingdom of God as being "the reign of God in the hearts of men" and that this was the aim and object of the life, work and death of Jesus. He urged his hearers to think like God and not like men pointing out that to think like men was to think in material terms and to follow the materialistic philosophy of life and to believe in force as the way to achieve success, while to think like God was to think in terms of spiritual things, of love and purity, of meekness and kindness, of friendship and brotherhood.

Sense of Values Wrong

Pointing out that our sense of values was all wrong if people gave their attention and time to the development of the body and none to the cultivation of the soul the speaker averred "it is insane for a person to give himself to the making of money, the amassing of property, the pursuit of riches, the following of pleasures and nothing to the development of the life within. He urged his audience to make use of the church and its services for the enrichment of the "life indeed" and deplored the actions of many who substituted "worship of God" in the Sanctuary of the Most High on the Lord's Day with those things that bring enrichment to the body and that alone.

The Peterborough preacher urged his listeners to become engaged in the task of the church in establishing the Kingdom of Christ by evidencing in their lives the love that prompted Jesus to go to the Cross, by practicing the spirit of brotherhood and by proclaiming the doctrine that "love alone can ultimately conquer".

Negotiations With Soviet

The Prime Minister refused to discuss Anglo-Russian negotiations in Moscow despite labor appeals for a statement "in order to influence" Hitler's speech.

He replied: "I do not think it desirable to make premature statements on negotiations which still are in progress."

A foreign office spokesman earlier had said the sudden return of Sir Nevile to Berlin "definitely does not indicate any change in Britain's new firm stand against aggression."

He had acknowledged, however, that if Mr. Chamberlain had any message for Hitler before the Fuehrer's speech Friday to the Reichstag in answer to President Roosevelt's non-aggression appeal, the Ambassador would be the natural person to convey it.

Question of Albania

Replying to a supplementary question, Mr. Chamberlain said the government had not decided about giving legal recognition to Italy's annexation of Albania. This is a subject that must be decided within the next few days in view of the fact that Sir Percy Loraine is succeeding the Earl of Perth as Ambassador in Rome.

The question of Sir Nevile's return to Berlin sooner than had been anticipated came during the launching of Anglo-Rumanian talks to cement the close relationship between London and Bucharest and consideration of what probably will be Britain's largest peace time budget.

Negotiations with Rumania began both here, where the Rumanian Foreign Minister, Grigore Gafencu, talked with Mr. Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax, and in Bucharest, where British financial industrial experts arrived to map out a program for expanded Anglo-Rumanian trade.

(Officials in Berlin said Herbert von Dirksen, German Ambassador to Great Britain who was called to his capital "to report" the day after Sir Nevile's summons home, would return to London shortly.)

Reason For Return of Henderson

A reliable source said Sir Nevile's mission in Berlin had "nothing to do with any return to 'appeasement'" but said there was "a specific reason" for the British government's order to send him back. This source, however, gave no indication of the reason.

The Prime Minister assured Clement Attlee, leader of the opposition in the House of Commons, that he would make a statement on the Anglo-French attempts to align the European powers as soon as possible.

No Decision on Conscription

He also indicated that no decision had been taken on the question of conscription which arose again in the public eye because of reports of French proposals that Britain adopt it at peace insurance.

Richard Butler, under-secretary for foreign affairs, told the House that the reason for recent troop movements in Spain was demobilization of General Franco's forces.

Mr. Chamberlain said the British government was watching Spain closely and expressed hope it would not be necessary to make representations to Rome to get Italian troops.

BRITISH RUBBER,

The deal, it was reported, would be made under the barter exchange proposal made two weeks ago by Senator James Byrnes of the United States.

The British Board of Trade refused to discuss details but admitted there were negotiations in progress in connection with the Byrnes proposal, which has received the endorsement of President Roosevelt. There was no indication when the transaction would be completed, but an official source indicated negotiations were progressing.

The Byrnes proposal, which was made in Washington April 14, would have the double effect of building up the war strength of Britain, the Netherlands and Belgium and at the same time get rid of some of the troublesome farm surpluses of the United States.

BULLET SHATTERS POLICE WINDOW

Constables Fail to Find Slug on Sidewalk 25 Feet Below

Hamilton, Ont., April 24—(CP)—A bullet shattered a window in the second-storey office of Sergeant Eric Howell at police headquarters during the week-end it was learned today.

Constable Robert Mattison had just left his desk to give a message to the radio operator when the desk was showered with bits of heavy plate glass. Robert Holmes, court stenographer, was standing two feet from the window but the fragments missed him.

A hole, a quarter of an inch in diameter, was made on the outside of the window by the pellet but the impact split the glass over a two-inch radius on the inside.

Constables immediately searched the vicinity but found nothing to excite their suspicion. Neither could they find a slug on the sidewalk below. The window was at least 25 feet above the sidewalk.

A year ago, a window in Magistrate James McKay's office on the ground floor was shattered in the same manner during the week-end lull in activity at headquarters. The incident remains unsolved.

PART OF FLEET GOING EASTWARD

30 Warships of Britain Will Cruise in Eastern Mediterranean

Valetta, Malta., April 24—(AP)—This naval base seethed with activity today as authorities prepared for a cruise in the eastern Mediterranean of more than 30 warships of the Mediterranean fleet.

Among the vessels ordered to steam eastward Wednesday are the battleships Warspite, Barham and Malaya, the cruisers Shropshire, London and Devonshire, the aircraft carrier Glorious, 22 destroyers and the hospital ship Maine, with one guardian cruiser and one destroyer.

Several British warships have arrived at Alexandria, near the northern end of the Suez Canal, from Malta since the Italian invasion for Albania.

An undisclosed number of troop reinforcements arrived at Alexandria yesterday. Britain and Egypt now have at least 50,000 troops for Egyptian border defences.

(An admiralty spokesman in London said the fleet movement was an "ordinary spring cruise." He said the ships would not put into any ports.)

Relief for Single Ends on April 30

Toronto, April 24—(CP)— Relief for single unemployed men has been extended to April 30 in all Ontario urban municipalities, including the townships adjoining Toronto, it was announced by the Department of Welfare today.

Originally scheduled to come to an end March 31 week-by-week extensions have been granted because of unseasonable weather conditions. This week's weather is described as the "first real break" for the relief departments.

Municipalities carrying single men on relief after April 30 will pay the whole cost themselves.

UPPER BAY NOW CLEAR OF ICE

Carried slowly down stream by sluggish currents over the week end large floating patches of ice which covered the greater section of the upper bay west of the bay bridge have now disappeared. This morning the bay was open and free of ice as far as could be seen east of the bridge. On Sunday first anglers of the season braved the cool winds of the bay with small boats to commence the season's fishing.

Sunday's Balmy Weather Brings Out Fine Display of Finery and Parade of Cars

Winter-Tired Citizenry Take Full Advantage of Spring-Like Day

HIGHWAYS CROWDED

With the warm rays of a typical April sun bringing the first touch of the heretofore elusive season supposed to be productive of birds bees, warm breezes and flowers, a winter-weary Belleville took full advantage of an afternoon that was by far the nearest approach to Spring experienced this season.

Although a heavy shower heralded the day, skies cleared rapidly and by early afternoon a brilliant sun shone warmly from skies unflecked with the sullen rain-drenched clouds that ushered in the Sabbath.

It was a signal for a parade of Spring finery that put the original Easter display far into the background. Milady, denied the privilege of showing off the new bonnets, ensembles and suits due to the unfavorable weather of that day, turned out in a sidewalk show that dazzled the male of the species at times.

Small hats, large hats, black hats, white hats, chic ones and floppy ones, in all colors of the rainbow, in solid shades, and contrasting effects, that showed off to fine advantage the pretty hues of smart suits, spring coats, and fur jacquettes, favored by the ladies.

Nor was the parade confined to pedestrian activities alone.

Highways and byways of the city and district saw one of the largest motor parades since the hand of winter clamped an icy snowy grasp on traffic throughfares. The cream of motordom spick and span gleaming and shining as they purred softly along highways, vied with more or less ancient vehicles that snorted and chugged it seemed, in the very joy of being out in the warm air again. Family chariots of all vintages washed and polished shone in the new Spring apparel as they jolted and jerked their owners along the roads to a new-found freedom.

The elixir of Spring found its way into the blood of all ages. On a vacant lot in the west part of the city a half-dozen youths batted a soft-ball, eyes glued on a nearby sidewalk on which the blue-coats of the law were libale to appear at any moment. In another part of the city another group with grimy fingers shot marbles over the uneven surface of a patch of sidewalk. On Bridge Street East, fashionable attired young males rested on stone walls bordering the grounds of residences in that district, eyeing with undisguished admiration, the new apparel of young ladies as they paraded slowly past in groups or two and three. On Albert Street a woodpecker drummed a staccato Spring symphony on the truck of a gaunt tree.

The cynosure of the eyes of afternoon pedestrians was one young man who took time by the forelock and the season by the horns when he appeared in a pair of white duck trousers. Yet another wore a pair of light grey trousers topped with the brilliant scarlet of a white-trimmed blazer.

Towards evening, however, a coolness crept into the atmosphere and the glamor of the day was past. However, its enjoyability was not missed, and the week end passed into the limbo of more or less forgotten things leaving behind it a feeling that somewhere in the offing Spring is lurking, and ready for a permanent appearance, one that will be welcomed by all when it finally occurs.

To Probe Disposal Of Model Home

Toronto, Apr. 24 (CP)—Attorney-General Gordon Conant said today he had instructed Clifford Magone, solicitor in his department, and the Provincial Police to investigate the disposal of a $11,500 model home by the Riverdale, Toronto, Kiwanis Club.

The home was won by a Toronto woman who had received a ticket acknowledging that she had made a contribution of $1 towards the boys' work of the club. Thousands of such tickets were distributed.

Mr. Conant said last night that the club was warned that the provisions of the Criminal Code would have to be observed in the manner of the disposition of the model house and that failing the observance of these provisions there would be a prosecution. The inquiry will seek to find out the exact manner of disposition.

Defence Estimates Reached Wednesday

Ottawa, Apr. 24 (CP) — Defence estimates will not be taken up in the House of Commons today as planned but will probably be reached Wednesday. Defence Minister Mackenzie was indisposed this morning and was ordered by his doctor to remain indoors a day or two.

This afternoon it is proposed to take up resolutions and bills in the name of Fisheries Minister Michaud, the bill to extend the term of Chief Justice Sir Lyman Duff, third reading of the relief bill and bills of Agriculture Minister Gardiner.

It had been the intention of Mr. Mackenzie to precede consideration of the $63,000,000 estimate for his department with a general statement on defence.

MISS B. DAYNARD HURT IN CRASH

Sustains Severe Scalp Wounds and Admitted to Hospital

Miss Barbara Daynard, 83 Lewis St., sustained severe scalp lacerations and was admitted to Belleville General Hospital early last evening after the automobile in which she was riding turned completely over. The vehicle is said to have been driven by Edward Rosevear, North Front St., and was proceeding on Highway No. 2 about four miles west of the city when the accident occurred. Fortunately no other persons sustained injury as the vehicle rolled completely over in the north ditch.

The accident was investigated by Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine, who subsequently learned Rosevear had suddenly applied the brakes of the vehicle, causing it to swerve into the ditch, where it rolled over, coming to rest on all four wheels. Strangely no serious damage resulted to the car however. Charges are pending, the officer stated.

Miss Daynard was attended at the hospital by Dr. G. H. Stobie, who announced today her condition was satisfactory, despite the severe scalp wounds sustained.

Large Volume of Water Raises River Level

Inability of tributary inlets to the Moira River to accommodate tons of brown flood waters that are pouring into them from water-covered fields and swamps of the areas north of the city has resulted in near-flooding of the districts near Foxboro and Fairfield's Bridge.

At one point near the latter place, water to the depth of twelve inches flooded the highway yesterday, slowing up traffic but not impeding it to any great extent. In other places along the banks of the river, water from flooded fields and marshes brought flood-levels to within a few inches of the highways. Culverts and creeks conveying water to the Moira are filled to overflowing with the subsequent backflow, as warm weather increased the volume of water, resulting in minor floods. A number of fields are inundated, but today no appreciable rise was reported, as the water volume has a clear passage down to the river to the Bay of Quinte.

An appreciable rise in water-levels of the river itself was noted today. Tons of water are literally rushing down the river, foaming and cascading in places at high rate of speed. Flood danger, however in the city is past according to city officials and the Moira here can take adequate care of any water that pours into it from the sources in the back areas.

One driver, a former Belleville athlete, came to temporary grief yesterday afternoon when he drove into the flood that was pouring over the highway near Fairfield's Bridge. A cascade of water that showered over the hood of his motor when he struck the water, dampened the coils of the engine and the hapless driver stopped 'cold' in the centre of the stream so to speak. Another motorist came to his rescue a few minutes later, and by means of a chain and his dependable Ford hauled the luckless one to the dry highway and safety.

CHRIST CHURCH CHOIR ASSISTS AT BAND CONCERT

Two Selections from Handel's 'The Messiah' are Sung by the Choir

WM. DOYLE, CHAIRMAN

Easily one of the most outstanding performances of its kind given during the current season, the band concert presented by Lieut. Jobson and members of the Belleville Municipal Band, its program augmented by members of Christ Church Choir and a Picton Brass Quartette attracted a crowd that filled to overflowing the McCarthy Theatre last night.

The choir, under the direction of its leader, Mr. George Maybee lived up to all advance notices. Handel's selection "The Largo", and the "Hallelujah Chorus" from that famous composition "The Messiah" were given in a manner that bespoke not only outstanding choral ability on the part of the members but reflected great credit upon the leader. The anthem "O Come Ye Servants of the Lord" completed a trio of offerings that drew the unstinted applause of the large gathering.

Another highlight on a program that was outstanding in variety and excellence of rendition, was the clarinet solo "Quinte Polka" played by Mr. Ted Hinchey, clarinet virtuoso of the band, whose fine performance in this number and an encore "Roses of Picardy" likewise drew the generous acclaim of the gathering.

Incidentally the selection "Quinte Polka" was composed by Ex-Bandmaster Reg. Hinchey, and its offering last night was its first public presentation.

"Operatic Gem" a number that includes highlights of many operas was given by the Picton Brass quartette composed of Messrs. Sidney Lockyer, Creighton Lockyer, Chris Lockyer and Reg. Wardle. This number was also generously received, and the quartette responded with two encores.

A youthful member of the Belleville Band conducted that organization in the initial offering "Gloria" a melodic march that was well handled by the youthful leader. As usual the band excelled itself in the many numbers in which it was heard and which included: Overture—"Lutspiel"; march—"On the Mall"; selection—"Tannhauser"; selection—"Gypsy Queen" and the march "Thunderer."

Mr. William Doyle, member of the sponsoring organization, the Belleville Retail Merchants' Association acted as chairman in a capable manner. The attendance was by far the largest seen this season and as a result the silver collection was the largest to flow into the coffers of the fund during the present series.

3 Britishers In Business Ordered to Leave

Germany Takes Step to Retaliate Over British Action to Expell 3 Nazis

Berlin, April 24 — (AP)—Three British subjects were disclosed today to have been notified by German police that they must leave the country by May 10.

The men are: John Neill, chief of the Berlin branch of Price, Waterhouse and Company, the accounting firm; Leslie Parkin, Hamburg representative of the Eastern Telegraph Company; and a Hamburg businessman named Edmindson.

The British Embassy made representations to the Foreign Office, declaring the expulsion of businessmen who never had engaged in political activity would meet with strong disapproval in London.

It was said that apparently, however, the German government would rescind the order only if three Germans in London, who recently were ordered by the British government to leave England, also were allowed to stay.

(On April 6, British Home Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare announced the British government had taken steps against three members of Nazi organizations. He made the announcement in a statement that Britain was taking action to deport members of the German secret police and other Nazi organizations.)

DOUBLE - YOLK EGG CONTAINS SMALL EGG IN THE YOLK

The egg was a beauty and lived up to all expectations when after being opened it was productive of a double-yolk. But the eyes of the family of Mrs. W. Dafoe, of Latta, opened wide in surprise when they saw, enclosed within the double yolk a fully-formed specimen of a third egg.

The "enclosure" was perfect in every detail with its own yolk and all the trimmings. It is the first of its kind to be seen in the neighborhood, Mrs. Dafoe said.

The Morning After Taking Carter's Little Liver Pills

THE GOLDEN GIRL

—by—

Agnes Louise Provost and Ladbroke Black

"They're after me." Parsons was irritable and sulky. "I see the same fella turn up wherever I go so often that it gives me the jumps. I don't know whether it's this thing or the old business, but I'm being shadowed and I'm going to get out while the traveling's good. I want my share of this haul in cash before night."

"See here, Parsons, just what do you think you are entitled to? Haven't you had twelve thousand, solid cash?"

"Sure I have, but what of it? I got that because it was a check drawn to my order—it being my business to be the goat! But what about the securities, bonds, and stuff, that she handed me and I turned over to you to sell? You've got 'em and you'll keep 'em eh? Eighty thousand if it's a cent! You crook, I'll—"

"You'll what?" Gorham looked back at him coolly. He was alertly aware that no one was near them thus far. "You think you will squeal? I wouldn't, Parsons. You've got too much back of you. And just tell me what you would squeal about?"

"There's plenty!" There was a rasp in Parsons' lowered voice, but he was cornered and he knew it. "You haven't had any lily-white past, you fourflusher!"

"All right, Parsons, go ahead. You take everything to the police that you want to. But in this transaction you won't find a thing on my books nor scrap of paper in my office to link me with United Rosario. You may make trouble for me on some old counts, but remember this one thing, turning state's evidence against me won't keep you out of the chair when the police get your record. That's another story. Keep it in mind, Parsons. It may save you a lot of trouble.

He knew by the shifting of Parsons' eyes that he had won. Parsons did not dare fight. That was where he had had him from the first.

"You're a fine pal," Parsons muttered, hoarsely. "You've planned me for a sucker this time, but I'll get you some day. Just remember that while you're trying to climb into society and be swell, I'll land you!"

X X X

Long after he left Gorham, Parsons wandered the streets aimlessly. His first rage had abated and left a sullen hatred. Gorham had double-crossed him at his own game. Some day—he clenched his fist and muttered something in his throat, so that a passer-by stared at him.

It reminded him that he was a hunted man. He must give his shadowy pursuer the slip and get out of the country. He went back to his room in a lodging house on a side street and sat there, brooding over his wrongs.

He was out of funds. The twelve thousand had gone in an incredibly short time as all his money went, over the gambling table. He had less than fifty dollars in his pocket. How far would that take him. He wished he had taken Gorham's five hundred. It was due him, anyway.

His eyes took on a shrewd faraway look. He knew where there was money.

Sitting in his room in the creeping twilight Parsons saw before him an open door, an old-fashioned, metal-bound strongbox filled with papers. Many of them were the worthless stock of the United Rosario, but there were also bonds, solid coupon bonds, exchangeable anywhere. He knew the grounds of Beechwood, he knew the dog, he knew the windows and doors and hallways.

He waited a little longer, until darkness fell. Then strolling slowly, but with restless eyes watching both sides of the street, he went to a nearby garage and hired a car. It would be safer than risking the publicizing of a railway terminal.

Half an hour later he was out of the city and speeding along the road to Beechwood.

CHAPTER XIX

The afternoon waned, and still Jack did not come, nor did he telephone. Gloria was at first impatient and then uneasy. Frances trailed gracefully in, watching Gloria out of bright malicious eyes.

"It is a glorious afternoon. We could motor out to Willoughby's for tea."

"You go, Frances. I really don't feel like it."

"Absurd child! One might think you were in love, moping in your room all day."

Nevertheless, Frances also remained at home, part of the time in her own room and part of the time with Gloria. Gloria wished she would go. She wanted to see Jack alone.

Dusk had fallen when he was announced. He was in evening clothes and evidently on his way to keep a dinner engagement.

"I am sorry to keep you waiting, but when we finally got back somebody overlooked your message until I was starting. What can I do?"

Gloria looked at him with a smile. "Do you think I sent for you only when I want you to do something? Well, it has been true, but not this time, at least."

He looked surprised and then laughed. "No? I assure you that I am disappointed. I had counted on being useful."

"You can, and you are the only one who can be useful in this case. Wait a moment."

The door which led through a tiny anteroom into Frances' end of the suite was ajar. Gloria crossed the room and closed it, and Jack's eyes followed her.

She was dressed for the evening in a filmy gown of sapphire blue. Above it the wonderful gold of her hair gleamed and shone. There was a vital quality about Gloria's hair. Out of diaphanous mists of gauze her arms gleamed, softly rounded and warmly white.

He stared after her moodily, his smile gone. That was his wife, that slim radiant creature. A moment ago one brief movement would have gathered her into his arms, but he had not stirred to touch her. Two things stood between them—his promise to leave her free and that looming fortune of hers. Somehow his new plans which had swept him along in buoyant spirits at Amy Chase's wedding, dwindled rapidly before the patent evidences of lavish wealth. Pride told him that he must match it in achievement at least, but he had a long way to go.

When Gloria turned back he was merely waiting politely for what she might say.

"There is something I want you to know. It is about your aunt." She lowered her voice, standing with sweetly earnest face raised toward his. "You know that Miss Dalton, her present secretary, is an old friend of mine. She took me in when I left Beechwood. And Sara is dreadfully disturbed about a man who comes there to sell Miss Endicott stocks. His name is Parsons."

"Parsons? He has never been there when I have been home. Aunt Harriet usually does manage to make her brokers come to her."

"Her broker is Wayne Gorham."

"Gorham! He's not much of a broker. She used to have Pritchard & Ames. Tell me the rest."

She told him hurriedly and he listened with a grave face. It lighted into quick warmth when she spoke of trying to see him at McGilvary's Garage, and going later to the detective agency, but before he could speak the door opened and Frances Payne's voice came to them, clear, ironical and gay.

"Glory, dear, if we don't dine presently we shall be late for the theatre, and you know you have invited the Welbys. Oh, I didn't know you were engaged. Why, it's Jack!"

He felt something slip into his hand, a rectangle of folded paper, and the tingling touch of Gloria's finger tips. Very coolly he dropped the paper into his pocket. Then Frances was with them, bantering, vivacious and daring, asking him to join them at the theatre.

"It is Glory's party and I know she will let you come. There's a vacant place in the box."

"I should be delighted if I were not booked for the evening. Tomorrow I am returning to Beechwood, but I will see you on my return, if I may."

The implied question was to Gloria, pleasant but formal. She inclined her head smiling, and their eyes met. Then he took his leave.

If he had been alone Jack would have read at once the letter that Gloria had given him. But as he was about to signal a taxicab, a limousine slid up to the curb beside him and Mrs. Dickerson, with exceeding graciousness, insisted on taking him to his destination.

Mrs. Dickerson put him down at the imposing bronze doors of the house where he was to dine. It was not a house to which the ambitious Mrs. Dickerson was ever invited and she looked at it with envious eyes. It was well, she considered, to make the most of the slender thread of relationship which connected her with the Endicotts.

"You will surely come to see me" she insisted.

Others claimed his attention as soon as he passed through the bronze doors, and it was not until he returned to the Daimler house late that night that he had an opportunity to read the letter which Gloria had slipped into his hand. It was the report which she had received from the detective agency.

He sat for a few moments frowning over it. It was much worse than he had expected. This was more than reckless investment, more than the average unscrupulous selling of questionable securities. It was the deliberate plot of a crook to rob an old woman.

He looked at his watch. If he caught the "Owl" he could get to Beechwood tonight and have a talk with his aunt after breakfast, always a propitious time. A few moments later he appeared at the door of Bill Daimler's room, made his apologies and raced downstairs for a taxi and the midnight train.

X X X

Quiet and darkness in the big house at Beechwood and its shadowy grounds. Back of the garage an automobile stood with all lights out. Kelly, the bull terrier, might have been sniffing suspiciously around the strange car and following a trail that led straight from its side to a black shadow of shrubbery, but Kelly, after his first gruff bark and puzzled recognition, had found himself entangled in something black and smothery and heavy with a sickish smell and now he lay motionless back of the garage.

In the shadows of the shrubbery a man moved cautiously. He swung himself up to a little balcony. He knew the fastening of the long French window and he worked noiselessly. The window gave under his hand and he stepped in. With good luck he could be out out again and away in fifteen minutes and no one would be the wiser—until next time Miss Endicott looked into her ineffectual "strongbox."

The house at Beechwood was old. In Miss Endicott's room there was one board in the floor which creaked. Sara Dalton, waking suddenly, sat up in bed and wondered whether she had dreamed or actually heard that sound. Surely a chair moved! Cold fear pricked her and she reached for a kimono. Then, out of silence, a strangled cry—a thud.

She reached the door and opened it only to go crashing down under the impact of a heavy fist.

Lightly running footsteps padded down the hall, a dim bulk showed to her reeling vision and was gone. Lurching to her feet Sara shrieked a piercing alarm.

X X X

Peace and darkness reigned over the calm countryside when Jack alighted at the station. There were no vehicles at this hour. He struck a swinging pace down the road. That dark mass ahead was Beechwood in its shelter of trees. In the upper part of the house a faint gleam caught his attention. That might easily be Aunt Harriet's.

What manner of light was it that moved and shifted up and down this way and that, at the whim of an unseen hand?

Out of the night silence, frantic with fear and ringing with alarm, came a piercing scream. As he raced up the driveway lights came on here and there as the sleeping household stirred into scurrying life. He threw open a door to catch sight of white scared faces at the head of the stairs, hurrying figures. Perkins the elderly butler, reeled down the stairs.

"Oh, Mr. Jack! It's Miss Endicott —she's been killed! I'm phoning the police."

Before he finished Jack was up the stairs, three steps at a time. "Search the house!" he called back as he ran.

Get Up at Night?

If your sleep is disturbed by getting up several times at night, if you experience burning and soreness, if your back is lame and sore, you may get relief by taking Dr. Pierce's A-nuric. Mrs. T. Higham, 532 Hill St., London, Ont., says: "Dr. Pierce's A-nuric Tablets gave me quick relief from backache and kidney irregularity. My kidneys caused me so much annoyance; the secretions passed too frequently and often irritated and burned. My back would be so lame and sore at times I could hardly get up or down. After using 'A-nuric' I was entirely relieved of all the discomfort." Ask your druggist for Dr. Pierce's A-nuric today.

Ahead of him the light streamed through an open door. Involuntarily he checked his headlong pace as he turned in. Through the doorway into the inner room he saw scattered papers, a table with a metal-bound box on it with lid open and just beyond, Sara Dalton, his aunt's secretary, kneeling on the floor with a still grey head against her breast. She heard him and looked up.

"I think she surprised him at his work," she said gently. "It must have happened quickly. She—is gone."

CHAPTER XX

A great compassion shone in Sara's plain face, making it almost beautiful. In that hour she forgot the harshness and unreason and cutting rebukes, and saw only a helpless grey head, cruelly struck down. Very gently she made place for Jack and turned away.

"It was that man Parsons," she said. "It was dark, but I'm sure it was he."

The name fell on his consciousness like a drop of acid. Parsons, the crook who had been robbing her! He gathered the frail old figure in his arms and carried it over to the tall four-poster bed. He had done that before when she had been ill. She had been haughty and autocratic and self-willed toward the rest of the world, but to him she had been different. She had loved him, and had lived in her pride of him. And he had been too late to save her.

Out of the surrounding quiet, somewhere from the back of the house, came the sound of a starting motor.

"That's — that's going away." gasped Sara.

Jack was past her, and down the hall. The drumming of the motor was momentarily lessening in the distance, pounding through the night along the dim loneliness of the black road.

Jack tore at the garage doors. The roadster, ready for his instant use on the morrow, came out with a rush. Engine drumming and lights aflare, it lurched around the corner of the garage and took the road behind Parsons.

Far ahead of Jack the road lay straight, and he knew even by night where and how it turned. Far away under the lights of a bridge he thought he saw a speeding blur. That was heading back for New York or the Westchester hills.

The roadster roared over the bridge where the other car had passed, doing eighty.

That night Gloria was wakeful. She had turned over to Jack her knowledge of his aunt's affairs and the rest was his concern, but somehow she was not satisfied.

She was annoyed at Frances, too, for that inopportune interruption, whether accidental or designed, which had cut short her revelations to Jack. She had meant to tell him of Parsons' knowledge of the strongbox, but she had not been able to get that far.

Drowsiness came at last and Gloria slept. Across the background of her mind shadowy figures stirred uneasily. She was alone in a strange rocky place, dark with tall trees and beset with thickets which plucked and tore at her as she struggled to press on, always with Jack's voice ahead, very faint. He seemed to cry out to her—"Gloria!" and then slip down, down until his face was a mere glimmering patch of white far below her.

She awoke, shivering and terrified, to see the sane, sweet daylight. She tried to put the dream out of her mind; but the horror of it hung over her. She sat up, she hesitated, and then reached for the telephone. She could shake off this horror if she knew that he was safe.

The voice that answered said Mr. Moreland was not there. He had left unexpectedly on a midnight train. Still restless Gloria arose and went to an open window, peering out from the sheltering curtains at the morning sky.

A mutinous scheme was forming in her mind. It was a wonderful morning, and in a nearby garage her car waited. Why not slip out in the freshness of the early day on a little adventure of her own. She could telephone Jack from the nearest town and he could meet her somewhere and hear the rest of her story.

She stopped only long enough to telephone for Edson, her chauffeur, to bring the car, and then dressed quickly. She went out softly. The hotel seemed deserted. At the uptown entrance her car was waiting, and a few minutes later she was speeding toward open country, free to explore familiar roads, to see Jack.

Mrs. Dick Payne awoke, yawned lazily and rang for Cecile and her breakfast tray. Cecile came, letting floods of light into the room as she parted the drawn curtains.

With wakefulness came memory, and Mrs. Payne's pretty face sharpened into hard lines. When Cecile had left the room she drew from under her pillow a crumpled envelope. For a moment or two she looked at it sullen-eyed. It was only an old envelope, opened and empty, with a typewritten address: "Mrs. John Moreland, Granlidden Apartments." In one corner in neat black letters was the name of "John Carver, Counsellor-at-Law."

She had found it half concealed under a chair close to the spot where Jack and Gloria had been standing the evening before when she had interrupted their tete-a-tete. Which of them had dropped it?

A secret marriage—or worse?

Anger flared again in Mrs. Payne's eyes. "I'll make her pay, whichever it is!"

Cecile came with the breakfast tray and Frances nestled back among her pillows, cool and haughty.

"Has Miss Staunton breakfasted?"

"Miss Staunton is out, madame. She left for me the little note to say that she motored."

"At this hour?" Mrs. Payne raised incredulous brows.

"Yes, madame. It is the beautiful hour for the country."

As the door closed after Cecile, Frances pushed the tray away from her. So Gloria, after seeing Jack alone last night, was motoring to "the country."

X X X

Gloria was speeding along country roads in the freshness of the morning. The city was left far behind; fields and roadside and patches of woods were mellowed by the touch of autumn; there was already a golden haze in the air. A road to the left tempted her. It led off from the level highway which would soon bring her in sight of the glittering waters of the sound, but it beckoned persuasively.

"Take the road to the left, Edson. I think we can circle back to this one quite easily."

They swung to the left and ran between neat hedges for a time. Presently, looming in front of them, a roughly painted arrow:

DETOUR, BRIDGE CLOSED

Gloria looked back over the road by which they had come. They had travelled a wrong way, but always, as she imagined, bearing to the right to get back to the road they had left.

"We may as well make the detour, Edson."

They turned into a side road and went on, travelling more slowly because the road was rough. It was hilly too, and lonely, with patches of ragged woods on both sides. Gloria looked around uneasily. The woods reminded her so of that dreadful drama.

A smoother stretch showed before them and they shot ahead. Then a curve in the road, a swift lurch to avoid colliding with a grey bulk by the roadside, and a jarring stop which made her throw out both hands to keep from pitching forward.

An overturned car lay almost in their path, batterd and splashed and slewed across the road as if it had skidded violently, possibly in trying to follow another car which had turned abruptly into the woods. The second car had not gone far, but, scratched and mud-splashed like the other, it lay half-hidden against a clump of young sumacs.

In an instant Edson was out with a wary eye for surprises, and Gloria followed him. "Better look this over, miss. It don't look right to me."

They had stopped in a sheltered hollow where former rains had left shallow pools, and the slippery clayey soil was only half dried. On one side of the road the ground dropped to a rocky pasture, and on the other—the side where the automobile lay — it rose abruptly through a belt of shaggy woods to a low ridge.

Edson was looking over the two cars and following a trail.

"This one turned off first," he was saying as he looked over the car in the sumacs, "and the other one either tried to follow or else came around the bend and stopped in such a hurry that she skidded in the mud."

By this time he was not looking at either car. He was bending forward and gazing at some broken bushes and trampled weeds leading away from the road.

"Edson!"

Edson turned. Miss Staunton had not moved from the side of the road. She was staring with horrified eyes at the car there, a grey roadster, battered, wrecked, with a bent licence tag in plain view. Sharp terror in her voice.

"Edson, I know this car! He is hurt! We must find him."

"Yes, miss. Sure we'll find him! If you'll stick to the car now, in case of trouble, I'll follow this bit of a trail for a way."

"I am coming with you."

She hurried after him with a queer constriction about her heart and leaden weights dragging at her feet. It was the same sense of futile struggle that she had felt in that terrifying dream. Trampled weeds before her leading up that ragged slope! Where had he gone and why, and who had been in that other car?

Then she saw Jack, her husband. He came slowly down the uneven slope. He held one arm stiffly, with the other hand pressed against his chest. He walked like a man in a dream.

CHAPTER XXI

"Jack! Oh, Jack, you are hurt!"

Gloria was beside the injured man, trying to make him rest his free hand on her shoulder, but he only looked at her in a queer, half dazed way. Then he seemed to pull himself together.

"I had—an upset. I shall be all right presently." He looked from Gloria to Edson and beyond them to the battered hulk of his car. "I'm afraid I shall have to beg a lift to the nearest town."

"We will take you to Beechwood, of course. Or back to New York if you prefer that. But you are hurt, Jack. What is it? Please tell me."

Gloria found herself pleading with him breathlessly, stroking his arm in a sudden agony of pity. There was something mysterious and horrifying about this. Why wouldn't he tell her? And why did his lips set now and then as if in pain?

"It's nothing. I am only stiffened up from the fall. It was—a fairly nasty one. I'll speak to your man, if you don't mind, about the car."

Russia Offers to Join Democracies in "Stop Hitler" Drive

Soviet Russia has answered the recent request of France and Britain, to aid in preventing further aggression in Eastern Europe, with a sensational and sweeping offer to throw the whole weight of its mighty armed forces on the side of Anglo-French bloc in the event of further acts of aggression anywhere in Europe. The Soviet proposal is so sensational and goes so much further than was expected, that England and France cannot easily accept it without serious consideration, in view of the attiture of Poland and Rumania who have, up to the present, refused permission for Russian troops to cross their soil in the event of war. In return for its sweeping offer to bind itself to the democracies, Russia expects a similar undertaking from England and France.

Their Majesties Inspect Latest Weapons of War

Queen Elizabeth appears to be waving a friendly greeting to the crew of an anti-tank rifle, as she and the King were conducted on a tour of inspection of the Aldershot Command, where the latest weapons of war were shown them by the commanding officer.

Edson had withdrawn and was discreetly busying himself with the car. Jack went over to him, still moving slowly, and the chauffeur looked up with quick alertness.

Jack did most of the talking. It seemed to be about the wrecked roadster, for they both stood looking at it with their backs to Gloria.

What Jack said to Edson was brief and their voices were too low to be overheard. The chauffeur listened attentively and nodded once or twice, stiffening to the stark responsibility that was being laid on him.

"Yes, sir, I understand."

"Thanks. The main point is that Miss Staunton must not be involved in this. Her presence here is accidental."

"I'll do my best, sir."

"Good."

The brief interview was ended. Gloria came over, quiet but with pleading eyes.

"How did it happen, Jack?" she begged anxiously. "Please tell me."

"I came along at night, driving fast," he expalined patiently. "My lights picked up that car just as I came around the bend. I tried to get out of the way and skidded, but the other car swung free and turned into the bushes."

"It is dreadful! And the other man—in that car?"

"Gone," he answered briefly.

With that she had to be content.

He took his seat beside her in the car, and Edson turned expertly in the narrow road. An instant later they were going back over the way by which they had come.

Jack said little. He seemed quiet and tired. Once, in weakness or drowsiness, he sagged against her shoulder, and she let him lie there, with an odd little singing excitement in her veins.

A moment later he sat up and apologized.

"I must have slept."

They were coming into the edge of town now and Edson was driving fast. Jack roused himself from his listless quiet.

"Gloria, will you do me a favor?"

"Why—surely! What is it?"

"Please don't mention—to anyone—that you have seen me today."

"But Jack—" she looked at him almost in terror. Why did he want his movements hidden? "Is there anything—"

"I can't tell you now, Gloria. Promise."

What had she ever done for him that she could claim his condifence now? He was in trouble. There was some sinister thing to be concealed!

"I promise," she said slowly.

The car slowed up beside the curb. It was evidently a side street and a strange, unknown part of the city to Gloria.

"Edson, why are you stopping here?"

"That's all right, Gloria, Edson knows I want to get out here."

Edson came and opened the door. The eyes of the two men met for a moment.

"Thank you, Edson."

Jack turned back to Gloria. "Good-by." This time he smiled.

Edson was quickly back in his seat and the car was off, leaving Jack standing there with one arm held stiffly by his side. He watched the receding car until it vanished around the next corner. Then he walked in the opposite direction. Just ahead was a stone building, dingy with time and city smoke. He went up the steps, stumbling slightly.

Inside, men in uniform were standing around and another man sat at a desk. They looked at him as he came in. He swayed a little.

"I've come to give myself up. I've killed a man."

Two officers sprang toward him as he collapsed in a heap on the floor.

Gloria reached her hotel and dismissed Edson, but she did not go to her rooms. She hesitated only a little and then went through to another entrance and told the starter to signal a taxicab.

"Granliden Apartments," she told the driver.

Many weeks had passed since she had been there. It had not been wise to be seen there, but she had taken the lease for a year, and the little card with the name "Moreland" was still there. She opened the door—with the key that Jack had given back to her— and stepped in.

MEN LOVE GIRLS WITH PEP

If you are peppy and full of fun, men will invite you to dances and parties.

So in case you need a good general system tonic, remember for 3 generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling thru" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. British Gov't Agrees to Some Form of Conscription

Make Decision Known to Hitler Before Friday

Expected Hitler Will Answer Roosevelt's Peace Appeal on That Date Before the Reichstag

HENDERSON CHOSEN

British Ambassador Returns to Berlin in Order to Deliver Message of the British Government

London, April 25—(AP)—Some form of compulsory national service—perhaps a relatively limited measure at first—was reliably understood today to have been agreed upon by the British Government with intentions of making the decision known before Chancellor Hitler answers the Roosevelt peace appeal on Friday.

An opportunity for announcement of the government's reported decision will come tomorrow when a motion calling for conscription will be before the House of Lords.

Sir Nevile Henderson, who returned to his post as Ambassador to Germany yesterday after five weeks' absence, was described in reliable quarters as having been directed to tell Chancellor Hitler that the British government was taking a far-reaching decision in favor of conscription.

Taken as Self Defence

Hitler was to be advised, it was said, that the step was being taken as a matter of self defence in the present world situation and as a reflection of popular sentiment in the nation.

The cabinet meeting in extraordinary session was reliably reported to have outlined a new compulsory military service bill.

It was understood the bill would provide for:

1. Mandatory physical training.
2. Enforced elementary military training for men between 19 and 21.

Russia has joined France, it was reported in diplomatic circles today, in urging the British government to establish some form of conscription to demonstrate to the small powers of Europe that she "means business" in the drive against Nazi-Fascist aggression.

According to reports here, Sir William Seeds, British Ambassador in Moscow, communicated Russia's views to Prime Minister Chamberlain shortly before Sir Nevile Henderson returned to his diplomatic post in Berlin over the weekend.

A majority of British newspapers today insisted the government decided last night in favor of the general principle of conscription. It was not clear in what form it would be adopted, but the best guess seemed to be military training for youths between the ages of 18 and 21 years.

Would be a Warning

If the British government has decided in favor of conscription, the reason for the return to Berlin of

Why the Weather!

Spring showers! The old rhyme, "April showers bring May flowers", is justified in that there are numerous showers. Spring does usher in rain in form of justified in that there are numerous April showers. Spring does usher in rain in the form of showers, a somewhat different type from those of winter. Winter rains are generally the result of cyclonic storms (or barometric depressions) passing across the country. Showery weather is the result of local or regional convection caused by the greater amount of sunshine at this time. Showers are generally distinguished from occasional or intermittent rains by a more or less clearing of the sky between showers, a feature of spring and summer.

WILL DISTRIBUTE BUTTER FREE TO THOSE ON RELIEF

Federal Bills Given Approval to Help Dairy Industry

TO BONUS CHEESE

Ottawa, April 25—(CP)—Arrangements for the free distribution of butter to persons on relief or dependent on charity are near completion, Agriculture Minister Gardiner told the House of Commons last night as approval was given to two bills designed to improve the condition of the dairy industry.

The Red Cross, the Minister said, has agreed to take charge of the distribution of vouchers to relief and charitable organizations. The vouchers will be good for No. 1 butter and they will be accepted by any merchant dealing in butter. At the end of each month the merchants will present the vouchers to the banks which will pay the market price for the butter and send the voucher in to the government for final payment.

The purpose of the plan is to increase the consumption of butter and so use up some of the present surplus which is depressing prices.

Details Revealed

Mr. Gardiner revealed details of the plan in answer to a question from Mark Senn (Con. Haldimand) as his bill providing for an advisory committee on the dairy industry received third reading. The committee would provide a contact between the department, the industry and the trade and be available for consultation on ways of avoiding undesirable surpluses of butter in the future.

NO INCREASE IN INCOME TAX SAYS SIR JOHN SIMON

Indirect Taxes Increased in Britain's Heaviest Peacetime Budget

CAR OWNERS HIT

25 Shillings a Horse-Power is New Tax on Automobiles

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, April 25—(CP Cable) — Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, today in the House of Commons presented his second budget announcing new taxes designed to raise £24,000,000 ($112,320,000) this year but leaving the already high income tax unchanged.

The British government placed most of the burden of extra taxation to meet its gigantic rearmament bill upon the motorist and smoker for the 1939-40 fiscal year which began April 1.

Greatest Peacetime Budget

Sir John, introducing the biggest peacetime budget in Great Britain's history, announced additional indirect taxes on:

Tobacco; sugar; automobiles; motorcycles; blank film and photographic plates.

The new budget also hit big taxpayers further by imposing increases in the surtax or "extra income tax" on those with big incomes. Estate duties also were increased.

Sir John said the present income tax rate at five shillings sixpence in the pound, or 27 1-2 per cent, "is already within sixpence of the highest point even reached in war."

The intent House gave out audible sighs of relief.

Automobile owners will bear a big share of the increased tax load.

Heavy Tax on Private Cars

Sir John announced an increase in the horsepower tax on private automobiles from 15 shilling a horsepower to 25 shillings a horsepower.

He said the big boost in the automobile tax would provide £11,500,000 ($53,820,000) in a year. The new tax, however is not effective until Jan. 1, 1940.

Duties on motorcycles will be correspondingly increased.

The Chancellor also announced increased taxes on tobacco and sugar.

The basic duty on Tobacco will be raised from nine shillings sixpence a pound to 11 shillings sixpence a pound.

Increase on Sugar

The duty on sugar will be increased by one farthing (approximately half a cent)a pound effective today at 5 p.m.

The sugar increase will mean an extra two shillings and fourpence on each 100 pounds of sugar imported.

The budget struck at pocketbooks of those with big incomes by increasing the surcharge a further five per cent on incomes up to £8,000 and a further 10 per cent on incomes over £8,000.

The surcharge, or surtax, is a special additional income tax levied on those earning £2,000 or more.

Another tax increase was on estimate duties which will be surcharged on 10 per cent of existing duty on

SAY FASCISTS WANT TO DEMONSTRATE IN HAMILTON

Hamilton, Apr. 25 (CP)—Plans for a Fascist demonstration here on May 30, the day General Franco is scheduled to hold his victory parade in Madrid, were rumored to be in process here but official confirmation was not available.

"I have heard nothing of the rumor but, in any event, such a parade could not be held on the city streets without a permit," said Thomas A. Brown, Chief Constable.

Members of the Italian colony said they had heard no official discussion of the matter.

British Imperial State Crown Will Not be Brought to Canada

London, April 25—(CP Cable) — The King will not take the imperial state crown to Canada, it was learned today from an official source.

The glittering, jewelled crown His Majesty wears on state occasions will be left behind when the King and Queen embark on the battle cruiser Repulse at Portsmouth May 6.

The reason is understood to be that it is hardly likely that Canada's parliament will be ready for prorogation when Their Majesties are in Ottawa.

The King, however, will appear in parliament at Ottawa and give royal assent to bills which have been enacted.

The last occasion on which a sovereign gave personal royal assent to an act of parliament was believed to have been at Westminster

1938 Drama Packed Says Finance Minister In Presenting Budget

Ottawa, April 25—(CP)—Like the year 1937, but in even more striking degree, 1938 was packed with drama and tension, Finance Minister Dunning told the House of Commons today in introducing his budget speech. Again and again throughout his address the Minister emphasized the incidence of the International situation during the past two years upon the economic life of Canada.

"One International crisis has crowded upon the heels of another," he said. "Naked aggression has caused a grim procession of tragedies and repeatedly altered the map of Europe. Brute force has been publicly acclaimed by some statesmen as the only philosophy for the guidance of International relations.

"The word of great nations has been plighted only to be broken, almost before the ink was dry on the document. Every small nation has lived in perpetual fear of its own safety. The mills of industry have everywhere been speeded up to grind out the weapons of destruction."

Turn to Military Affairs

A tense public had turned its attention more and more to diplomatic and military affairs, and less to the normal business of living, the Minister said. From this "reversion to political and economic barbarism" recovery occasionally had emerged, only to be buried again in a new wave of fear and uncertainty.

"Confidence and courage are essential for the effective working of any economic system based on individual liberty and private enterprise. These qualities are difficult to develop in the world today, but at least in Canada there is more chance for their exercise and development than in most other countries."

Feel Depression Severely

The Minister reviewed economic conditions of the past year. The United States and Great Britain had felt the business recession severely. It was sharp and short-lived. Canada was among the first to show a substantial upturn in industry, and this country's revival had been more natural than that elsewhere.

While the "ever-quickening pace of rearmament" was responsible for industrials levels in other countries, defence expenditures had played only a minor part in the economics of this continent. The result was business and employment here were not dependent to any marked extent

PARLIAMENT MAY ADJOURN WHILE KING IN CANADA

Not Likely Business Will be Completed in Time to Prorogue

TRUCE DURING TOUR

Ottawa, April 25—(CP)— The state of Canada's finances was outlined in the Commons today as Finance Minister Dunning delivered his budget speech.

Following the address, the budget debate will be adjourned for a few days to give members an opportunity to study the speech and the "white paper" which will be tabled in the House, containing an accounting of the government's expenditures and revenues as well as an economic and financial review of the Dominion's position.

Members spent an hour at the opening of yesterday's session on the pros and cons of completing the business of parliament in three weeks so the King might prorogue parliament.

FRANCE IMPOSES RIGID PRESS LAW ON PROPAGANDA

Directed Principally at Pamphlets Attacking Jews

PROBE FINANCES

Paris, April 25 — (AP) — The French government today imposed a rigid press law forbidding publication of foreign propaganda and attacks on race or religion under the penalty of heavy fines and imprisonment.

The government's sweeping control, established under its parliament-conferred dictatorial decree powers, was believed to be directed principally at curbing a growing number of pamphlets attacking Jews and at political journals accused of being subsidized from abroad.

Involved in the government's concern was a fear that colored news dispatches might divide French public opinion in times of crisis. Leftist newspapers have ac-

LORD LOTHIAN IS NEW AMBASSADOR TO UNITED STATES

Will Assume Post of Sir Ronald Lindsay After Tour Ends

A BACHELOR

Appointee Was Secretary to the Great War Premier Lloyd George

London, April 25 — (AP) — The Marquis of Lothian, a strong advocate of closer relations between Great Britain and the United States will go to Washington as British Ambassador "some time in the summer."

The official announcement yesterday the King had approved the appointment did not set a definite date for his departure. It was expected, however, he would assume the post, in succession to Sir Ronald Lindsay, after the visit of the King and Queen to Washington in June.

The announcement said Sir Ronald was "retiring in the course of the summer." He will be 62 years old May 3 and has been envoy in Washington since 1930.

Lord Lothian, 57 years old April 18, was secretary to the Great War Prime Minister, David Lloyd George. The Washington post will be his first diplomatic assignment.

Champion of League

Lord Lothian, once a champion of the League of Nations, has been classed in recent years among those seeking Anglo-German rapprochement. After a private interview with Chancellor Hitler in 1936, he called the German leader "a prophetic type of man" who "earnestly desires peace."

VOLUME HIGHER BUT PRICE LOWER

Drop in Value of 2.7 P.C. Recorded in Mineral Wealth

Ottawa, April 25—(CP)—Volume of Canada's mineral production in 1938 was higher than the preceding year, but lower prices, especially among base metals, brought about a drop in value of about 2.7 per cent, Finance Minister Dunning said in his budget speech today.

Production of gold, copper, lead, zinc, platinum, natural gas and crude petroleum reached new peak figures in 1938, but with the exception of gold and petroleum, the value of production in all categories fell substantially, the Minister reported.

Employment in mining averaged slightly higher, "a reflection of the high level of operation maintained throughout the year despite lower prices."

Value of all minerals produced in the calendar year 1938 was $444,8000,000 compared with $457,400,000. Gold production however, was sharply higher at $165,900,000 compared with only $143,300,000, and petroleum was valued at $11,800,000 compared with $5,400,000.

British Labor Council Opposes Conscription

London, April 25—(CP-Havas)—The National Labor Council, comprising the Labor party, the parliamentary Labor party and the Trades Union Congress, today voted a resolution opposing conscription.

"There is not the slightest evidence," said a communique issued after the council meeting, "of the failure of the voluntary system that justifies the new clamor for conscription.

"Conscription would not increase defence power but would generate harmful disunity and dislocate the country's economic life."

TO GUARD EVERY CROSSING

Niagara Falls, N.Y., April 25 — (AP)—A spokesman for the agencies assigned to protect King George and Queen Elizabeth on their trip through Western New York en route to Washington June 7 said nearly 1,000 men will guard the royal party.

The guard will consist of representatives of Scotland Yard, New York State Police, United States Secret Service Agents, the army, and city, town and railroad police. A guard will be placed at every crossing over which the train will pass.

$25,000,000 Loss On Guaranteed Wheat Price

Net National Debt is Placed at $3,157,334,000 by Finance Minister in Budget Address

EXCEED ESTIMATES

Construction Contracts Are 6 P.C. Higher and Residential Contracts 92 P.C. Higher Than Last Year

Ottawa, April 25—(CP)—Allowing for a $25,000,000 loss on the guaranteed wheat price, Finance Minister Dunning told the House of Commons today he expected the over-all deficit for the fiscal year 1938-39 to reach $55,666,000.

He delivered his annual budget address and presented the customary financial review for the fiscal year ended last March 31. In his budget address last June he estimated a deficit of $23,000,000. The comparable deficit for 1937-38 was $17,715,000.

The figures were subject to revision since final results for 1938-39 have not been ascertained. It was impossible for the Minister to say what the wheat board loss would be and he chose the arbitrary figure of $25,000,000 as a reserve against possible wheat marketing losses.

Last June Mr. Dunning forecast revenues for the fiscal year of $501,700,000. Today he estimated the final returns would show a total revenue of $501,677,000, a decrease of $15,016,000 from the record high of the preceding year but still higher than any other year in Canada's history.

Estimates Exceeded

Expenditures had been estimated last year at $524,600,000. "That estimate has been exceeded because of

Tax Payments Highest Source Of Gov't Revenue

Ottawa, April 25—(CP)—Income tax payments furnished the largest single item of government revenues during the last fiscal year, it was revealed in Finance Minister Dunning's budget speech today.

The total was $142,025,000, the highest ever reported, and an increase of 18 per cent over the previous year. Of this total $85,185,000 was from the tax on corporation incomes, $46,937,000 from individual incomes and $9,903,000 from the five per cent tax on interest and dividends.

Second largest producer was the sales tax which amounted to $119,460,000, a decrease of $18,595,000 compared with the previous year. Other excise taxes produced $42,240,000, a decrease of $524,000. Excise duties, mainly on liquor and tobacco, remained practically unchanged at $51,313,000.

Customs duties yielded an estimated $78,750,000, a decrease of $14,706,000.

VON RIBBENTROP'S TIME IS TAKEN UP

Is Unable to Make Appointment Today to Meet Henderson

Berlin, Apr. 25 (AP)—Chancellor Hitler's newspaper Voelkischer Beobachter mockingly asked today whether President Roosevelt would guarantee not to "attack Haiti and San Domingo during the next 25 years".

The Beobachter ridiculed the United States President for worrying about "so many states, the names of which many Americans heard for the first time from the jolly non-aggression list", in his message to the Fuehrer proposing peace guarantees to 31 nations.

(The Beobachter's reference apparently was to a proposal of Senator Ernest Lundeen of Minnesota that the United States purchase Greenland and certain Netherlands possessions near the Panama Canal for defence bases.)

Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, taking Prime Minister Chamberlain at his word that Sir Nevile Henderson is charged with no special mission, was in no hurry to receive his Britannic Majesty's Ambassador. Sir Nevile hoped to see von Ribbentrop this morning. The Foreign Minister's office informed the British Embassy that von Ribbentrop would not be able to make an appointment today.

DR. V. HUECKING QUITS TRIBUNAL

German Member of Great War Sabotage Claims Leaves Berlin

Washington, April 26 (AP)—Dr. Victor Huecking, German member of the Mixed Claims Commission, has quit the tribunal in the midst of its deliberations over Great War sabotage claims, it was learned today and has been recalled permanently to Berlin.

An authoritative source said his departure "undoubtedly meant that Germany had scant hope of winning the cases." This source saw in the recall a possible German move to prevent any decision in the near future.

The claims total $50,000,000 and were made by Americans and Canadians against Germany as a result of the destruction of a railroad terminal at Black Tom, N.J., and an arsenal at Kingsland, N.J., before the United States entered the war. The Canadian Car and Foundry Company has a large claim in the Black Tom case.

City and District News

ROYAL OAK SAPLINGS DAMAGED BY MICE

Rabbit and mice damage to young trees so evident through the rural sections now that the snow has disappeared, caused during the winter by the hungry rodents, has been reported even in the city.

In the special plot of Royal oaks planted last season by Reg. Moncrieff, president of the Quinte Beaches Association to be used for beach planting this summer, many trees have been damaged by either mice or rabbits, some of the trees even stripped of their branches.

The same damage has been noted by Mayor Bone at his summer home on the bay shore. "It must have been a hard winter for the rodents. This year for the first time I have noticed that my young cedars have been girdled. This has never happened before in my observation."

LOONS AND PURPLE MARTINS RETURN

Small flies have made their first appearance in the lower section of the city. This week the purple martins have arrived and are fighting with the starlings and sparrows for possession of their summer homes, occupied during the winter months by the other birds. On the now ice-free waters of the Bay of Quinte loons were heard for the first time this week, and yesterday four of the Great Northern species of loon were observed paddling off the end of Victoria Park. Wild ducks are still flocking in their hundreds in the bay, more numerous this year there due to the fact, it was pointed out by one observer, that the northern lakes are still ice covered, and the ducks are awaiting the late season thaw in North Hastings.

MOTORIST DISGUSTED BY CHILDREN'S PRANK

"Never in my life have I been so humiliated....so utterly disgusted," remarked a well known East Bridge Street resident this morning, who late yesterday found he had been driving around through the city in a car whose broad, deep-blue back had been well and legibly printed with the use of a hard white soap in letters and words too obscene for polite mention.

The car had been parked for some time during the afternoon on a side street near one of the city's schools. Later the owner had entered it and visited other sections of the city, unaware of the fact he was driving a veritable sign board of ugly words.

It was not until he had pulled up at his home just before dusk that the lettering, evidently the work of some juvenile minds, was discovered.

SEVERAL BOYS TAKE TO SLIDING DOWN BRIDGE INCLINES

Climbing and sliding with the blithe carelessness of squirrels several very young boys of the city have lately taken up the summer sport of clambering up and over the solid concrete arches of the two bridges across the Moira River.

Early last evening four of the boys were engaged in the thrilling game of climbing the span of one arch, then sliding to the bottom to the detriment of shoe soles and seats of knickers. An elderly gentleman resident who warned the boys of the danger was greeted with a barrage of Bronx cheers.

Almost simultaneously the same game was reported being played on the same type arches of the lower bridge.

Speaker Thinks Great Britain's Policy Now Should be Isolation

"Great Britain and the Empire have no right to make pacts, treaties, alliances, military or otherwise as such a policy will lead to disaster", were the opening words of Eric B. de Pendleton of the British-Israel-World Federation to another large and interested audience in the Y.M.C.A. last night.

Speaking on 'Can Hitler be Stopped?', Mr. de Pendleton said this would not be done by Great Britain or any other group of powers, as the present international line-up is fully and clearly described by the Old Testament prophets and one and all concur that the impending war will be brought to a close by an act of Divine intervention. He cited several examples such as Ancient Israel being led across the Red Sea, fall of Jericho the smiting of Sennacherib's hosts, destruction of Jerusalem in A.D. 70, the wrecking of the Spanish Armada, the battl of Waterloo when Napoleon's guns were mired . rains, Britain's day of national repentance in June 1918 A.D. which marked the turning point of the Great War.

Ezekial maintains that Prussian Germany and the Soviet will combine for the last great offensive c Palestine, Daniel describes how Fascist Italy will seize Egypt and Isaiah the turning of the Nile and the drying up of Egypt. Then Daniel describes the breaking up of the Rome-Berlin axis when the Northern partner doublecrosses Mussolini or his successor, which is the signal for a world-wide conflagration.

In 1935 Britain obtained secret plans which showed how Mussolini was thinking of marching into Egypt and the joint control of Suez by himself and Herr Hitler. Britain's navy alone prevented the invasion. Since then Mussolini has taken Ethiopia and Lake Tsana and in the Anglo-Italian agreement Mussolini has faithfully promised not to divert the waters of that lake into the Indian Ocean which would dry up the waters of the Blue Nile. Dictators' promises are well known, Mr. de Pendleton added.

The only sane policy that Canada and the rest of the Commonwealth can practise at the present time is one of isolation for this is absolutely in line with Holy Writ whose message for present day Israel is "Come out of her my people that ye partake not of her sins and receive not of her plagues". —(Contributed.)

NO DEFINITE WORD THAT ROYAL TRAIN WILL STOP HERE

K.M. Dyson Says No Official Communication Has Been Received so Far

MUCH CONJECTURE

"Thus far we have had no official communication to the effect that Their Majesties will make an appearance when the Royal train passes through Belleville enroute to Toronto from Kingston on May 21st," Mr. K. M. Dyson, city ticket agent of the Canadian National Railway told the Ontario-Intelligencer today.

The locale of the overnight stop of the Royal train at a point somewhere between Kingston and Toronto has not been disclosed, Mr. Dyson added. "It might be at any point along the line," he said.

As to whether the King and Queen might make an appearance when the train passes through Belleville, Mr. Dyson did not know. "There is a possibility, and that is all, that if Their Majesties see a large group of people, schoolchildren etc., gathered when the train is moving slowly along the tracks here, that they might appear briefly. That, however, is purely conjecture on our part. Nothing is definite as yet."

It is understood that Mr. Charles A. Cameron, M.P., is making efforts to have the Royal train pause briefly here, it was reported today, but efforts to locate Mr. Cameron revealed the fact that he is in Ottawa.

Kingston will be filled to overflowing long before the appearance of the Royal entourage, Mr. Dyson ventured. "Americans and others will, in all likelihood flood the city on Friday and Saturday preceding May 21st," he said, in urging the public to take advantage of the special travel facilities that will be placed at the public's disposal by his company. "While a lot of people will no doubt travel by automobile, they must remember that parking space will be at a premium long before the hours of Their Majesties' appearance.

Troop trains from the district conveying militia units assigned to do special guard duty will pass through Belleville on Saturday, May 20th, en route to Kingston.

TWO WEEKS ON ASSAULT CHARGE

Herbert Dean, Millbridge, Alleged to Have Struck Man With Axe

As the result of altercations, which advanced to a serious point, Herbert Dean, Millbridge, appeared before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in County Police Court at Madoc yesterday charged with unlawfully assaulting Joseph McCaw with an axe and occasioning him actual bodily harm. Dean was found guilty on the evidence adduced and sentenced to serve two weeks in the common jail to date from the time of his arrest. Dean having been remanded to the custody of the county jail for the past fortnight, was released yesterday but bound over to keep the peace for a period of three months.

"Dean and McCaw were engaged in cutting wood on shares and arguments arose as to the split each was to receive. During the heat of the argument McCaw is alleged to have picked up an axe and struck Dean," revealed Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C.

"This could have been much more serious and the accused is fortunate he is not facing a more serious charge", sternly warned His Worship before meting out sentence.

"Worst of 13" Says Lloyd George

London, April 25.—(AP) —David Lloyd George, wartime prime minister, yesterday termed Prime Minister Chamberlain's Government "the worst of the 13" Mr. Lloyd George has seen during his fifty years in politics.

In an address he said: "It is a calamity that such a government should be in power when the whole fabric of civilization is rotting—when human freedom is being challenged in almost every continent."

The Welsh leader's son, Major O. Lloyd George, today backed his father's stand for stronger national defence by joining the London Welsh Regiment of the Territorial Army.

PARKS BOARD TO PLANT TREES

One Hundred Saplings to Replace Those Trees Already Cut Down

One hundred trees will be planted in Belleville this summer to replenish those it was found necessary to eliminate owing to age, the City Parks Board decided at their regular fortnightly meeting held in in the City Hall last evening. Chairman M. Callighan of the tree trimming department of the Commission, requisitioned for not less than 100 trees to be replanted in the city this year. "We find it necessary to remove more old decayed trees and this matter of replenishment must be taken care of this year," revealed Mr. Callaghan. The motion was unanimously received.

The Board in striking its yearly estimates last night was faced with the extensive repairs to the rebutment wall at Victoria Park. "We must construct a permanent wall along the east side of Victoria Park to accommodate the visiting craft. Of course such a permanent wall would not be constructed in any one year, but we must commence its construction this year," suggested General Chairman W. A. Woodley. Estimates for the cost of commencing such a project were included in the general estimates, that will subsequently be presented to the city council. "We paid out $124.84 for the lighting of Victoria Park last year ,that was not included in our estimates of 1938, it should be remembered," interjected Commissioner C. R. Clapp, after all estimates had been agreed upon.

Belleville will only have a three day fair in 1939, according to the request of the delegation from the Belleville Agricultural Society, when President Earl Bonter and Jack Holley approached the Commission relative to dates for the 1939 Belleville Fair, which were announced as Aug. 29, 30 and 31st. The request was granted.

In the matter of the employment of a Life Guard at Victoria Park during the summer months, the Board voted to advertise for applications for the position, qualifications being necessary.

MISS SIGURDSON TELLS OF ICELAND

Member of O.S.D. Teaching Staff Guest Speaker at Y's Men's Club

Iceland, the land of the midnight sun, its history and customs were related to the members of the local Y's Men's Club by a native daughter, Miss Halldora Sigurdson, of the Ontario School for the Deaf staff at the weekly Y's Men's meeting last evening. In fact the evening's entertainment was provided in its entirety by, O.S.D. staff teachers, Miss Cecilia Maloney delighting the club with two exceptionally fine character readings, while Miss Sigurdson was the guest speaker of the evening.

"Iceland, with an area of some 40,000 square miles, has a population of approximately 117,000 of which 34,000 are in Reykjavik, the country's capital. Iceland was first settled by the Vikings about the year 874 and its first parliament or Althing, was set up in the year 930, so you see we celebrated our one thousandth anniversary of our parliament in 1930.

"The name Iceland implies cold, but it is not so cold there, the mean temperature being around 40. We have a warmer climate than Greenland, owing to the gulf stream. Sheep raising, dairying and fishing are the principle industries. About nine-tenths of the country is covered with lava and there are 130 volcanoes, some of which are still active, in Iceland.

"Our geysers are world renowned and today efforts to heat the homes of Reykjavik with steam taken from these hot geysers is in effect with the idea in mind to heat the entire city by means of steam from our natural resources of the geysers, as there is a lack of fuel in the country.

"Automobiles were introduced into Iceland in 1920 and today the streams are bridged and the roads are being made accessible for such motorized travel. In Iceland there is situated one of the oldest universities in the new world and I am proud to say there is no illiteracy in my country. Even the poorest peasant can sometimes speak as many as three languages," concluded Miss Sigurdson.

President Harold Vaughan occupied the chair and conveyed the sincere thanks of the club to the speaker for her educational and interesting discourse.

Police Blotter

Earl Ashley, 21 North Front street, complained to police last evening that his bicycle had been stolen. The bike, which was red in color, was removed from the family premises.

While patrolling the city streets shortly before 4.00 a.m. today, Constables Ellis and Arnott observed two girls acting rather strangely on East Dundas Street. After questioning the girls the officers escorted them to the police station. It was disclosed they had escaped from the Cobourg Hospital last night. Their names were given as Mary Campbell and Effie Alexander.

Later Sergeant Booth notified the hospital officials at Cobourg and the girls were held pending the arrival of hospital officials today.

No arrests were necessary in the city during the past 24 hours, leaving the cell block available for nineteen transients who were accommodated there last night.

Sixty War Veterans On Duty as Guards Of Hydro Properties

There are only sixty war veterans on guard duty in all Ontario, and all are protecting hydro commission property, A. E. F. Wright, provincial secretary of the British Imperial Comrades' Association told a meeting of the association in the Peterborough armouries.

Of that number, thirty-three are engaged at Niagara Falls, it was stated.

He said that press reports of several hundred veterans guarding factories and power plants in the province were distorted and false and claimed his own figures were exact. They are being paid at the rate of $3.50 per day, and if they remain at such work, their salary will be $2.50 a day, with board and lodging. The hydro commission is providing the necessary uniforms for the guards.

Urges Government Combat Spread of Social Disease

Dr. Harold E. Welsh of East Hastings Would Compel Persons Infected to Undergo Treatment — His Address in the Legislature

Toronto, Ont., April 25 — Country doctor and physician extraordinary to many of the members of the Legislature, Dr. Harold E. Welsh, victor in the famous East Hastings by-election, spoke to the members of the Legislature as a physician prescribing for the ills of a sick province.

Mincing no words, Dr. Welsh spoke with professional frankness. The time had come, he said, for Ontario to tackle the scourge of syphilis in the same vigorous manner that the problem of tuberculosis had been met.

Declaring that it was his firm conviction that persons infected with the disease and who refused treatment should be jailed for compulsory treatment, Dr. Welsh declared that he was proud to describe himself as a country doctor. He advised the government to take steps to ensure that every case of the disease should be reported to the health department in order that it might be made certain that treatment was being taken.

"It is time to knock down, once and for all, this attitude of hush-hush," he told the House. "It is time that the people were brought to realize that something is undermining their physical set-up."

Blames Alcoholism

Dr. Welsh told the House that admission to the mental hospitals of the province had jumped 25 per cent, between 1934 and 1936. At the same time alcoholic admissions had increased 200 per cent. "It is in alcoholism that we find the root of our problem," he said.

Venereal diseases, he told the House, were largely to blame for the sharp increase in mental cases. "The prevention of mental diseases is the prevention of venereal disease," he said. He charged that the government was satisfied to accept huge profits from the sale of liquor but declared, "while we fill up the treasury with liquor receipts we are sending people to our hospitals."

Expanding his remarks on the problem of alcohol, Dr. Welsh defended the reliability of blood tests to determine the state of intoxication in a motor car driver.

"Sponging a man's arm with alcohol will not affect the test," he said, terming the suggestion ridiculous. "Alcohol cannot get into the blood by using a little on a needle. To my mind that is just a legal trick."

Dr. Welsh felt that if the test was taken and interpreted by proper medical authorities and compared with clinical symptoms, a true picture would be obtained

The Conservative member charged that the Dominion Government had failed to take proper steps to check the spread of tuberculosis among Indians. He charged that Indians mingled with other people as guides and berry pickers, spreading the disease. "Here is a situation that the Dominion Government permits to exist," he said. "This goes on in a province where we are spending two and a half millions to combat the disease."

Hepburn Voices Approval

Premier Hepburn was quick to voice his approval of the Conservative member's statement.

"I subscribe entirely to the member's charge," he told the House. "The Dominion Government is not giving the care that should be given to check this disease among Indians."

Erection of the new mental hospital at St. Thomas was the result of the lack of a definite policy on the part of the government in the past few years, Dr. Welsh declared. He criticized the government for its action in stopping construction on the hospital started by the previous administration at Smith's Falls.

Mr. Hepburn protested that the government was following the recommendations of Dr. Hamilton in constructing new buildings. Dr. Hamilton, an expert in such matters, he said, had been employed to make a survey for the government.

Patients "Piling Up"

Dr. Welsh charged that the change in policy of the government had resulted in the "piling up" in the number of patients.

Reverting to the problems of social diseases, Dr. Welsh urged that the government take over full control of the situation. "It should be government business until it is under control," he said. He urged that the government make it the responsibility of the individual practitioneer to co-operate with the government by reporting all cases. "The department should know where each case is and its history," he said. "I would even go so far as to say that people should be put in jail if they refuse to take treatment instead of floating around Ontario. There they would get proper treatment. We must break down this attitude of hush-hush."

Periodic health examinations, he said, would cut down the number of cases.

Suggests Hospital

Dr. Welsh declared that the hospital would be a small city in itself, "supported by the Ontario taxpayers. It is such a vast project," he said, "that it should be headed by the best men the province can secure. If they are not available, means should be found of attracting them. Men qualified in that particular line should be engaged, and if it is necessary to increase their salary, it should be done. A salary of $10,000 or $15,000 is only a drop in the bucket in a project of that size.

"I may say," he went on, "that I don't believe there is a doctor in Ontario who possesses the necessary qualities for the business administration and is also a specialist in that line of work."

"Do you suggest that a business administrator should be appointed?" interjected Hon. Harold Kirby, Minister of Health.

"There should be a medical superintendent whose business is to cure patients and a business administrator to look after the business end," replied Dr. Welsh.

He added that the appointments should be removed from politics entirely. "I am not accusing the Department of Health in that respect," he said. "I believe it is the least guilty along that line."

R. D. Arnott, Conservative member for West Hastings drew applause from both sides of the House for his compliment to Hon. George S. Henry, one-time Conservative Premier.

"In my opinion," he said, "the honorable member from East York has a more thorough grasp of Ontario affairs than any other member of this House."

The Conservative member also paid tribute to Hon. Mr. Croll for his handling of the Department of Municipal Affairs. "He did a wonderful job," he said. "He laid the foundation that has moved many municipalities out of debt."

Terming it unfair and ill-advised, Mr. Arnott objected to the Highways Traffic Act section which required a motorist, following a conviction, to take out insurance. He urged that government assistance should be bent toward more people on the land.

The Conservative member also took a crack at Toronto when he declared "if any more private bills are passed for Toronto it will become a little provincial government by itself."

MORTGAGE BANK SETUP EXPLAINED

Will Primarily Assist Agriculture and Urban Home-Owner

Ottawa, April 25—(CP)—Finance Minister Dunning, in the course of his budget address today, gave a brief glimpse of the government's proposed central mortgage bank legislation which has yet to be introduced in the House of Commons.

"In the contemplated legislation to provide for the setting up of a central mortgage bank," Mr. Dunning said, "we are striving to do two things, primarily in the interest of agriculture but for the benefit of the urban home-owner as well.

"First, we are attempting to deal with the immediate problem of excessive and harassing indebtedness by providing for an adjustment of existing mortgages on an equitable basis which will inspire new hope in the debtor.

"Secondly, we are trying to find a solution for a longer run problem by encouraging the revamping of the whole financial structure which has been built up to provide long-term mortgage credit. In this way we hope to put mortgage lending on a new basis, which will be not only stronger but also more flexible, more economical and more equitable. Finally, but not least important, we have done and are continuing to do our utmost to secure for our farm products entry on more favorable terms into the great export markets of the world."

DRUGGIST AT KINGSTON HAS SLEEPING SICKNESS

Kingston, Ont., Apr. 25 (CP) — Virtually no change was reported today in the condition of Leonard Brown, local druggist, in Kingston General Hospital suffering from sleeping sickness.

Brown was taken to the hospital three days ago and his case diagnosed as sleeping sickness. The ailment followed an attack of influenza. Brown was reported as having complained of illness for a couple of weeks, but his condition only became serious over the week-end.

CHECK UP ON ITALIAN COLONY

Birchcliff, Ont., Apr. 25 (CP) — Relief officials of Scarborough Township, suburban Toronto, said today they were checking activities of members of the Italian colony, following reports that one of the colony members had been called on for military service in Italy. The man's name is being withheld but he is said to be married and father of five children born in Canada.

1938 PACKED

on that artificial stimulus.

Strength and recuperative power of Canadian economy in the face of that external pressure had been demonstrated to a remarkable degree, Mr. Dunning said, recalling the crop failure of 1937, recession in the United States and International uncertainty subsequent to annexation of Austria.

Recovery Sound

Yet this country's recovery had been sound and not handicapped by uneconomic forces. He traced index of physical volume of business and estimated 1938 national income at approximately $4,460,000,000 or about 1-2 per cent below 1937.

Despite unfavorable weather conditions "and the recent extraordinary series of International crises" business had maintained partially gains made last fall and Canada entered the present spring and summer "with certain definite indications of further improvement."

"Manufacturing operations will benefit for improving economic conditions elsewhere and from increased defence expenditures, both Canadian and British. Finally the mineral industries seem destined to continue their impressive record of expansion. Exploration and development work has continued, although at a slightly slower pace.

Change Unthinkable

The changing trends in Canadian industries reflected external rather than internal conditions, a price which must be paid for dependence on world trade, the Minister continued. But that price was smaller than that which Canada would have paid in terms of a lower living standard and other costs if industry had been forced upon a purely domestic basis. This change was "unthinkable" for 11,000,000 people "living in so large an area endowed with so much of the essential raw materials of the world's industry."

During 1938 Canada maintained its position as the world's fourth exporting country and displaced Japan as fifth in terms of total external trade. Exports for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1939, totalled $841,600,000 excluding gold. This was a drop of 15.1 per cent from the preceding year.

"Net exports of non-monetary gold, however, increased by 13.4 per cent to $167,500,000," said the Minister. "For the same period, total merchandise imports amounted to $658,200,000, decrease of 17.6 per cent. This meant an export, or so-called favorable balance of trade of no less than $350,900,000 as compared with $339,800,000 during the preceding year."

Decreased sales to the United States and Great Britain accounted for practically all the drop in merchandise exports. To British Empire countries the decline in exports was only $5,200,000 and to all other countries less than six per cent.

Benefits Already Seen

"The beneficial effects of our comprehensive trade agreement with the United States are already beginning to make themselves felt and for the first quarter of 1939, our exports of merchandise, exclusive of gold, to that country registered a gain of nearly 16 per cent over the total for the same period in 1938.

"Fortunately, also, business prospects for both the United States and the United Kingdom for the current fiscal year are such as to justify high hopes for a substantial expansion in the sale of our export commodities to these two great markets.

Net tourist expenditures last year in Canada totalled $149,000,000. These, taken with other credit balances, left a surplus of $185,000,000 on current trade account. This was used to repatriate Canadian securities and retire other indebtness payable abroad.

"It is not generally recognized that as a result of such transactions Canada has been a net exporter of capital to the extent of over $900,000,000 during the last five years," Mr. Dunning said. "This is a tribute to our inherent financial strength and an evidence of increased ability to withstand any financial storms in the future.

Promoting Programs

To help the farmers help themselves, as the best form of assistance to agriculture, the government was promoting its prairie farm rehabilitation program, its various co-operative marketing measures, and its efforts to improve the quality of farm products.

Mr. Dunning sketched briefly the influences affecting the domestic financial position and deplored the depressed state of farm prices.

"This special weakness of farm prices is due to a variety of causes, chief among which are the contraction of import demand on the part of countries striving for increased self-sufficiency, and the too-rigid nature of farm production in the great exporting countries. The agricultural crisis remains with us still and shows up whenever world demand for farm products falters."

The western wheat growers particularly, in view of their past distress, could not be expected to face this problem unaided. Self-interest for all dictated that everything possible should be done to improve the economic standard of agriculture. Only thus could national unity be strengthened.

For that reason the 80-cents-a bushel guaranteed minimum price had been fixed last year for No. 1 Northern wheat at Fort William.

Must Not Be Stagnate

Canada's economic system had demonstrated its strength and stability against the shocks of the past 18 months, but stability must not be permitted to become stagnation.

"If we can no longer count on great possibilities of expansion extensively, by pushing back farther the borders of settlement or by means of a rapid growth in population, then we must expand intensively by improving our capital equipment, by making our a better rather than a bigger country."

Necessity for expansion and the means to make it possible were found in the current volume of unemployment.

"Without taking time to analyse the figures of unemployment, I wish to express my own conviction that the number of unemployed in Canada who are willing and able to work, with or without retraining, is not now so great that it should be beyond the capacity of an expanding Canadian economy to absorb."

The expand, however, required more capital creation, a more rapid rate of private investment. Unless the people's savings were converted into capital expenditures in larger proportion the national income would again decline. The Minister recalled the prosperity of earlier years, emphasizing that this had been concurrent with the creation of new capital works.

Main Purpose of Policy

The government had striven "with all its efforts" to restore private capital creation. This was the main purpose of its "easy money" policy. Resulting from that policy had been interest rate reduction which had strengthened industrial finances and had reduced governmental interest burdens, while at the same time effecting a gradual lowering of interest rates on mortgage funds.

Mr. Dunning challenged those who asserted the government's policy was deflationary, or had had deflationary effects.

"While we have been endeavoring to use monetary policy to the fullest possible extent as an instrument of economic recovery, we have always realized that monetary policy alone was not sufficient to solve our problems under present world conditions—that it is a tonic and not a cure-all.

"For this reason we have adopted many other measures in the non-monetary field, some of which I have already mentioned. At the moment, however, I am specially referring to our efforts to stimulate private capital creation. Perhaps the most important of these is the series of measures adopted to restore more normal activity in the construction industry which suffered more from the Pernicious Anaemia of depression than any other industry."

Increase Expenditures

Well aware of the arguments for "pump-priming in times of depression" the government had been obliged to increase its expenditures substantially as a partial offset to the gap in private investment. But it had never believed public spending could be a substitute for private enterprise.

Public expenditure could be only a relief and not a cure "unless one is prepared to take the whole of business into government hands."

"There are few Canadians, I believe, who are as yet willing to give up their society based on individual freedom and enterprise for a system of state regimentation. Under our present system government expenditures are likely to leave the situation no better and perhaps worse, when they are withdrawn. If they are carried too far they are likely to undermine confidence in the country's financial position and thereby to retard employment in private industry to an extent much greater than the new employment which they create."

Must Spend More

"We dare not, we cannot, contract our expenditure until our industries and our people generally are spending more freely.

With regard to the call for leadership and its accompanying criticism of public men, Mr. Dunning said no one would welcome more than he the development of an informed and vigilant citizenship "that would constantly study public problems and keep public men advised and alert." It was in the field of private investment that leadership was most needed, however. He was disappointed with the lack of imaginative business leadership in recent years.

Mr. Dunning voiced disbelief of the assertions that debt and taxation were retarding business. This need not be so "unless irresponsible but doubtless well-intentioned statements by people who should know better convince business that it should be depressed by the fear of debt and taxes."

"It seems ironical to put me in the position of appearing to argue for high debt and high taxes, because a major interest of my public life has been to keep the burden of debt and taxes on the people down to the lowest practicable level.

Forced to Speak Out

"But I am forced to speak out when I hear persons who have the same purpose as I have making ill-considered statements which are bound to have the effect of slowing up private business and thereby driving governments to perform tasks which will inevitably call for higher taxes and higher debts."

Investment in Canada had been profitable, said the Minister. He told the House income tax had reached an all-time peak.

"I have already pointed out the great opportunities which exist in the field of housing. Can we not in other fields, manufacturing, merchandising, transport and the service industries, apply new methods and modernize equipment in order to reduce costs, lower prices and thereby expand our markets both at home and abroad? Cannot we adopt new ideas developed during recent years in other countries without waiting for branch plants or refugees with capital to bring them to us?

"Have our other industries explored at all fully the possibilities of research which has proved such a profitable investment in the nickel and the chemical industries? Have we fully explored the possibilities of processing our raw materials before exporting them? Have we sought out all the opportunities for the profitable investment of capital in new industries, particularly small industries?

"These are vital question for Canada's future. I confess that I do not know all the answers but am satisfied that the low level of new investment in Canada is a challenge to our financial, industrial and scientific leaders to an even greater degree than it is in Parliament.

WHEN THEIR MAJESTIES COME

The visit of King George Sixth and Queen Elizabeth draws very near. In a few weeks for the first time in history the reigning Sovereigns of the greatest of empires in world history will be among the people of the premier Dominion.

This will be one of the most happy events in a long time for it will not only set a precedent and make history but will also be an interlude of joy in a time of international unrest. Its effect upon the world at large cannot but have a calming effect on the unrest and sense of insecurity.

It will also make history for it will be the first occasion on which the ruling Sovereigns of Britain will have visited the United States. Other sovereigns have visited the Republic but no ruler of the British Empire has ever been a guest of the United States.

The month of May will be memorable in the experiences of the Royal Family. The experiences of Their Majesties will be one of the most important results of this epoch-making royal tour.

They will cross Canada from coast to coast, stopping at many centres and will see something of the vast Empire of the west which is growing up. In their minds' eye they may catch a vision of the vast Dominion's future as half of a great continent with a good neighbor and kindred people to the south. The Sovereigns will see what no other rulers have seen in history, a solid continent of democratic peoples with their eyes set upon the future. They will understand why in this Canada and in the United States there is so profound a respect for the democratic institutions and for the British race, founders of a type of democracy which is the English-speaking race's contribution to the world. Time will not permit Their Majesties to visit all parts of Canada or the United States but they will see sufficient to understand the spirit which inspires the two peoples. So vast are these two countries that few perhaps of their inhabitants appreciate their greatness and potency. Their Majesties will see more of Canada than many Canadians have seen and will have a more comprehensive view than is possible for those who have not travelled Canada.

YPRES ANNIVERSARY RECALLED

At this season of the year the thoughts of veterans and other Canadians who have passed the stage of youth recall the events of the latter part of April 1915 when the Canadian corps participated in its first major engagement of the Great War. It is remembered that it was in this salient of Ypres the Germans first used the most dastardly invention of the age, poison gas.

The memory is still green of those gallant men who there laid down their lives. In every part of Canada too are those who suffered wounds at Ypres, many of whom yet suffer from their injuries. These fallen and wounded were the symbol of the great army of Canadians who suffered in the war to crush German effort at domination of the world and to preserve the world's liberty.

RIVALRY OF FAME

Chancellor Hitler stood in his single brown uniform on a raised dais of red plush and behind him was a chair which looked like a gilded or golden throne. Over the place was a canopy of grey carrying emblems of Nazi Eagles and the German iron cross. Behind the Fuehrer stood Generals and Admirals of the Reich as the military parade for Hitler's 50th birthday passed down the Via Triumphalis.

Benito Mussolini is a showman, and possesses "the firm Italian hand" — Montreal Star suggests that while Adolf Hitler was having his fiftieth birthday celebration of glorification of the expanded Reich, Mussolini decided to "steal the show" and so gave an answer to Roosevelt's appeal for a ten-year truce of war preparations. As the Star sees it, Mussolini "could not stand still and suppressed that long (until after Hitler spoke before the Reichstag next Friday, April 28). He broke it with a news flash, quite as effective as Walter Winchell. He left Hitler standing on one foot, listening happily to Goebbels, but painfully conscious that now no one else was."

Then on Friday Mussolini and Rome took a holiday to celebrate the 2692th anniversary of the foundation of Rome by Romulus who on April 21st. 753 B. C., is said to have staked out the City of Rome of old. The Italians do not forget that their capital is the old city which has held sway longer than any other city in the world. The Italians will not allow even the German allies to forget that old Rome was the capital of an Empire when there was no Germany, when there were only German tribes in what is now Germany

Now three days hence the German Chancellor will speak with all the trappings of oratory and accompaniment of applause from the Reichstag. This occasion when he will reply to President Roosevelt will be another event in which German National Socialism will be exalted.

MY COAL STOVE

Oh! what a joy my stove has been Through many Winter days!
Its glow and gleam of ruddy light
Through dreary days and Winter nights
Are worth a meed of praise.

A bit old-fashioned it may be,
But like a long-tried friend,
It never failed to do its part—
So with a fond and grateful heart
Its name I will defend.

When illness came and nights were long
It glowed with friendly cheer,
When heavy was the hand of pain
And slumber sought our eyes in vain,
Its light a comrade dear.

And many a night about the fire
Rang merry song and jest;
With friends around the fireside bright
The hours sped by in keen delight,
For simple joys are best.

And now as by my fire I sit,
One thought my spirit cheers,
'Twas love that shed its glowing light
Upon our happy hearthstone bright
Through all the changing years.

EVEN THE OLD BASE-BURNER MERITS ITS MEED OF PRAISE in these days of oil-burners and new fangled furnaces which create heat and maintain it at any degree desired, but without the cheerful glow of the old base-burner of not so long ago. The thought brings back fond memories of the old box stove in the horse and buggy days which took a good-sized chunk of wood, threw out plenty of heat, and made a cheerful crackle in so doing But it is the old base-burner with its isinglass windows and cheerful glow that we remember best and with nostalgia, bringing back many happy gatherings which sat around the stove in the sitting room, drinking in the friendly warmth and seeing many pleasant pictures in the leaping flames. Hence it was but right that a song should be composed and sung to "MY COAL STOVE," and that the singer should be that true voice of nature, our own Helen B. Anderson. Having read the above poem, reprinted by request from our issues of January 15, 1936, and December 29, 1938, the reader will cordially concur.

STRANGE TO SAY THAT THE HIGHLIGHT of the present session of the Dominion Parliament thus far was the shortest speech on record, two minutes, by John Marsh, M.P., Hamilton West, who merely mentioned that the number of reliefees in Hamilton had increased from 14,300 in March, 1937, to 20,122 in April, 1939. He said a mouthful at that.

HERE'S ONE FOR THE BOOK: A Belleville merchant took his wife and his automobile for a jaunt in the country one evening recently—primary object to collect a bill amounting to $2.50 from a farmer living about five miles out. The farm was reached and the merchant turned his automobile up the lane toward the house. Near the house the car plunged into a sea of mud and sank to the hubs—the engine turned over and died, apparently appalled at the effort required to reach terra firma. The farmer with a team of horses pulled the automobile clear finally after much gee-hawing and words explosive but not always parliamentary, while the merchant's shoes and pants were a sight. When the auto eventually reached safety the farmer said:.. "Well how do we stand now? Your bill for $2.50 against my team of horses and individual efforts." It was mutually decided that the debt was off and the parties were even all. All but, said the merchant sadly, next day, a new pair of pants practically spoiled, and a pair of shoes with the newness taken off. Moral, in starting out to collect a bill be sure the roads are good, on and off the highway.

The Speedmaster of Printing

Speed, speed and still more speed has been the demand of newspapers ever since there were newspapers. But the craving became urgent when Napoleon was creating news so rapidly that The Times of London encouraged Friedrich Koenig to design and build the first steam-driven newspaper press. And now the greatest master of speed in the history of newspaper machinery has passed in the person of Henry A. Wise Wood. When the starting bells rang on Sunday in a hundred great newspaper pressrooms here and abroad ink-smudged men glanced at the name plates of the Titans beside which they stood and said to themselves: "So he's gone." The oldsters drifted back mentally thirty years to the time when they first heard of him, a time when the peak of efficiency seemed to have been reached with 24,000 eight page papers in an hour. They looked at the counter of their Wood presses read off 60,000 an hour, watched paper as it was inked at the rate of 200 square feet a second. A generation of one man's activity rolled by .

Like all great inventors, Wood was a revolutionist. His belief in higher speeds than had ever been attained was at first regarded as a typical inventor's eccentricity. He began by converting stereotyping from a hand into a mechanical process. Whereupon he did something dramatic. He went directly to the stereotyper's union, convinced them of the crying need of more automatic newspaper machinery, pointed out that more papers an hour meant more readers and hence more work, won them over, lived up to his prediction and thus set an example in handling the problem of possible technological unemployment sensibly.

Far more difficult was the problem of printing. He saw that paper was torn partly because it could not stand the strain of pulling at high speed and because the press trembled. He redesigned the press radically—relieved the tension before printing began and suppressed vibration partly by increasing the solidity and mass of essential parts. Where his predecessors saved weight he piled it on. But he discovered, too, that a press is an organism. High speed meant entirely new feeders, nippers, folders and pasters to attach the ends of spent rolls to the beginnings of new rolls while paper was flashing through at thirty miles an hour. In the end the web streamed through the press with the smoothness of a fluid.

About 450 patents on newspaper machinery stand to Wood's credit. Like all great inventors, he was prolific. But unlike many of them he followed his problem through. Watt, Cartwright, even the great Edison, were forever flying off at tangents and had to be held to their work by the business managers. Wood breathed, smelled printers' ink and handled it even in childhood. At his death he was dreaming of high-speed presses that would print newspapers every day in full color. He is one of the few examples of dogged thoroughness in the annals of invention. He is as much a part of newspaper history as the publishers and editors and reporters who have made the press what it is today.—New York Times.

THE GESTAPO

The German Secret Police —the Gestapo—seem mainly interested in England in transferred money.

One method said to have been employed till recently was ingenious. If a German citizen still in Germany was suspected of having an account with a London bank, a Gestapo agent would go to the bank and pay in £5 to Herr So-and-So's account. If the deposit was accepted that was proof that the account existed. Now, I believe, the banks require an authorization from the depositor.

Ordinary inquiries of refugees are fully safeguarded by a prefatory, "You are not compelled to give this information, but it will be much better for you if you do." That, with the terror associated with the name of the Gestapo even here, is often enough to elicit a disclosure that will land some unfortunate still in Germany in a concentration camp. — "Janus" in London Spectator.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Don't Use Strong Antiseptics in Nose Sprays

When you have a blocked nose and use a little salt and water as a nose spray, or by the use of an eye dropper put some of this salt solution—a quarter-teaspoonful to a glass of water—up into nose, there is usually some relief as the salt solution shrinks the lining of the nose and thus gives more room for air to pass to and from the lungs.

For years, oil containing various substances has been used for the purpose of soothing the lining of the nose, to dry up this lining, or an antiseptic to kill off organisms causing colds or other ailments. As some of these preparations go directly from the nose to the lungs, it has been found that the oil drops sometimes carry with them a large number of harmful organisms which may set up a fat-like type of inflammation there.

The antiseptics used in a watery solution appear to be very helpful in fighting harmful organisms but the solution is often so strong that the lining of the nose, throat and bronchial tubes become irritated and the nose lining which, in health, can fight off harmful organisms, loses its power to do so and these organisms may set up trouble in nose, throat and bronchial tubes.

Drs. Theodore E. Walsh and Paul R. Cannon, Chicago, in Annals of Otology, Rhinology and Laryngology (ear, nose and throat), state that salt solutions of the substances such as ephedrine and neosynephrine which shrink the nose lining "caused no significant degree of damage in bronchial tubes or lungs, when used in normal rabbits."

There was a time when a great many of these blocked noses underwent operation for removal of the turbinate bones or the straightening of the septum that divides the nostrils. As many of these operations failed to give relief and caused loss of smell in some patients only severe cases now undergo operation.

Blocked noses are very common and mild antiseptics and shrinking substances are helpful, but it is well to remember that a healthy normal nose needs no 'treatment' because its lining can resist or fight off harmful organisms. To use strong antiseptics, except when prescribed by a physician to ward off some prevailing epidemic disease, is unwise.

ROBOT GUN

Britain has undoubtedly been slow in bringing her anti-air force up to efficiency in number and quality. War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha announced great progress the other day, but he only spoke in generalities as to the remarkable 3.7 anti-aircraft gun which is now being turned out by mass production.

No details will ever be published, but it is believed that this gun is the finest of its kind in the world. That is a statement of fact, not propaganda to scare potential opponents. Each gun has a device attached which picks out for itself the height at which an attacking plane is flying, the direction and rate of its speed and other relevant matter and "sights" itself accordingly, moving as the plane moves so that it is always "on" or very near its target. It fires shells as high as 40,000 feet, which is probably higher than any bomber can be effective. So fast do modern planes go that in order to hit one, or burst a shell near it, the gun has to fire two miles ahead of the attacker. Plane and shell travel at about the same speed.

Then there is another handy multi-barrelled gun that swings around in any direction spraying a special type of bullet at the rate of 600 per minute.

The anti-aircraft forces are also equipped with a searchlight which works on the same principle as the robot gun in picking up raiders.

The British have evidently got something there. A gun that can work out its own mathematical problems in a split second is an uncanny opponent.— Stratford Beacon-Herald.

VALIANT PETS

To the sagacity of a little dog, Isabel Walker, of Mitchell, is said to owe her life. The house afire, other members of the family cut off from reaching her, the little dog got into her room, roused her and led her to the safety of a balcony until rescued.

The number of people who owe their lives to a dog or cat must be very large. One reads again and again that the whining or barking of a dog, his insistence on pushing into a bedroom and making a noise or the persistent mewing of a cat has wakened some member of the family and apprised them of danger. Perhaps it is fire; perhaps it is escaping gas or fumes. But whatever it is, the household pet saved them. Some people, of course, keep dogs as protection against intruders; others merely to amuse the children. But watchdog or pet, they have saved many lives.

Unfortunately, many people regard dogs or cats, especially the latter, as a species of vermin and treat them as such. Cats are largely left to fend for themselves and they are shoved out at night in the coldest weather where there is no sort of protection or warmth around. Anybody who has a dog or cat owes it a square deal. It will repay them with faithful devotion and ask little in return. — St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Big News Frogs in Little Ponds

I have sat idly by, reading with much interest the now prolonged discussions of ambitions newspapermen have to own their own newspapers, seeing in most of the articles a parallel of my own ambitions which reached full bloom two years ago this month. My intentions of not entering the discussions were blasted by Brother Schwandner of the Milwaukee Journal when he recalled in the Aug. 20 Editor and Publisher the friend who "bought a weekly newspaper in western Wisconsin." That struck pretty close to home because I bought a newspaper in western Wisconsin and Schwandner is a friend of mine.

Sixteen months to the day in the weekly newspaper field taught me many things about weeklies which the rank and file of daily men will never know unless they, too, throw up their daily jobs and become the big frogs in the little ponds they have so often dreamed about. Despite the fact that my weekly, the Tri-Country News of Osseo, Wis., netted me a little over $3,000 the first year after an uninterrupted series of fiscal losses and that it was awarded three prizes by the Wisconsin Press Association during those 16 months for (1) making the most improvement of any weekly in the state; (2) second place for enterprise, and (3) third place for the best front page, it was with a sigh of relief the day I left that village of 1,000 Norwegian souls to assume duties again as an honest-to-goodness newspaperman.

Publishing a weekly with a three or four man shop is no more a journalist's job than stepping from the editorial to the business department in a daily newspaper. The two positions are, for the most part, incompatible.

I went along doggedly for 11 months as editor, publisher, business manager, circulation manager, society reporter, make-up man, solicitor, etc., before I realized how terribly mistaken I had been about the thrills of owning a weekly newspaper of my own. What jarred me into place was, strangely enough, a murder-suicide which happened on the eve of a press day. Here, for the first time in many moons, I had a chance to demonstrate once I had been a newspaperman who, over a period of 11 years in the daily newspaper business, had cultivated the desire of being FIRST with the news, or at least breaking even with the competition. This, I could see, was going to be an even break with the Eau Claire dailies and I went out after it with a vengeance. Of course it meant that I had to cut short soliciting advertising for the week and leave unwritten a lot of small fry items about lutefisk suppers and campfire girl meetings, but one morsel of real news in 11 months tends to make an erstwhile reporter pretty hungry for the real thing.

Mrs. Koenig was the first to notice the change. "You acted like your old self again today," she announced at dinner while I was still flushed with the excitement of writing a real yarn. "For the first time you didn't groan about writing advertising copy and helping with the paper."

My advice to daily newspapermen — and I am talking now to the men in the editorial department—is to let the boys in the business office take the flings at publishing weekly newspapers. They take a particular joy in following pennies, nickels and dimes; they get a great kick out of soliciting advertising and drumming up subscriptions and dunning patrons; they know a balance sheet when they see one. Your job is getting the news and putting it into readable, intelligent form and later embellishing it with editorial comment, but there is so little news in a week's time for publication in a weekly newspaper that even the most inexperienced and inept can get by and sometimes even make a rousing success of the editorial side on a weekly.

A bull in a china shop is a no more forlorn creature than someone fresh from a daily newspaper in a weekly shop. Today the weeklies are, for the most part, the fifth wheel on the wagon. Gone is the national advertiser, and nothing anyone can do will ever bring him back. Gone is the strong editorial influence of the weekly press, largely because the average weekly editor has either abandoned editorials altogether or has clipped from here and there without rhyme or reason. Gone, for the most part, is the weekly reader, and this is no exaggeration. If every weekly in the country would cut from its list the non-payer who, in fact, is not a subscriber, and then whittle down to a reasonable figure the exchange list and other gratuities, the savings in newsprint alone would amount to a tremendous figure.

In short, the weeklies are not what they used to be and never will be again. To buy one is like getting into a bearish market. I know because I bought one. — By C. H. Koenig, City Editor Waukesha, (Wis.), Daily Freeman, in Editor and Publisher.

Free Order of String Savers

I have often noticed that almost every one has his own individual small economics — careful habits of saving fractions of pennies in some one peculiar direction—any disturbance of which annoys him more than spending shillings or pounds on some real extravagance. An old gentleman of my acquaintance who took the intelligence of the failure of a Joint-Stock Bank, in which some of his money was invested, with stoical mildness, worried his family all through a long summer's day because one of them had torn (instead of cutting) out the written leaves of his now useless bank-book; of course, the corresponding pages at the other end came out as well, and this little unnecessary waste of paper (his private economy) chafed him more than all the loss of his money. Envelopes fretted his soul terribly when they first came in; the only way in which he could reconcile himself to such waste of his cherished article was by patiently turning inside out all that were sent to him, and so making them serve again. Even now, though tamed by age, I see him casting wistful glances at his daughters when they send a whole inside of a half-sheet or note paper, with the three lines of acceptance to an invitation, written on only one of the sides. I am not above owning that I have this human weakness myself. String is my foible. My pockets get full of little hanks of it, picked up and twisted together, ready for uses that never come. I am seriously annoyed if any one cuts the string of a parcel instead of patiently and faithfully undoing it fold by fold.

Now Miss Matty Jenkyns was chary of candles. We had many devices to use as few as possible. In the winter afternoons she would sit knitting for two or three hours —she could do this in the dark, or by firelight — and when I asked if I might not ring for candles to finish stitching my wristbands, she told me to "keep blind man's holiday." They were usually brought in with tea; but we only burnt one at a time. As we lived in constant preparation for a friend who might come in any evening (but who never did), it required some contrivance to keep our two candles of the same length, ready to be lighted, and to look as if we burnt two always. The candles took it in turns; and, whatever we might be talking about or doing, Miss Matty's eyes were habitually fixed upon the candle, ready to jump up and extinguish it and to light the other before they had become too uneven in length to be restored to equality in the course of the evening. — From "Cranford," by Mrs. Gammell.

The Puller-In Passes on

An older institution than the Sixth Avenue elevated is to be pulled down. That curious ancient salesman who joined compulsion to persuasion, the puller-in, can hustle involuntary customers into his shop no more: or if he does, he will commit a misdemeanor for which he will have to pay a fine of $50 or serve ten days in jail, or both. In his prime he was a curious character. He had a wealth of words and a strong arm. Queer scenes in older New York one could get by taking a walk down Park Row, then Chatham Street, and going up the Bowery or two or three other streets much given to exterior specimens of clothes. If these were not inviting enough the would-be passer-by was dragged in. Fights were frequent, to the delight of the crowd.

His patter was sometimes amusing, but the puller-in was a nuisance. We can't believe that the surviving members of the profession are not milksops compared with the old breed. It may be a guilty confession of a sedentary life, but we'd supposed that the puller-in had long pulled out. He was a clutterer of sidewalks. At the mention of his name one sees again village New York. Processions of cigar-store Indians, almost as numerous as the warriors of Tammany, pass before the eyes. Men, many of them at least on Sundays top-hatted, are having their boots blacked in great protruding outdoor chairs. The voice of the hand organ steals upon the ear. Why was the Mayor so cruel to the sons of song? Where are the waffle wagons and their attendants clad in white?

From city and country waffledom vanished like an insubstantial pageant faded. "Hot tamales," "hot tamales!" "Bones, bottles and boo-ots!" Who remembers the suave gentleman and his wife who sold the best and biggest and most copiously buttered ears of corn on the west side of Times Square just as the crowd was coming out of the Opera House? Now the sandwich men, a small, laborious and kindly tribe, are threatened with extinction. Isn't there life-room enough for them if the size of their signs is reduced? — New York Times.

FIXED PRICES

The Alberta Legislature is giving the Alberta Government the right to fix prices for oil and gasoline. It is a long step towards a dictatorship which we doubt the people of Alberta desire.

If Alberta can fix the price of oil and gasoline, it can fix the price of any commodity, and by price-fixing it can control any industry. As a servant of the people that's too much power for any government.

The whole question of the right of a provincial government to fix oil and gasoline prices is in the courts in British Columbia where similar legislation was passed and, after being passed, was attacked in the court as being ultra vires the power of the province. It would have been as well for Alberta to await the result of the British Columbia legislation before rushing to take similar powers here.—Lethbridge Herald.

HITLER FACING 3 ALTERNATIVES KINSMEN TOLD

Rev. W. J. Walker Gives Interesting Address on German Affairs

MUST ANSWER SOON

Adolph Hitler faces three alternatives within the next few days, no matter whether it means peace or war. First, to accept Roosevelt's appeal for peace, the second a quick decisive war, and third, acceptance of offer of democratic assistance in the re-establishment of Germany, the Rev. W. J. Walker, St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church minister told members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club at their fortnightly banquet here last night.

"He must answer within the next few days," the speaker declared. If he accepts Roosevelt's plea for peace and meet with the leaders to form an agreement, the first thing he must do is release one-half of his army. This mass of men will then be a glut on the German labor market. In that case he will face internal revolution. That is bound to come. Then he will be forced to go to the people for a vote and when that happens it means the breaking up of his regime."

The second alternative, the speaker pointed out, would be a swift declaration of war, a quick stab at Europe in an effort to defeat the democracies before they wake up, in other words it is either glut the labor market or go to war.

The third step would be to accept the offer of the democracies, if it were made, to accept their backing to assist in the re-establishment of Germany and restore the country in the eyes of the world and place the people in a position, where they would forget their inferiority complex and be on an equal status with other peoples of the earth, Mr. Walker declared.

Deeper Reasons

While the Versailles Treaty was blamed for world conditions directly following the war, there are deeper reasons, he continued. "These are biological rather than economic ones" he said, referring the human being to the bee. "Like that busy fellow, when we get into a certain state we regress, and that means begin the social structure all over again. After the war we re-adjusted ourselves but our situation was not as keen as that of Germany and Central Europe."

Germany was bankrupt, different internal factions clashed, there was a constant flux going on with no settled form of government. An inferiority complex developed and men looked everywhere for a leader. They seized upon a symbol and this was developed in three psychological phases until the German nation was developed into a mechanized whole under Naziism, the speaker asserted.

"All were welded in a single unit under the Swastika, the ideals of which are kept before the people by propaganda. But Germany is not re-established. She is financially bankrupt. She has plenty of work and is hiring mechanics from other countries, paying them nine dollars a week, $1.50 of which is deducted for government fees. There is no unemployment because every able-bodied man is in the army," Mr. Walker stated.

"In order to keep the population from worry, peacetime warfare such as the annexation of Czecho-Slobakia, Austria, and perhaps Danzig, parades, marching bands and news propaganda is flashed before their eyes. They haven't time to think of the country as a whole, they are constantly under police surveillance, food is watched because it is rationed."

Hitler Reigns Supreme

"But Hitler reigns supreme," the speaker asserted, "Is it war. He has welded his people into a fanatical whole. When some start to ask questions then will the breakup come. Externally he will be forced to make connections with the rest of the world. That time has come now. He must answer," he said.

The general thought is that there will be no war until after the harvest, Mr. Walker stated, "and anxiety is not so much the personal danger as the topsy-turvy condition the world will be thrown into both before and after it. Will there be war. I leave the answer to you. I do not know," he concluded.

Decision to hold the annual kidkar derby was made by unanimous vote during the business session of the meeting. Two other money-raising projects were discussed and committees appointed to investigate the feasibilities of the schemes. The meeting was held under the chairmanship of President Bill Hurst with Kinsmen Bert Twiddy and Geoff Marvell acting as Sergt.-at-arms and songleader respectively. Phil Huddleston was at the piano. The guest speaker was introduced by Kinsmen George Carver, while club appreciation was voiced by Kinsmen Ralph Shaw.

SLEEPING UNDER THE STARS IN ZERO WEATHER

Three Days and Three Nights by Dog Team—Red Cross Nurse Comes Through

Belleville Rotarians were favored with a very interesting address on the work of the Red Cross organization by Dr. Fred W. Routley, of Toronto, Director of Canadian Red Cross, Canadian Division, and a member of the Toronto Rotary Club. Dr. Routley told of his experiences and reactions in attending the world conference of the Red Cross in London, England, where 350 delegates from all parts of the world gathered to affirm their loyalty to Red Cross in many languages and merge all differences of opinion and politics in the work of service which the Red Cross affords.

The Red Cross delegates were guests at Buckingham Palace and were cordially greeted by the King and most graciously by the Queen Mother, the Queen being absent on account of a death in her family. Without fuss or feathers, attired simply in street wear, and attended only by two tides to make the introductions, the King made a tremendously favorable impression on the delegates present from all nations including Germany, Italy, Japan and other countries. The King impressed them not only as a sovereign, but as a man, like unto themselves.

Outpost Hospitals

Forty-three Red Cross outpost hospitals carry the work of mercy and healing to the far places and brave nurses carry on their work of healing with the utmost courage and spirit of sacrifice. Dr. Routley told of a brave Red Cross nurse who brought a T. B. patient, a boy of five years, out to Calgary Red Cross Hospital from a settler's cabin in the far north of the Peace River District, mushing by dog team over the frozen tundra, three days and three nights journey sleeping out in the open under the stars in zero weather. The boy is now the picture of health. One hundred more outpost hospitals would not be too many for the work there is to do.

Helping Veterans

While preparations are being made for a possible another world war the Red Cross is still dealing with the wreckage of the last war. Last year the sum of $171,000 was expended in helping wounded veterans of the last war back to a self-supporting basis, lifting them up from defeat and discouragement and privation to a self-respecting level. From Toronto Red Cross Club 101 veterans have gone forth to permanant positions.

In the Rainy River District $100,000 was expended helping the farmer victims of the great fire wdich swept their possessions out of existence. Buildings, implements and seed were furnished to help the settlers make a new start.

Ready When Disaster Strikes

Wherever disaster strikes the Red Cross is ready to extend the necessary assistance.

The work of the Junior Red Cross which originated in Ontario and now covers the globe, was extolled by the speaker who looks to this organization for great achievement in the future.

Introduced by Dr. E. N. Baker, to the club, Rotary appreciation was expressed to Dr. Routley for his very interesting address by Irv. Hefkey and President Mac Haig.

Guests present included Rotarians Robert Derbyshire, Arthur Black, and R. E. McInnes, Trenton, and H. L. Fair and Dr. E. A. Coulter of Stirling.

After setting fire to a large pile of household refuse, dustmen in Lille, France, were surprised to see a man, his clothing in flames, emerge from the blaze, his sleep in the trash having been disturbed.

Post office detectives in London are trying to trap a gang stealing receivers from telephone booths, and are puzzled because they say the instruments are useless for any other purpose.

UNEMPLOYMENT

ond reading to a bill drafted by Labor Minister Hipel for the introduction of unemployment insurance in Ontario. The provincial bill will be brought in if the federal government failed to enact a Dominion scheme, the Minister said.

Debate of the Hipel measure and one moved for second reading by Attorney-General Gordon Conant occupied most of the night sitting. Second reading also was given to Mr. Conant's bill which would place supervision of the Sandwich, Windsor and Amherstburg Railway Company in the hands of the Ontario Provincial Board.

Replying to Leopold Macaulay (Con. York South), who demanded the government face the fact there would be no unemployment insurance until the federal government enacted it, Premier Hepburn said it was his considered opinion there would be a federal scheme. He warned against the province rushing into a plan that might demoralize the province's industries.

Bill Approved

The bill was approved by Conservative leader George Drew and Arthur Roebuck (Lib. Toronto Bellwoods). Mr. Drew pleaded that there be no attempt to allow the federal government to believe that Ontario would go ahead with a scheme if the Dominion did not. He warned against setting up barriers among the provinces which would result if one had the insurance plan and the others did not have it.

Mr. Roebuck said it was his opinion the legislation was beyond the competence of the provinces.

Mr. Conant's bill was opposed strongly by David Croll (Lib. Windsor-Walkerville) and favored by A. C. Trottier (Lib. Essex North) and Charles G. Fletcher (Lib. Essex South). Mr. Croll reviewed the history of the line before and after its management by the Hydro Electric Power Commission terminated in 1934.

Predicting Windsor could make the radial pay if placed in charge. Mr. Croll said passing of the bill would be "the writing of a dark chapter" in the history of Windsor, which owns 81 per cent of the radial. Under Hydro, he charged, the line lost $500,000 a year for 18 years.

Second reading also was given Mr. Conant's motion to an act to change the name of the co-operative Credit Societies Act to the Credit Union Act.

Bill is Defeated

At the afternoon sitting, the legislature defeated a bill sponsored by Mr. Croll to prohibit issuance of marriage licences until the principals produced medical certificates of freedom from venereal disease. Opposing the bill, Provincial Secretary Nixon declared the section of the Marriage Act requiring a licence to be issued three days before the marriage might well be scrapped.

The licence was the last thing marrying couples thought of, said Mr. Nixon. He often had to issue special dispensations waiving the three-day rule.

"We'd just find people going to Quebec, Manitoba or Michigan to be married because they don't want to submit to the embarrassment of an examination such as this," Mr. Nixon said of Mr. Croll's bill.

Mr. Croll's bill would have dealt not only with marriages performed by authority of licence but also with those performed by authority of the publication of banns when no licence is required. In this case it would have forbidden a minister, clergyman or other person to solemnize a marriage unless the certificates of disease-freedom were produced.

Fighting Hard Battle

Ontario was fighting a hard battle to control syphilis and gonorrhea, said Mr. Croll. The time was here to protect those contemplating marriage from being tied to an infected partner. He was not concerned with protecting people from the fruit of their own sin. but there should be great care for the innocent.

The bill proposed a blood test only, not a complete physical examination that might be embarrassing to young women. Neither would the bill prohibit marriage of persons whose disease had reached the non-contagious stage.

"What do you mean by venereal disease," asked Dr. A. C. Trottier (Lib. Essex North).

"I'm no doctor,' said Mr. Croll. "gonorrhea and syphilis are the venereal diseases as far as the layman knows. If there are modern additions, I'm not aware of them."

There were farmers and livestock breeders in the House who wouldn't mate unhealthy animals, said Mr. Croll. Surely as great care should be taken with the human race.

Among a half-dozen private members' bill to reach second reading and be killed were ones sponsored by Mr. Roebuck, former Attorney General, to amend the Municipal Act and to amend the Municipal Voters' List Act. A bill from Morgan Baker (Lib. York North), to permit taxing of the bills of embalmers and funeral directors by county judges in chambers, also was killed.

Weddings

MATTHEWS—SEALES

Trenton, (Special) — A pretty spring wedding was solemnized in Canterbury Hall on Saturday evening, April 22nd, when Lillian Marguerite, oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Seales, Division Street, became the bride of Arden Anson Matthews, son of Mr. A. A. Matthews and the late Mrs. Mathews of Belleville. The ceremony was performed by Rev. F. A. Smith, rector of St. George's Anglican Church, with immediate friends of the young couple present for the occasion.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attended by Miss Lenora Scaviour of Toronto, while the groom was supported by Mr. Russell Metcalfe of the R.C.A.F.

Following the ceremony a reception for immediate friends and relatives was held at the home of the bride's parents, and later the happy couple left for a motor trip through the eastern section of the United States. Upon their return they will reside in Trenton.

MARSH HILL Y.P.U.

On Friday, April 21st., Marsh Hill Y.P.U. convened at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Frederick with thirty-five present. The singing of a hymn was followed by prayer by Rev. Mr. Cook. Two readings by Miss Edythe Cook and Grant Wright were based on the theme of the worship period "Friendship". Mrs. Wilbur Lough read the first fifteeen verses of John XV which was followed by the hymn "Wonderful Story of Love". After a short business discussion the Citizenship program, prepared by Miss Dorothy Mitts, was introduced by a reading "The Job of Man" by Jack Dafoe. A poem read by Miss Margaret Vanderwater and a reading by Leonard Marisette preceded a guitar selection by Harry Coulter. A paper "The Church and the Refugees" by Mrs. Mitts was very capably given. A beautiful solo by Aleita Horton and a reading by Hazel Detlor were followed by a fine topic by Gerry Frederick. The singing of a hymn and the repeating of the Mizpah benediction closed the meeting. Candy was served by the hostess after which all participated in games.

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A DAY of excellent prospects for happiness, advancement, expansion and progress is read from very propitious planetary configurations. It is likely that domestic, social or romantic functions may hold sway over more commonplace activities, but in the latter there is evidence of much to be gained. There may be some definite or drastic action, with possibly some lack of support from superiors or employers.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a very important year. There is promise of advancement, achievement and important matters both in business and in the personal life, bringing pleasure and prosperity. There are signs of courtship and marriage, and a possibility of increased fortunes, enhanced popularity and prestige.

A child born on this day may be large-hearted and generous, with tendencies toward luxury and indulgence. It may be devoted to social, philanthropic or educational work. In business it may be capable successful and affluent.

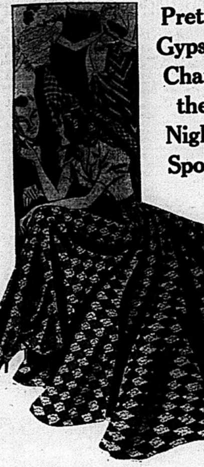
Pretty Gypsies Charm the Night Spots



Once their dancing days are over, these dresses are swell 'at-homes'

By PRUNELLA WOOD

Chanel launched one of the prettiest vogues of any season, the gypsy. If you can't have one of the originals—and neither can we—don't bother your pretty head about it. For about what you'd pay in duty on an import you can have any one of the dresses sketched.

The seated figure; a one-piece gypsy charmer of spun rayon in linen-like texture, white bodice and flowered skirt in dusty rose and white, and matching bandana. Dancing: a lace and embroidery blouse, upper left, attached to a dotted swiss skirt in tablecloth checks, with red patent girdle; upper right, white rayon blouse and striped satin skirt.

PRELUDE TO MOTHER'S DAY

Mother's Day will soon be with us . . . .the second Sunday in May, you know. And from many readers are coming requests for ideas around which an observance of this day may be planned.

Yesterday, I came across a letter written by one of the noblest and devoted of sons, Thomas Carlyle, the famous essayist and historian.

Carlyle's letter was written from his home in Edinburgh, and, as if prophetic that May was to be the month chosen for Mother's Day, it was written in May, 1822. Here is this masterpiece:

My Dear Mother—

You will find here a bonnet of Imperial chip, or simple chip, or real chip, or whatever it is, which I hope will arrive safely and be found to suit you. I think it looks as if it would fit you. I wish that it were fifty times better for your sake it would still be the most feeble testimony of what I owe to your kind affection, which has followed me unweariedly through good and evil fortune, soothening and sweetening all the days of my existence, and which I trust Providence will long, long continue for a blessing to us both.

I know that you fret about these things, and talk about expense and so forth. This is quite erroneous doctrine: the few shillings that serve to procure a little enjoyment to your frugal life are as mere nothing in the outlay of this luxurious city. If you want any other thing,I do beg that you will let me know there is not anything in which I can spend a portion of my earnings so advantageously. Tell me honestly, Do you get your tea and other things comfortably? I should be very sorry if you restricted yourself for any reasons but from choice. It would be a fine thing surely if you that have toiled for almost half a century in nourishing stalwart sons, should not now by this means have a little ease and comfort, when it lies in their power to gain it for you! I again entreat you, if you wish anything in the reach of my ability, to let me hear of it.

I entrust you with my affectionate remembrances to my father, and all the family, every one. They owe me letters now, which they cannot repay a minute too soon. . .

Farewell, my dear mother! May all Good be with you always.

Your affectionate Son,
Th. Carlyle

"May all Good be with you always". Amen to that prayer.

Manners of the Moment

Haven't you always wondered what is the proper thing for you to do in this circumstance: the hostess is chatting with a small group of friends in the living room; the telephone rings, either in the room in which they are talking or some place close by. The hostess answers the telephone. Should the guests stop talking while the hostess carries on the telephone conversation no matter how brief? If they do, it gives the impression that they are listening to her conversation. If they don't stop talking, they may prevent her hearing what is being said by the person calling. It seems to me that the solution of this quandary is for the guests to make some effort to continue the conversation, but in very soft tones, almost a whisper. This eases this otherwise awkward moment for both hostess and the guests.

RELIEF CUTS NOT TO BE RESTORED

Members Told Scale Would be Based on 25 P.C. Above Campbell Report

Toronto, April 25—(CP)—The Ontario government has no intention of restoring the reduction in relief allowances which went into effect in seven suburban Toronto municipalities April 1, according to Welfare Minister Eric Cross. The cut is scheduled to take effect in two more municipalities May 1.

The Minister announced the government's stand yesterday to a delegation of six from about 600 unemployed who marched to Queen's Park from the affected suburban areas. Previously 16 of the unemployed met E. A' Horton, Director of Provincial Relief, in a long session.

Mr. Cross told the delegation Ontario's relief scale would be based on 25 per cent above the Campbell report, which the government considered adequate. No reports of malnutrition among relief recipients had been received and Mr. Cross said the government would continue to back municipalities that removed from relief rolls recipients who refused to work.

The unemployed, who carried banners with such slogans as "give us this day our daily bread," and "1914-18 we fought; 1930-39 we slowly starve," charged relief even 35 per cent above the Campbell report was inadequate and that a reduction would work great hardship.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

They Were Too Young to Marry

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We were married a year ago, and I'm just 18. I realize now we were both too young for marriage.

When we were courting, it seemed we both had the same ideas about life. I care a lot about my husband, and he claims to care the same about me. But we've both admitted we'd rather be single. We agree that we care, but perhaps not enough. He says there's no one else.

Soon there will be a baby, and when he tells me he'd rather be single and that he doesn't care enough, it hurts me terribly. We have a steady income which is not a fortune, but we can manage on it easily and still save a little each month. Can you give me some advice?

Florence

Babies— those little miracles of delight—often prove to be a happy solution of two youthful marriages. Granted that you did marry too young, as responsible people you are no longer free agents. There's the baby to be considered, his health, happiness, and making him a good citizen. "Don't give up the ship".

Vacation From Her Engagement?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We went together for five months, and then decided to become engaged. A week ago my girl went to visit a friend out of town. After being there a few days, she wrote and asked me to see her, that she had something important to talk over. When I got there, she said "I want to break our engagement for just a week, there are some fellows here I want to go around with."

I told her if we broke up it wouldn't be for a week, but for good. I feel if she loved me, she wouldn't want to go out with other young men. I love her dearly and am puzzled to know whether I shall ask her to come back with me, or try and forget her.

To take a vacation from an engagement is a new one on me. Of course, she could have gone out with the young men and said nothing about it, and I think it was square of her to ask your consent to this unusual arrangement. Engagements are not the closed corporations they were once on a time. If the young lady has learned her lesson, why not reconcile?

In Love With a Married Man

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We found out that we are in love with each other, but his wife will not give him a divorce. Besides he is very fond of his baby, who is ten months old. We've known each other about five months.

I see him every day, but we cannot acknowledge our love. I am 16 and he's 24. I'll graduate from high school this year, and my mother says I'm too young to know my own mind. I'm willing to wait for him, but I can't be sure if his wife will ever divorce him. What should I do?

M.S.

Try to acquire some good, sound, common sense, and realize that a philandering married youth of 24 with a ten months old baby is utterly irresponsible, and not worth wasting your time over.

At the tender age of 16 you probably don't realize what an unworthy thing it is to try and break up another woman's home, especially one in which there is a little child. Here's hoping you will forget all about this unpromising specimen of husband and father.

Scourage of Smallpox Routed by Acceptance of Vaccination

No general discussion of the infectious diseases would be complete without something about smallpox One hears only of occasional cases today, but my older readers will remember when it was a scourge; when many people bore the pock-scars of the disease on their faces.

Smallpox was always a "scare" disease. People talked about it with fear. Personally, I never found it to be one-two with diphtheria when it comes to doing damage.

Of course, smallpox has been under control much longer than diphtheria. The antitoxin, or vaccine, has been known for a long time, but it is only in recent times that opposition to it has been overcome, and vaccination has become general. The result is obvious, for cases are now nothing to what they used to be. In fact, I've only seen a few cases in the past half-dozen years.

Yet I remember winters when I would vaccinate between one and two thousand people. Anybody who says that vaccination doesn't protect against smallpox is just talking through his hat. I'd like him to come here and see some of the cases I've had.

In Ontario today, there is practically no opposition to vaccination. I can remember the day, however, when there was a lot of trouble in vaccinating children. Parents would object strenuously. However they began to notice that the children who were vaccinated didn't get the disease, and those who were not vaccinated did.

When I started practice up here at Callander, I expected that outbreak of smallpox every five or six years, and I was very seldom wrong. By that time a fresh crop of youngsters would be ready for the disease. I used to feel sorry for the girls who were left with these pock-scars—and I have seen some beautiful girls who had their looks ruined by these scars. I am glad to say that these pock-scarred unfortunates are disappearing rapidly, swallowed by the thousands of new faces, fortunate enough to be born in a generation when vaccination has become the rule not the exception.

Getting people to realize the value of vaccination wasn't easy either, for the country was full of people who had been vaccinated and, because of carelessness or uncleanliness, gotten an infection in their arms. Such people often became very hostile to immunization as it was practised then.

In order to overcome this animosity, I'd wait until I had a real bad case of smallpox in a community and then I'd invite all the people opposed to vaccination to come with me and have a look through the window at the victim. Usually I didn't have any trouble after that. I'd just get out my vaccine and do up the whole lot of them.

In Ontario we are trying to vaccinate the children in the schools. In this way, in the course of a generation every person will be immunized against smallpox—that is, all but those who still object to it, and they are getting scarcer all the time.

SLANG IS APT

An article on military airplanes, published the other day, contained this passage: "The engine mounts, like other parts, have been beefed up to withstand the strains of terminal dives and other extreme manoeuvres." I do not recall having seen "beefed up" before, but I had not the slightest doubt that it meant "made thicker, heavier and stronger." This is good slang. It meets the two requirements of being, first, immediately comprehensible, and, second, of economizing words. My guess is that "to beef up" is a more or less permanent contribution to speech.—Baltimore Sun.

THE GOLDEN GIRL

—by—

Agnes Louise Provost and Ladbroke Black

It was quiet and deserted here. No hand had touched it since her last visit. No hand would touch it after she left. It simply waited for something that never came.

She went into the charming living room. That was the table where Jack had put his gifts for her; there was one of the magazines, still untouched, which he had bought to give the place the look of a home. She knew now why he had done it that way. He had wanted it to look like a home, to her as well as to him, but she had looked with eyes that would not see. Over there he had stood when he had given his brief refusal of the alms she had offered him in place of the love he desired. She saw him again, but this time he was a stiffly erect figure in a borrowed ulster, anxious only to get away from her.

"Oh, Jack, I want you so!"

X X X

Somewhere in the rear a bell rang.

She sat up suddenly. Who could be coming here? An agent, perhaps, but she did not want to see anyone. She sat very quiet, waiting for the unknown person to go away.

The bell rang again, and this time she arose impatiently. It was silly to sit there and hide.

She went out into the hall and opened the door.

Frances Payne stood in front of her, with curling lip and triumphant eyes.

"So glad to find you at home," she said suavely. "I came to return your letter."

She held in her finger tips in a crumpled envelope, addressed to "Mrs. John Moreland, Granliden Apartments."

The sheer insolence of it, the arrogant cruelty, aroused Gloria to battle. What had she to be ashamed of? She had made a bitter mistake, but her life was clean. She was Jack's wife, and now at last she gloried in it.

She took the envelope as coolly as it was offered.

"Thank you, but as it is palpably an empty envelope you are giving yourself unnecessary inconvenience. Will you come in?"

Mrs. Payne entered. Her eyes took quick account of the rooms, the furnishings, the faint but evident air of disuse. They came back to Gloria, triumphantly accusing.

"Quite domestic. A very pretty little nest, but doesn't it seem rather deserted?"

"Naturally, I live at the Ritz." Gloria's color was deepening as she moved calmly to the nearest chair. "As for my reasons, you will have to excuse me from confiding them. They concern no one but my husband and myself.' '

"Your — husband?" Mrs. Payne drawled the words maddeningly, and laughed. It was a soft little laugh, low and insulting and intolerable. Under the blazing affront of it Gloria's face whitened, but she kept control of herself. Her hand reached out for the expensive trifle of a purse which lay on the table beside her. In it, in a tiny chamois bag, lay a plain gold ring. There were initials engraved on the inside, and a date.

She held it up, looking at Frances, level-browed and angry.

"There is my wedding ring. My marriage certificate is in my safe deposit box at the bank, I placed it there because I discovered that someone had been prying into my personal papers in my absence. I know now who it was."

CHAPTER XXII

Gloria arose, very quiet and coolly poised.

"In the circumstances, it will be impossible to have you remain with me any longer. Cecile will pack your trunks this evening."

In that moment Gloria scored heavily. Frances raised her small head haughtily.

"You are quite right; it is entirely impossible. Good afternoon —Mrs. Moreland."

She half turned and then looked back with a smile of cold hostility. Carelessly tucked under one arm, as if forgotten, she carried a folded newspaper, an unusual thing for her. She dropped it on the table.

"I gather that you have not seen this?"

Frances Payne's voice came again.

"I fear you are not very well informed as to your husband's whereabouts. He took the road, alone and probably unarmed, at two o'clock in the morning in pursuit of a murderer and has not been heard from since. Strange that no one notified you.' '

Gloria's eyes raised only for a moment to rest on a face white with its own anguish, but relentless in hatred of her.

"Get out!" she said sternly, and Frances went, beaten again in a moment of triumph.

The door closed. Gloria had not seen that Frances while she was reading those headlines had quietly possessed herself once more of that incriminating envelope, but even if she had known she would scarcely have cared just now.

What had happened between two o'clock in the morning and the hour when she and Edson had found Jack? And where had he gone now?

A few hours later she knew. She came back to the hotel to find evening papers shrieking their news in hysterical headlines. Young Jack Moreland, nephew of the murdered woman, had caught up with the murderer in a lonely spot and had killed him. He had walked into a police station in town shortly before noon and had given himself up. Details were lacking because he had collapsed immediately and was delirious, but there had evidently been a stiff fight, as Moreland had a bullet wound in the chest and another in his arm.

Gloria pushed the paper aside with a shudder. She saw him again beside her in the car, with one hand creeping up to the shoulder that he had held so stiffly, his face pale and drawn.

"Don't mention to anyone that you have seen me today. Promise!"

And she had promised.

"I want to go to him!" she choked. But she could not go. She had no right. She had thrown away her right to be with him.

X X X

"Mademoiselle perhaps is ill?

Cecile looked anxiously at the scarcely touched tray which Gloria had pushed away from her. "But that so tender bit of little bird—if mademoiselle will but try him?"

"Thank you, Cecile, you are very thoughtful."

"Ah, but it is the pleasure to serve mademoiselle! It is of a pleasantness to be alone with mademoiselle."

Cecile discreetly vanished and Gloria sat soberly thinking. Three or four newspapers lay near her. She pulled one of them toward her to look over it again. Jack's picture, very young and handsome, looked at her from the first page, with photographs of Beechwood and of that rough lonely spot where the second tragedy had taken place. Motor police, diligently scouring the country, had discovered it before nightfall on Friday, with the trampled weeds and the trail which led through the strip of woods, up a rocky slope to the rim where it dropped away suddenly, at the edge of an abandoned quarry. At the bottom of the quarry they had found the body of a man.

Parsons! The name haunted her. There was no doubt of his identity. Miss Endicott's secretary and the butler both identified him as a man who had "done business" with Miss Endicott, although the business was not mentioned. The proprietor of the garage where Parsons had hired his car had identified both car and man.

The social prominence of the Endicotts and Morelands only added to the morbid interest in the case, which flared again when word came from a bustling midwestern city that Jack Moreland had been for several months on the payroll of a certain automobile factory, a cheerful worker in overalls. In the eyes of the public Jack Moreland was a hero, but in the eyes of the law he had killed a man.

Through all the turmoil he lay weak and ill, slowly coming out of delirium. Two bullet wounds, unattended for hours, were taking their toll of him.

Gloria pressed her hands over aching eyeballs. To sit here in her rooms was maddening. She decided to order the car and go out somewhere, anywhere, but Edson was not to be found.

Late in the afternoon Cecile appeared, more than usually demure.

"Monsieur Edson had asked to speak with mademoiselle."

"Very well, Cecile. I will see Edson here."

Edson came in, very trig in his chauffeur's livery. He was excited and too boyish to show it.

"Miss Staunton, I thought maybe you'd like—you'd be interested to know that Mr. Moreland has been acquitted. Coroner's jury, you know. They've brought a verdict of self-defense, and the District Attorney says he won't ask for an indictment."

Gloria stood up. She had a queerly intangible feeling, as if she were floating about the room.

"Oh—thank you, Edson. I am very glad." Her hand on the back of a chair steadied her. "I was afraid—there being no witnesses—only his own word—"

"Yes, miss I was worried about it myself, being mixed up in it that way. I never in my life did so hate to drive away and leave a man!"

"Yes, Edson, so did I. I felt that something was wrong. But he wanted it. "You are quite sure about the trial, Edson? What did they say?"

"Well, it's up to the District Attorney, and he says that circumstances being as they are, he won't ask for an indictment. And if Mr. Moreland ain't indicted he won't be tried. You see, people talked about motives of revenge, and all that, because Mr. Moreland had been chasing this fellow Parsons, but any man can do that just to bring a criminal to justice, and Mr, Moreland wasn't armed. And then they showed that Parsons run his car off the road when he hadn't any further chance of getting away and started to run up the slope.

"You know there's a double curve there, and when the roadster came roaring up the lights were turned square on that slope for just a second and showed Parsons running. That's the way Mr. Moreland says he saw him, and the police had men up there one night trying the trick and it worked just the way he said. He stopped in a hurry and the car upset, but he landed soft and went up the slope after his man.

"He caught sight of Parsons near the top waiting for him, sort of crouching. He guessed maybe Parsons had a gun, but he went for him just the same. Parsons fired three times. One shot went wild and two hit him. And there were just three shots gone from Parsons' revolver. Then they grappled and he got the gun, but Parsons gave way a step too far and they both went over the edge and smashed into the old quarry.

"He said he didn't know anything for a long time, but when he came to it was just coming on daylight and Parsons was dead, lying under him. And it was hours before he had strength enough to climb out of the old quarry. He thought he'd killed Parsons, but two doctors said that what finished him was a fractured skull from landing on an edge of rock and not the grip that Mr. Moreland had on his windpipe. And that's all, miss."

Edson finished his rapid recital and stiffened again into the dignity of a well-trained chauffeur.

"Thank you, Edson. It was very good of you."

That was all that she could say then, and Edson backed out discreetly. He was by no means blind or lacking in understanding.

CHAPTER XXIII

In Mrs. Dickerson's elaborate boudoir Frances Payne sat very much at ease and sweetly criticized the array of a dozen gowns which had been sent for her hostess' inspection.

"You would not like the rose at all, dear. I wonder at Theophile for suggesting such a thing. This green and silver is just your style."

In her heart Mrs. Dickerson, stout and middle-aged, had yearned for the rose gown. But she meekly relinquished it and turned to the green and silver which Frances had commended. It occurred to her that Frances could be a great help to her if she would.

Of this Mrs. Payne was perfectly aware. She knew that she could make herself indispensable to the stout ambitious lady, and just now Mrs. Dickerson was indispensable to her.

She held up a drift of silver gauze and smiled.

"The first evening I met my late friend, Miss Staunton, she wore a gown of green and silver, a charming little thing, but not so distinguished as this. Poor infatuated Bill Daimler called her the Sea Foam Girl. And to think that I undertook to chaperone that young woman!"

Her laugh was lazily scornful. Mrs. Dickerson looked up with a curiosity ill concealed.

"I don't know anything about her, Frances, except that she was very rude to me in declining the trip up the coast at the very last moment, when I had made up the whole party just because some young men wanted to meet her. It placed me in a very awkward position. I was afraid that something unpleasant must have happened to make you leave her so suddenly."

"It was impossible for me to stay longer. I discovered some things about her. One of them is that she doesn't always call herself Staunton. I think there was a secret marriage somewhere—if there was nothing worse. Really I had not intended to speak of it at all, but I know you are discreet."

"Of course!" Mrs. Dickerson nodded eagerly. "But that is simply outrageous! People ought to know, don't you think?"

"Perhaps. But I hate to be involved in a scandal like that. Did you know that she was once poor Miss Endicott's secretary? I have reasons to believe that Miss Harriet had to discharge her, and shortly after that she appeared at The Bluffs as an heiress.

"Speaking of Miss Harriet," Frances suggested adroitly, "do you suppose Jack will stay at the hospital or be taken to Beechwood? It seems a pity to send the poor boy there with only servants to care for him."

Mrs. Dickerson bridled visibly.

"Jack will come here, of course! We are the only relatives he has left. I wouldn't think of allowing him to go with servants or strangers. I shall telephone Matthew to make the arrangements at once."

The next morning, eagerly reading the newspaper account of Jack's acquittal, Gloria came on one little item which blotted out the sunshine from the sky.

"Young Moreland was taken last night to the house of a relative, Mr. Matthew Dickerson of this city, where he will remain until fully recovered."

She looked at it in dismay. How far reaching one little act could be! Useless to try to see Jack at the house of Mrs. Dickerson who had plainly shown her offense over the yachting incident.

She went over to her desk and began to write hurriedly. At least they would let him receive letters as soon as he was better.

Little by little life came back to Jack Moreland. He lay in a quiet upstairs room in the Dickerson mansion, a room of restful spaces and shaded lights, where steps came and went softly and the noise of the outer world was only a distant murmur. There were nurses by day and by night, quiet and cool-fingered; Mrs. Dickerson hovering over him at intervals bringing with her a sense of bustle and stir, and through it all Frances Payne, appearing and reappearing like a shining thread in a dark fabric. When she first came he wondered in a groping way if Gloria were there too. But no Gloria appeared, and because he was so very tired he stopped wondering and sank again into the sleep of weakness.

Then things cleared for him, but still he lay in the big room and still Frances came and went. Still no Gloria. No word from Gloria all this time.

Letters came, swarms of them. He went through them with quick nervous fingers, but the one that he looked for he did not find. Mrs. Payne supervised the giving out of his mail and Mrs. Payne well knew Gloria's writing. There had in fact been two letters, which Frances had read and tossed into her grate.

He pushed the tray away and sagged back among his pillows.

"Thanks. I'll read them later."

After that he lay quiet for a long time

She could have written, he thought somberly, without the faintest risk to herself. She could have written—if she had cared to. Others had, friends, acquaintances, servants, the entire force of McGilvary's Garage, and people whose very existence he had almost forgotten. Only Gloria had passed him in silence—washed her hands of him. Perhaps she was relieved to be rid of him.

And yet she had been kind, almost tender, on that ghastly ride down from the old quarry.

The doctor came and found him tired and morose.

"He is brooding over this thing," he said later out in the hall. "Mrs. Payne, I appoint you a committee of one to keep my patient cheerful."

After that Frances was with him still more frequently. She read to him, talked to him, arranged his flowers, entertained him with bits of gossip about people they both knew. But never a word of Gloria Staunton.

"It's awfully good of you, France, to waste so much time on a derelict."

"It is purely professional pride," she assured him gaily. "I was visiting Mrs. Dickerson when you came and the doctor appointed me sub-deputy-assistant nurse. Don't I do it nicely? Please flatter me a little."

"You're a great success." He smiled, but he looked puzzled. "But I thought you were at the Ritz."

"I was." Frances dropped her eyes and seemed to hesitate. Then she raised them appealingly. "I left rather suddenly. Miss Staunton is a charming and impulsive girl, but our traditions are different. I could not brook some things, so I left. I suppose that to us who have always had more or less wealth it does not seem so important. And then the conventions mean more to us."

The ugly insinuation was delicately made. She saw his lips tighten.

"Dear Jack," she murmured, "I wish I could make you forget all the dreadful things you have been through." She half knelt beside the bed, her charming brown head very near his own with eyes and lips that dared and invited. "I—we want to make up to you for what you have suffered."

He could have raised one hand slightly and brought her alluring face close to his own. But he merely patted the hand near him, a trifle awkwardly.

"You have done a great deal," he said hastily. "After all we have to fight our own battles, but it is good to have friends."

She sought out Mrs. Dickerson, eager and pliable in her skilful hands.

"Have you noticed how moody Jack seems? I am sure he is brooding over his awful experience, as the doctor said. Don't you think a sea voyage would blow those morbid fancies away? You were talking yesterday about a southern cruise in the Sea Gull, I should be so glad to remain here and look after the servants if you care to go."

"Indeed you will go with us!" Mrs. Dickerson was already bustling with a new excitement. "It will be just the thing for Jack, and we will have such a lovely trip. My dear, I will see Matthew about it at once."

It appeared in the papers shortly, a small paragraph in contrast to the scare-heads of a few weeks ago. Mr. Jack Moreland, convalescing from his wounds, had left on the Dickerson yacht for a voyage in southern waters.

On another page as an item of social news was the statement that Mrs. Richard Payne was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Dickerson on their yacht Sea Gull, which was sailing that day for a tour of the Caribbean ports.

Gloria let the paper drop and stared stonily out of the window. He had recovered sufficiently to take this trip, but her letters were unnoticed. He had gone without a word to her.

That was his answer—and her punishment.

CHAPTER XXIV

Beechwood was to be sold. Home of the Endicotts for uncounted generations, mellowed by time and hallowed by tradition, it was to go into alien hands, burdened, it was whispered, by mortgages which would leave little enough for a fast vanishing estate.

Gloria heard some of the flying rumors. The estate was a shell which had collapsed at the first touch. For years Miss Endicott had been living beyond her income, mortgaging here, selling there, investing flightily, all to secure money for the style of living which she had firmly believed to be the right and duty of an Endicott.

Gloria began to see why it was that the self-willed, deluded woman had plunged so heavily in reckless investment in a last frantic effort to rehabilitate for Jack the solid fortune that she had let slip through her fingers. It had made her, in her enormous ignorance, an easy dupe for Parsons. Gloria could imagine the terror of those last days, the passionate effort of a frightened old woman to assure herself that all was well. She could be sorry for Miss Endicott now.

Meantime she sent a letter to Mr. Carver. It told him the things she had meant to say months ago.

He came by the next limited, but he did not go to the Granliden Apartments. He came instead to the Ritz and asked for Miss Staunton. There was a comforting firmness in the grip of his hand.

"What can I do for you?"

"I am almost ashamed to ask anything of you," she confessed. "I should have told you this long ago, but at first I was afraid, and then—"

"I see, 'John Carver' was only a name on a letterhead and you did not know what he might do. As a matter of fact," he added, "I suspected something of the kind and verified it later. Besides, when the Endicott murder occurred, your husband's name and picture were in all the papers, but no mention of a wife." He smiled again, but became serious before the stricken look in her eyes.

"However, that makes no difference. But when you married you fulfilled the terms of the will. Your uncle could have gone further and made the terms more binding, but he did not. Now, what else?"

"I should like to buy Beechwood. Miss Endicott's place, Mr. Moreland's home. It is heavily mortgaged and will have to go. I want you to get it for me so that he will not know that I am doing it."

The lawyer pursed his lips thoughtfully and nodded. Perhaps he was hearing again the crisp voice of a young husband briefly declining to have a share of his wife's fortune settled on him.

"Very good idea, I'm sure. I will see the agent at once." At the door he turned again with a wise little nod. "Some day I hope you will both be there. He is a fine boy and very much in love, if my eyes are worth as much as I think they are."

Gloria smiled because she must and shook her head. In love? Yes, he had been then, but she had thrown it away and now another woman was by his side only too eager to take him from her.

It was all done quietly and smoothly. In a week's time Beechwood had been bought in by Carver and Sara Dalton was established there as caretaker.

Not all of Beechwood had been for sale. Originally a large tract, the Beechwood lands still stretched back into acres of farm and wood and pasture land long held idle until it ended in an irregular strip not far from the village, with a bleak old mill, long abandoned, by the side of the cheerful little "river" that wandered through. Some bygone Endicott had started a factory there, a little offshoot of the great Endicott mills which had founded the family fortunes, and ghostly looms still stood there in dusty darkness. This was the property out of all of his vanishing heritage that Jack had chosen to retain. It was puzzling.

Cruising lazily in southern waters Jack Moreland came back to health and then to restlessness. He insisted on getting reports from his agent at home, winced a trifle under the news that Beechwood must be sold, but accepted it grimly. He was learning how little would be left to him. He was getting better rapidly, but the restlessness grew.

At Colon he announced his decision.

"You have been wonderfully good to me and I should be delighted to finish the cruise with you, but now that I am on my feet again I must get back home. There are things I must attend to there. I think I shall catch the boat to New Orleans and take the next train north."

Mrs. Dickerson heard him with voluble dismay, Frances Payne with rigid anger.

"Jack, I believe you want to go," she said reproachfully.

"I must, France. I have business to attend to."

Joan has just returned from one of her frequent trips across the street to tell a neighbour she is wanted on the telephone. "Very well, Joan, I'll take the message," says Mother, "and you can run over again with it later."

Ever since Joan's mother agreed to take a message or two for them, most telephone calls seem to be for the neighbours. Not because they can't afford telephone service; almost everybody can, now. It's just one of those awkward situations. Some day, however, Joan will rush in with the news: "Mummy, they're getting a telephone!" and Mother will reply with a smile: "Isn't that nice, Joan," and mean it!

Port Arthur Bear Cats Earn Trip to Olympics Next Year By Winning Sr. Hockey Title

Defeat Montreal Royals in Fourth Game of Series 6-5

PACED BY JUNIOR

Edgar Laparde Scores Two Goals to Pass Winner's Attack

(By Robert Clarke Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Montreal, April 25 (CP)— The Allan Cup, highest prize in senior amateur hockey in the Dominion, rested today in the hands of Port Arthur Bear Cats while to Montreal Royals went the consolation of coming second best in the ice classic.

The Bear Cats, a team composed entirely of players from the head of the lakes, defeated Royals 6-5 here last night before a paid admission of 10,836 fans to take the best-of-five series with the loss of only one game. Royals won the third game 6-4, while Bear Cats took the first two 6-5 and 3-1.

In succeeding to the crown won last year by Trail Smoke Eaters of British Columbia, the Bear Cats earned the right also to represent Canada next year at the Olympic games.

Second Time For Ports

It makes the second time that a team from Port Arthur has represented Canada at the Olympics. The Ports competed at Germany in 1936 but the only member of that team with the club now is goalie Jakie Nash.

Also in the 1936 squad as captain, however, was Herman Murray, defence star with the present edition of Royals. Murray and several other Montrealers were drafted to the team which was picked to represent the Dominion although it had not won the Allan Cup the year previous.

Halifax Wolverines captured the trophy in 1935 by defeating the Ports but four of the Wolves were barred from the team for asking for remuneration for their families while they were away in Europe. It was decided then to send the Ports over in place of the Halifax team.

Presented With Cup

Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Transport and member of Parliament for Port Arthur was presented with the Allan Cup immediately after the game. The exuberant Bear Cats took the trophy to their hotel where it was filled with champagne. Then the players and Coach Eddie (Jammy) Manahan each took a drink from the bowl.

The Bear Cats gained the deciding victory on a spectacular spurt that netted three goals within three minutes late in the third period and gave them the margin to take care of a tally scored by Gordon Crutchfield for the Royals with only 46 seconds of play.

Leading the Port Arthur attack, as he had in the three previous games, little Edgar Laprade sniped two goals last night to run his total for the series to six. The 50-pound centreman was the individual star of the round, although he was outscored by a goal by Pete Morin of Royals.

Brothers Spark Drive

With Royals ahead 4-3 and less than 10 minutes of the game left, he and his brother Bert, sparked the drive that sent the Cats ahead to stay last night, Bert, a husky defenceman, scored a singlehanded goal to knot the score at 4-4 and almost from the face-off Edgar was through for a goal to make it 5-4.

Hardly had the excitement from this tally died down than the dynamic centre had manoeuvred Bob Manahan, brother of the coach, into position for what proved the winning goal. After that the best Royals could do was Crutchfield's score in the last minute that only served to make the defeat more heart breaking for the Montreal team.

The fourth contest was by far the best of the series with neither team slackening pace during the entire game. Edgar Laprade scored his first goal in the opening period, while Don Gordon and Bones McCormack were the other Port Arthur scorers. Besides Morin's two and the last goal by Crutchfield, Ken Murray and Buddy O'Connor scored for Royals.

McGILL STAR MOVING?

Leader in the march of McGill University to the eastern Canada intercollegiate football title last fall, was quarterback Ronnie Perowne, ABOVE, who also did an excellent chore as centre on the university's senior hockey champions. Rumor hath it that Ronnie may be found next fall in Toronto, performing his signal-calling duties for Balmy Beach in the O.R.F.U.

NEWARK BEARS HANDED FOURTH LOSS OF SEASON

Champions of Last Year Unable to Get Right Foot Forward

MONTREAL ON TOP

Team Sponsored by Brooklyn Leading Way in International

(By The Associated Press)

It seems the chronicles of International League baseball doings will have to look elsewhere than to Montreal for their laughs this season. When the club that finished sixth in 1938 formed a working agreement with Brooklyn by accepting Burleigh Grimes, former Dodger manager, as its pilot and other aid from Brooklyn, the writing folks were hopeful. Perhaps there was another set of "daffiness boys" in the making.

But the Royals have squelched that hope by winning impressively four of their first five games. The game they lost to Baltimore was the only bad one they've played, but of course, there have been some oddities, such as the start of yesterday's tilt, when they beat Syracuse Chiefs 6-2.

First bat, Montreal belted Dick Midkiff for five hits and as many runs while having only one man retired. Frank Peace halted this rally, then Francis Edgar Malseed went in to pitch for Montreal. He passed the first two batsmen and was promptly derricked. Xavier Rescigno took up the job and gave only seven hits the rest of the way.

Rochester Red Wings, sharing the league lead with Montreal, ran into a 13-3 drubbing at Jersey City and dropped back into a three-way tie for second with Jersey Giants and Buffalo Bisons. Buffalo handed the champion Newark Bears their fourth setback in five starts, 8-4. Toronto and Baltimore took a day off after opening the doubleheader season Sunday.

Relief Hurler of Phillies Making Talk in National By Smart Hurling in Pinches

Already Has Saved Two Games and Won Another

BRIDGES WINS

Cubs and Yankees, Finalists Last Year, Are Again Out in Front

(By Sid Feder Associated Press Sports Writer).

Today's baseball hero—Walter William Beck, the relief hurler who is making talk in the National League right now.

But Walter William needs more introduction than that because though he's been around a long time in the big baseball show he is only just now getting himself talked about.

The records show Beck was with Brooklyn in 1934. Altogether this six-foot-two right-hander has been kicking around baseball for 15 years. He was 33 years old last week. In '24, he was with St. Louis Browns before "graduating" to the Brooklyns.

There's a combination for you—The Dodgers and the Browns. And he wound up with the Phillies. He's from Decatur, Ill., has been with 12 clubs in eight leagues in 15 years, and the Phils signed him up as a free agent this spring after he'd been knocking around the Pacific Coast League four seasons, winning 59 and losing 71.

He was just another guy named Joe when the season opened a week ago, but Walter William has already saved two games and won another for the Phils.

Last week he went three scoreless innings against the Dodgers in one game to save a 12-inning tie. Two days later, he was back against Brooklyn again in the 12th inning and won.

Given Hurry Call

And yesterday Doc Prothro gave him the hurry call again, this time against the Giants. The New Yorkers had pushed five runs across off Max Butcher and Jim Henry in a big eighth inning and had the winning runs on base. But Beck ambled in from the bull pen and gave the business to Bill Terry's heaviest ball belters. He got Harry Danning on a grounder to end the eighth, then in the ninth fanned master Melvin Ott and Frank Demaree and retired Zeke Bonura on a fly, to rescue a 6-5 win for the Phils.

This boosted the Quaker City citizens into fourth place in the league standing and dropped the Giants and St. Louis Cardinals downstairs. The Cards and Cincinnati Reds were idle.

Chicago Cubs and New York Yankees, last year's pennant winners, stayed out in front in their respective loops, with no signs of being overhauled. The Cubs knocked off Pittsburgh Pirates 6-2, with that ex-American leaguer, lefty Earl Whitehill, turning in a seven-hitter in his Cub debut. The Yanks' crooning cowboy, Monte Pearson, twirled a four-hitter to beat the Athletics 2-1.

Bridges Wins Again

A couple of 32-year oldsters, Tommy Bridges and Lou Fette, also had a hand in the day's pitching classics, each winning his second decision of the season with a six-hit elbowing job. Tennessee Tommy fanned five in tossing Detroit Tigers to a 4-2 edge over the Browns, and Missouri Lou breezed in with a 4-1 decision for Boston's Bees over the Dodgers, thereby pinning a defeat on Van Lingle Mungo in his first start since last August. One of Mungo's side-armers got away in this one and "beaned" Al Simmons, sending him to a hospital overnight with a slight concussion.

Despite Jimmy Foxx's No. 1, Washington Senators nipped the Red Sox 10-9 in 10 innings. Cleveland's pitchers only walked 15 batters, which made it just a "passing fancy" for Chicago White Sox to come through 9-3.

SWITCH LEAGUES—DOING ALLRIGHT

Two of the National League's big question marks this year are cast-offs from the rival loop, Al Simmons and Zeke (Bananas) Bonura, and both brought smiles from their supporters to start the season by turning in notable performances to confound their American League critics......if they can keep it up. Al Simmons, ABOVE, who twice led the junior circuit at bat while with Philadelphia Athletics, is patrolling an outfield post for Boston Bees this year, after sojourns with Detroit and Chicago in his former league prior to being waived out. Punch at the plate has been the Bee's crying need for some years and Al can still hit. In the opening game he got three bingles in seven attempts, his last one driving in the winning run in the 12th inning. Bonura, alongside, first baseman with Washington Senators and Chicago White Sox in the American League before his winter sale to New York Giants, has always been esteemed as a hitter, but his fielding has brought tears to many eyes. It was also figured he'd have trouble with National League curve ball pitching, so in the seasonal opener he banged out a homer with two on and a couple of singles. What the summer will bring remains to be seen.

WANT TO JOIN

The Port Huron Post of the American Legion wishes to join with war veterans of Canada in paying honor to the King and Queen. A communication has been received by the Sarnia branch of the Canadian Legion to this effect.

Whether it will be possible to make such arrangements is not immediately known. It is to be hoped, however, that it can be done. It is a gracious suggestion and is indicative of the high regard held by the people of the United States for Their Majesties. — Windsor Star.

SHUTOUT BEGINNING

Lou Fette, the "old man rookie" of Boston Bees in 1937, gave promise of keeping up the good work he has maintained for his two major league years by turning in a three-hit performance to open the season. Of course he was pitching at home, a "pitchers' field," and the opposition was the futile Phillies, but it's still a nice way to get things under way.

DOMINOES WIN 2ND STRAIGHT

Windsor Alumni Defeated 51-33 in Basketball Finals

The Willows, Victoria, April 25—(CP)—Victoria Dominoes defeated Windsor Alumni 51-33 here last night for their second straight victory in the Canadian Men's Senior Basketball championship final and became heavy favorites to end the best-of-five series tonight. Dominoes won the opener Saturday, 37-29.

A disastrous second quarter set the stage for Alumni's second straight defeat in the series. Although they battled Dominoes on even terms in the other three periods they were never able to overcome a Victoria lead built up in the second when the easterners were outscored 20-4.

Chuck Chapman, star guard and one of the two Domino veterans who successfully entertained Windsor-Walkerville for the Dominion title in 933, headed the second quarter scoring spree as he tossed in five baskets.

Hank Rowe, Chapman's partner on defence, topped the scorers with 5 points while Chuck was a close second with 13.

Ian Allison, 20-year-old forward, led Windsor marksmen with 12 points.

PICTON TO HAVE SMART BALL TEAM

P. E. County Team Will be Home-Brews in Entirety

Picton, April 25 (Special)—When and if a Bay of Quinte Intermediate baseball league is definitely assured, Picton will be ready with a strong team. At the annual meeting of the Picton club, there appeared to be some doubt as to what Belleville is planning to do. Kingston Locos have stated they do not plan to play ball, due to the fact that other teams wished them to accept a higher rating than the other teams. The locals felt that they would have little chance against a Kingston team, which has senior players available and have added imports this year.

Much enthusiasm was shown at the annual meeting. Last year's team is intact and there are two good hurlers, Harold Abbott and Gordon Dainard, with Ron Church ready if necessary. The veteran has lost little of his cunning.

Mayor Nesbitt McKibbon was elected president again this year. E. B. Purtelle of Bloomfield is vice president, Louie Yanover as secretary-treasurer will be assisted by George Morden.

The locals will offer a home-brew team and are just waiting for good weather to get into action. Arrangements are being made with the County Council for use of the ball park at the fair grounds.

Washington baseball fans hope they have another Walter Johnson in Joe Krakauskas, Hamilton's gift to the major leagues. In previous years "Krakky," as he's known around the American League, has been as wild as the proverbial March hare and twice has been relegated to the minors owing to his inability to locate the old platter. However, President Clark Griffith, himself a great pitcher in his day, took "Krakky" under his personal tutorage, despite the fact Manager Bucky Harris cried: "take him away, get him out of my sight," one day after Krakauskas had walked 14 in four inning. Towards the end of last sesaon Harris used "Krakky" frequently with more than expected success. Last year Krakauskas won seven and lost five for an earned run average of 3.12—the third best in the league. Old timers say Krakauskas has as much speed as Walter Johnson, but it must be remembered, however, that Johnson possessed uncanny control, something Krakauskas has yet to prove. Incidentally "Krakky" was given a few choice words of assistance by the great Lefty Grove, who is creditted with having corrected Johnny Vandermeer's wildness early last year also.

Apparently the sports arena holds the outlet for the broadening of one's vocabulary; at least so we are to believe after reading where a University of Toronto professor is attending wrestling and boxing bouts in the Queen City with the hope in mind of extending and broadening his vocabulary. Of course sports chatter and slang, only used verbally in years past, has more recently invaded the sport pages of the daily newspaper and is being accepted as part of the present-day public vocabulary. However, for the greater part today's sport writers do not whittle straight to the phraseology of the sports environment, as can be seen in the recent achievement of New York sports columnist, who received a distinction which mared him as one of the foremost members of the literati. Years ago it was considered vulgar in the more refined classes to attend prize fights and professional wrestling shows, but such is not the case in this day and age. Patrons in full dress attend these sporting events today, which no doubt prompted the Toronto University professor in his plans, but then professors are generally known for the characteristic things they do.

One year Hank Greenberg came within two of setting a new runs batted-in record. The next year he missed by three a new home run record. One of these years all the breaks will go his way and he may crack both records. Hank is stronger, smarter, more confident than ever before. This may be his year.

Greenberg says he will concentrate on a runs-batted-in record. That is known as a ball player's record. It doesn't excite general interest nearly as much as the home run mark, but it wins more games. Two years ago Greenberg drove in 183 runs, one short of Lou Gehrig's best. That was Hank's top season.

The local softball executive have tried in vain to contact the R.C.A.F. softball moguls, without much success to date, however. Rumours are still rife to the effect the "Flyers" desire to affiliate with Belleville softball interests, but when approached the officials of the Airmen's sports club denied any knowledge of softball activities around the Air Base. However, the local "mush-ballers" feel the Flyers should play all of the games in Belleville providing they eventually affiliate locally. The local softball set-up of five clubs is much better than is the case of Kingston, where only two teams have come forward with intentions of operating to date.

Congratulations are the order of the day for the Port Arthur Bear Cats, 1939 world amateur mockey champions and winners of the Allan Cup. The 'Cats eliminated the Montreal Royals three games to one by virtue of a 6-5 victory last night in one of the most thrilling Allan Cup games of the current season. The Laprade boys paced the new champions and scored the majority of the winners goals. Port Arthur scored two and Montreal one goal in the last few minutes of the game to give the fans the most thrilling and tense moments they had enjoyed this year. Following the game the customary back-slapping and congratulations were the order of the night with the ice at the Montreal Forum literally covered with players, newspaper reporters and photographers. And the Allan Cup remains in the west.

Local addicts of motorcycle racing will be glad to know the Oshawa Parks Commission reversed their decision, relative to the matter of motorcycle racing on the track at the Oshawa Exhibition Park, and will permit such races again this year. Incidentally the Quinte Motorcycle Club is preparing to commence work on their proposed quarter mile track out at Stoney Lonesome soon, where dirt track racing will be introduced later in the season.

Did You Know—The Cubs and Yankees, last year's world's series contestants, are again leading their respective leagues?....Rosen got a hit, Heath got two bingles while Selkirk went hitless to account for Canada's efforts in the majors yesterday....The Cornwall Bisons, of the Canadian-American League, have already signed seven Canadians, all of whom are training with the Bisons at Glenside, Pa....Bill Stewart may be back refereeing in the N.H.L. next season, but may not be too welcome in Chicago by Major McLaughlin, who fired him ....We expect to see Carl Hubbell out hurling for the Giants soon; King Carl has been pitching to the batters of late and reports his medical-attended flipper in good shape, which made Skipper Bill Terry smile for the first time this season.

estates exceeding £50,000 in value.

Sir John said changes in taxation would bring total revenue for 1939 to £942,600,000, providing a surplus of £156,000.

Most of defence costs will be met by borrowing.

Willing To Pay For World Peace.

The chancellor concluded by saying:

"The expenditure to meet defence needs is approved by the general sense of the country and of parliament.

"Heavy as the burden is, the country is willing to pay for world peace."

One of the features of the budget was the announcement that the government would spend £630,000,000 (approximately $2,948,400,000) and possibly "more" for defence.

"The country is thoroughly aroused to further sacrifice," Sir John said in announcing the huge total for defence expenditure.

"There must be additional taxation," he warned an intent house.

Half of Budget For Defence.

At least half of the defence costs will be met by loans. But the chancellor explained £24,00,000 would have to be raised by additional taxation "to bridge the gap".

Britain will spend nearly 50 per cent of an estimated budget of nearly £1,300,000 for defence.

Sir John disclosed £5,000,000 had been set aside for expenditure on food reserves in the new budget.

The chancellor announced an excise duty on photographic film and plates manufactured in the United Kingdom estimated to yield more than £500,000.

He gave a concession to movie and theatre goers by reducing entertainments admittance tax by one penny (two cents).

MAKE DECISION

Sir Nevile Henderson becomes clearer. Obviously he will warn Germany not to underrate Britain's strength and determination to resist further territorial grabs.

It would be one way of impressing Chancellor Hitler with a warning not to burn his bridges behind him by rejecting President Roosevelt's plea to him and Premier Mussolini for a 10-year guarantee of peace.

Britain And Conscription

Whether Mr. Chamberlain could pull the country with him on the question of conscription remains to be seen.

The Labor party definitely opposes compulsory military training in any form and might resist the government scheme to the point of splitting the whole country.

On the other hand, the Labor party has been insisting that Russia's cooperation is imperative and if the Soviets are willing to enter into an anti-aggression pact only if Britain establishes conscription, this might make a big difference to the Labor party attitude.

The cabinet was reported to have agreed in principle on the desirability of some form of conscription for military training, although it was not believed a decision actually had been reached.

Germans Making Propaganda

One informed source said Grigore Gafencu, Rumanian Foreign Minister, who is in London discussing Anglo-Rumanian plans, told British officials Germany is making propaganda out of the fact Britain does not have conscription. This report said German diplomats had been instructed to emphasize to Britain's prospective allies that the small British standing army would make a poor "protector."

What Britain meant by "indications of peaceful German intentions" was interpreted by one source as the introduction of some important measure of demobilization of German troops, cessation of anti-British press blasts and removal of German men and ships from Spain.

It was said Sir Nevile Henderson had been instructed to tell Hitler that Britain, in return for such conciliatory signs, would be willing to listen to German proposals for easier access to raw materials for her indust[illegible].

$25,000,000 LOSS

the disappointingly poor earnings of the government-owned railway system and the prospective losses in wheat marketing," the Minister said.

The grand total of expenditures will reach $557,343,000, Mr. Dunning continued. Ordinary expenditures were approximately $416,372,000, an increase of $1,480,000 over the previous year. Special expenditures for relief and agricultural distress amounted to $48,583,000, $20,000,000 less than the previous year. The Canadian National Railways deficit was $54,314,000, an increase of $11,968,000.

Over-all deficits for the five years beginning with the fiscal year 1934-35 were respectively as follows: $116,133,000; $159,989,000; $77,851,000; $17,715,000 and $55,666,000.

National Debt $3,157,334,000

The net national debt at March 31, 1939, was estimated at $3,157,334,000. Gross liabilities were $3,642,049,000 and active assets $484,715,000.

In view of the world trade recession, Mr. Dunning said he thought the result of the past year would have been encouraging but for the necessity for making a large provision for possible losses on wheat marketing. (Some estimates had placed this loss as high as $48,000,000.)

On this point Mr. Dunning said: "Our experience in 1935-36 shows how quickly an apparent loss of very large proportions can be wiped out by rapid changes in the level of wheat prices resulting from actual or anticipated changes in the world supply and demand situation.

"Nevertheless, it seems to be only sound common sense to take account of present facts and the immediate outlook. Unfortunately, I cannot without the possibility of serious adverse consequences do anything which would tend to disclose to speculators in the world's wheat markets what the exact position of the Canadian Wheat Board is in regard to sales and holdings of wheat."

Tension is Cause

International tension, the constant fear of war and the hesitancy of private industry to expand, had contributed to Canada's poor financial showing, Mr. Dunning said. "We are an organic part of a troubled and seemingly crazy world, and the impact of that world affects us abnormally by reason of the instantaneous transmission of news and rumors by means of radio, telegraph and telephone," he said.

The recession of a year ago had been followed by revival in most countries and the revival in Canada had been more natural than elsewhere. Mr. Dunning said that spending for defence purposes had so far played but a minor part in Canada's economic life.

During the first quarter of the calendar year 1939, construction contracts awarded were six per cent higher and residential contracts 92 per cent higher than for same period in 1938 and immediate outlook is higher than for the same period in 1938 and the immediate outlook is for a further substantial improvement in residential construction.

Maintains Position

Canada maintained its position throughout 1938 as the world's fourth largest exporting country and displaced Japan as the fifth ranking nation in terms of total external trade. Due to the increased exports of gold there was an export balance of trade of $350,900,000 as compared with $339,800,000 during the preceding year.

Agriculture could do little to protect itself against "international storms," he said. But in time it "may and should be expected to adjust itself to the new problems created by international developments." In the meantime it was necessary to help the farmers in the interests of all Canada.

The minister was hopeful that a program of intensive expansion could ultimately absorb all the unemployed who are willing and able to work.

There had been much heard about the need of leadership and public men had been criticized on that score, he said. "But I speak with all candor and with no attempt whatever at defensive criticism when I say that it is in the field of private investment that leadership and courage are most needed in Canada today."

Not Comparable

"In general, I confess to a disappointment with the lack of imaginative business leadership in recent years, certainly as compared with that shown by the generation which built our railways, opened up the west and transformed this country in a short span of years into one of the great industrial nations of the world."

Mr. Dunning said it was "absurd" to describe the government's "easy money policy" as deflationary, or deflationary in its effects. The volume of bank deposits was the best single indicator of the effects of monetary policy. United States, Australia, the United Kingdom and Sweden were countries frequently mentioned as having made effective use of monetary policy for economic recovery.

Comparing 1938 with the depression year 1932, the average volume of bank deposits in these countries had increased as follows: Sweden 15 per cent; Australia 16 per cent; United States 22 per cent and the United Kingdom 23 per cent. Canada's increase was slightly more than 25 per cent.

Private investors in Canada need not be "paralyzed by the fear of war in Europe," Mr. Dunning said. He urged investors to concentrate on seeking new opportunities for development rather than "trying to forecast the short-term movements of the stock and bond markets."

War might upset commerce for a time but the world would still need Canada's food and other products, possibly in larger amounts than ever.

WILL DISTRIBUTE

Mr. Gardiner said it would be possible to double the consumption of butter by families on relief or on the verge of relief. While most families on relief obtained some butter there were families not on relief but receiving aid from charity which now obtained little or no butter.

Mr. Gardiner's cheese production bill received second reading and advanced through the committee stage except for one clause. It provides for payment of a premium on high grade cheese and assistance in the modernization and standardization of cheese factories.

Extend Premiums

The House approved an amendment sponsored by the Minister to extend the premiums. The original bill authorized payment of two cents a pound on cheese scoring 94 or more points in grading. The amendment authorizes a premium of one cent a pound on cheese grading 93 points.

The government was setting aside $250,000 to assist cheese plants to instal improved equipment, with the government paying half, and to assist the amalgamation of small plants.

The basic purpose was to improve and standardize cheese production to make possible larger exports to the British market, which would in turn divert butterfat from excessive production of butter.

Mark Senn (Con. Haldimand) agreed that agriculture needed such measures but felt the several measures of the small type the government was sponsoring were on a "hit and miss" basis'

He recalled when the former government in 1935 introduced a bill, to bonus cheese . 1-2 cents a pound, members of the present government had opposed it. Trade Minister Euler had described it as "paternalism gone mad" and as being aimed at the farm vote.

Minister Complimented

Mr. Senn complimented the Agriculture Minister on convincing Mr. Euler now that this was a good scheme. In 1935, too, he recalled W. A. Fraser (Lib. Northumberland) had dubbed the proposal "merely pork barrel rolling."

Gordon Ross (Lib. Moose Jaw) interjected that the 1935 bonus was on all cheese while the present one affected only top score cheese.

Mr. Gardiner said the 94 score cheese was about two per cent of the total production while 93 score was 35 or 36 per cent. The great part scored 92, except for about 10 per cent.

The Minister said most of the export cheese came from Ontario and Quebec, Ontario producing most of the 93 score. He listed the electrically-equipped cheese plants as follows: Prince Edward Island 8; New Brunswick 8; Quebec 338; Ontario 635; Manitoba 16; Saskatchewan 9; Alberta 9; British Columbia 2.

Conservative leader Manion suggested governments in Canada had been lax in not encouraging Canadians to eat more cheese. Per capita consumption Canada was less than in most cheese producing countries.

Equal of Any

Mr. Manion said Canadian cheese is the equal to any in the world, especially Canadian cheddar two or more years old, "wine cured—and I hope I don't shock any prohibitionist."

Canadian consumption was a little more than three pounds a person a year, while it was nine in the United Kingdom, 10.4 in France and 16.5 pounds in Switzerland.

Elie Bertrand (Lib. Prescott) reviewed the events which resulted in the present butter surplus, urging the one-cent premium be extended to cheese of 92 score.

In 1937, production had been 250,000,000 pounds creamery butter and 114,000,000 pounds dairy butter, while domestic consumption averaged 1,000,000 pounds a day. Result was prices had gone up and 5,000,000 pounds butter had been imported in early 1938. Increased production followed, so in 1938 production totalled 267,000,000 pounds creamery and 120,000,000 pounds dairy butter, or a surplus of about 25,000,000 pounds above domestic need.

The answer seemed to be to divert surplus milk into cheese production, but the present price factor was a deterrent. From 100 pounds of milk came 9 1-4 pounds of cheese, which could be sold at 10 cents. Two cents deducted for transportation left the farmer a net income of 75 cents and no farmer could produce milk at that price.

Near Bankruptcy

Because of the continued strain of low prices on farm products, thousands of farmers were on the verge of bankruptcy and could only be kept from bankruptcy by practical aid. If the bill went through with premiums only for 94 and 93 score cheese, it would be more a source of irritation than satisfaction, he claimed.

Bruce McNevin (Lib. Victoria Ont.) contended a premium paid for quality was far different from a general bonus. For that reason he would hesitate to support a proposal to extend the premium to cheese scoring 92.

Mr. Gardiner emphasized the premium would be paid to improve quality, so export sales could be increased. Most of the Canadian cheese now sold in the United Kingdom was 93 score.

Mr. Gardiner noted that while cheese consumption was low in New Zealand, Canada and the United States, those three countries were the leaders, in that order, in protein consumption.

A. C. Casselman (Con. Grenville-Dundas) said the government was taking responsibility under the new act that really rested on the provincial dairy inspectors.

The Minister said the provinces were responsible for quality but the fact remained the payment of the premium would have an effect on the producer.

R. M. Warren (Lib. Renfrew North) said the proposed measures would not correct the distressing condition in the dairy industry overnight. They would have their effect over a period of years. He favored payment of the bonus on cheese grading 92 for one year at least in order to obtain speedier results.

PARLIAMENT MAY

The tenor of the discussion was that in the event of the present session not being concluded before the King arrives, which is likely, parliament will adjourn for the duration of the royal tour.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King said he thought this the best course and Conservative leader Manion concurred. There was some opposition to such a long adjournment from the Social Credit and C.C.F. groups as well as from Hon. C. H. Cahan (Con. Montreal St. Lawrence-St. George).

Will be Truce During Tour

The Prime Minister and Dr. Manion agreed there should be a truce in party warfare while the King was in Canada. Dr. Manion said he would make no political speeches and had not and would not criticize anything done by the government in connection with the royal visit. J. S. Woodsworth, C. C. F. leader, agreed there should be no acrimonious controversy but could see no reason why all political discussion should cease.

Mr. Mackenzie King put it up to the members to say whether they thought he should accompany the King throughout the tour or remain in Ottawa. He declared he believed it was his duty to go because the people of the Empire as a whole and of Canada in particular would expect it of him and because it was the King's wish. He regarded the King's invitation to the United States as a high honor and it was customary for one of the King's ministers to travel with His Majesty.

Accepts Honor

"I accept the honor as one which is intended by His Majesty as recognition of the position, which Canada has attained as one of the nations of the British commonwealth equal in status in all respects to the United Kingdom itself. I am sure that that has been the circumstance, which has weighed most in the mind of His Majesty in inviting the Prime Minister of Canada as Prime Minister to accompany him when he visits the country to the south."

The government had no desire to hurry the business of the session, said Mr. Mackenzie King. If it were concluded, the King would prorogue parliament. If not the King had agreed to the rather unusual request that he attend parliament to give his assent to bills. The King as a rule did not give assent in person.

King Centre of Interest

The reason parliament should not carry on in the absence of the Prime Minister was that the people were entitled to follow the proceedings of parliament and the King would be the centre of interest while in Canada. Mr. Mackenzie King doubted if the people would see much in the newspapers about parliament during the royal visit.

"Let the Prime Minister attend or not attend during the whole of their Majesties' tour as he conscientiously believes it his duty to do and no one can interfere or do otherwise than respect his judgment," said Mr. Cahan.

"But certainly the discussions which we have in this house, no matter how acrimonious they may be, would not alarm His Majesty because he keeps himself familiar with the proceedings of parliament at Westminster."

Mr. Cahan felt Justice Minister Lapointe could lead the House ably in Mr. Mackenzie King's absence and was sure the business of the session could not be completed in the time remaining before the King's arrival.

Clause Holds a Club

While the decrees as now worded give the government power only to prosecute offenders in the courts after publication, the anti-propaganda law contains a clause which some sources said the government might hold as a club over newspapers.

The degree says a future measure will regulate conditions for enforcing a declaration of all funds received for publicity of any sort. It was said this might be amplified to give the government power to investigate the financial records of any newspaper.

Orchids

By ALICE NORRIS LEWIS

Little Mrs. Philip Ainslee was hurrying to market, and as she tripped along she was mentally preparing an elaborate dinner for the evening. For, in little Mrs. Ainslee's opinion, a very wonderful thing had happened. Her husband had so far progressed on the road to success with his violin, that he was, that day, returning from his first concert trip. Mrs. Philip felt that the occasion demanded more than passing notice.

A familiar figure greeted her eye as she left the store. It was her husband with his violin case under his arm and a brand new traveling bag in his hand.

"You're home much sooner than I expected," she said, gaily, "How did it happen?"

He did not reply and she could see that his face was sullen. Something had gone wrong.

They walked on in silence, for Mrs. Philip had long since learned that silence alone was necessary on such occasions. Once inside their apartment, he sank into a chair, and spoke, peevishly.

"I am dog tired. Get me a cup of tea. Then I'm going to bed. I've been keeping extremely late hours this week."

She went into the kitchen and a moment later he followed her.

"I tell you what, Joy," he burst out, finally, "it takes money to travel with the bunch I've been following this week."

"I suppose it does, if you try to keep the pace," she agreed.

"You've got to keep the pace or quit," he told her. "I had to come home while I had carfare."

"Yes?" Joy's voice was strained. "Come to the point, Phil. How much did you spend?"

He pulled from his pocket two $20 bank notes and threw them on the table. "There it is," he said. "Every dollar—"

"All?" she echoed, faintly, "All? Oh, Phil—"

The door-knob rattled and a moment later baby Philip came smiling in on them, fresh and rosy from his nap.

"My daddy home from N' York," he cried. "My daddy home from N' York. What did you bring Philip, daddy? A doggie?"

At that moment Joy caught a glimpse of her husband's face. And she knew. He had brought the baby nothing.

Twenty dollars, he had brought home, where there should have been ten times that! She had meant to do so much with it. Instead, it had been squandered on heaven alone knew what! And Philip understood that there were bills, bills, bills! But even so, she would have forgiven him, had he not forgotten little Philip.

"Here!" her husband's voice broke in upon her misery. "Here, I brought you these."

He put a bunch of orchids on the table. Orchids! And now she saw red. Orchids at—how much each? She picked them up and without a word, flung them into the waste basket.

Philip stormed out and shut the door.

She loved orchids, and he knew it. He had reckoned that they would soften her wrath against him for his extravagance. Let them weither in the basket where they lay! They should not plead for him.

It was no use. She loved orchids and she could not leave them dying there. Even if she did not forgive Phil, she would put them in a vase.

The moment she touched them she began to cry. In the old days of their courtship Philip often bought them for her. It had thrilled her then, that same extravagance over which she now raged. Was there, after all, so much difference in it? She had married Phil, knowing his failings. And now she was making herself miserable about it. As for his forgetting little Phil—wasn't that preferable to a collie pup? A thousand times more so!

She tried to thrust the orchids from her, and again she couldn't.

"Joy Ainslee," she said, "you're an idiot—and a mighty poor sport. You knew Phil was extravagant! You knew all about him. And you married him! You are complaining of hard judgment and you were master of your own fortune."

She rose and put the orchids in the vase. Then she opened the door and went into the kitchen. She began to make tea, carefully.

Her husband came out and stood awkwardly in the middle of the floor.

"I've contracted for a month's engagement in Chicago," he said. "There'll be a good bit of money in it—"

"Isn't that wonderful?" She smiled on him. "Tea is ready," she added, and touched her lips lightly to his as he drew his chair up to the table.

GET THEIR MAN

Mr J. Edgar Hoover's G-men have got their man again. That is, they presumably have got their man. They shot him down when he reached for his gun. Thus we shall never know, from actual sworn testimony, that the man shot yesterday was, in fact, the man who had carried through a kidnapping and committed a series of bank robberies.

The G-men got Dillinger by shooting him down. They got "Baby Face" Nelson by shooting him down. They got Clarence Shaffer by shooting him down. They got others the same way. The story is told so frequently it becomes monotonous.

Curiously enough, local policemen and detectives rarely find it necessary to shoot and kill the desperadoes with whom they frequently deal. Now and then they shoot down a fool who tries to escape. Usually, however, they bring in their prisoner intact. He is duly indicted, tried and, if found guilty, is sentenced to proper punishment. The ends of justice are thus served in an orderly and decent way.—Baltimore Sun.

JOURNALISTIC "WE"

Just a word of advice to correspondents. When writing an article or a paragraph intended for publication, avoid the word "we." Never say "we," regret to report; "we" congratulate; "we" hope, or it gives "us" great pleasure. "We" and "us" were once words in high repute in journalistic circles, and the newspaper man who couldn't work half a dozen "we's" into an ordinary paragraph was not considered much of a writer. But nowadays it is strictly infra dig; the word is only used in the editorial column and as seldom as possible there. It is possible to find the personal pronoun "I" still in use, but for the most part it is used only in effete columns of a commentary or alleged humorous nature.—Guelph Mercury

ROYAL STOPS

Guelph is another of the places where the royal train will stop for ten minutes. Local authorities there were exercised as to plans for the presentation of Guelph celebrities, and, in response to inquiries at Ottawa, instructions have been received that those to be presented may consist of the mayor, council, city clerk, member of parliament, member of the legislature, county judge, county warden, president of the O.A.C. and the chairmen of the school boards, plus their wives, the total not to exceed 45 people.

That may be very nice for the 45, but is it really desirable that they should have a monopoly of the time of the King and Queen? What goes for Guelph goes for other places similarly situated.

No group of citizens should be allowed to monopolize the time of the royal couple. The King and Queen know the public are anxious to see them, and that many will travel miles for the historic opportunity. It will be too bad if the King and Queen have no time to show themselves to the masses except in fleeting glimpses on arrival and departure.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

NO SUCH PLACE

Speaking to the Canadian Club of Toronto this week Gilbert Jackson, former economic adviser to the Bank of England, told this story.

A young Australian lady was discussing Canadian-Australian relations with Vincent Massey, Canada's High Commissioner. She deplored the fact that Canadians knew so little about her country.

"How many Canadians," she queried, "would know the capital of West Australia?"

"Very few," replied the truthful Mr. Massey. "But how many of your country folk would know the capital of Saskatchewan?"

"Oh, Mr. Massey," replied the young lady, "you can't fool me. There isn't such a place."—Financial Post.

ROYAL WELCOME TO SOVEREIGNS BY ROYAL ARCH

Historian and Reviewer M. E. Comp. W. N. Ponton Presents Annual Report of Reviews

One of the most important reports looked forward to year after year by the Grand Chapter of the Royal Arch Masons, which opened today at Windsor, is the annual report of reviews by Most Excellent Companion, Col. W. N. Ponton, K.C., Past Grand First Principal, who is also a past grand master of the Masonic Order.

The near approach of Their Majesties who will be in Canada in a few weeks leads M. E. Comp. Ponton Historian and Reviewer to say in his foreword to the report:

"This year especially it behooves us to live 'loyal to the royal in ourselves' in view of the visit being paid to Canada by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, Past First Grand Principal of the Grand Chapters of England and Scotland and by his gracious Queen, to whom all Canadian Masonic hearts go out in knightly chivalry and worthy welcome."

The Reviewer also states:—

"Most of us try to excel in what is good and great. Several of us try to obey the injunctions "Know Thyself" and "This above all, to thine own self be true." To few of us is given the gift which characterizes genius, "light your own fire and kindle fire in others" but none of us is perfect. That is for the Deity alone.

"And I smile to think God's greatness
Flows around our incompleteness
Round our Restlessness His Rest."

Among the delegates to the Grand Chapter from Belleville are Ex. Comp. J. Noakes, of Moira Chapter No. 7, and Ex. Comp. I. Stephenson, of Quinte Friendship Chapter.

200 District Rotarians Visit Campbellford Club

Meeting is Held to Celebrate Tenth Anniversary of the Host Club

DR. SEDGEWICK SPEAKS

Rotarians of the district converged in Campbellford last night when upwards of two hundred district members of this popular service club celebrated the 10th anniversary of the Campbellford Club.

Representative of clubs from Belleville, Port Hope, Whitby, Toronto, Bowmanville, Lindsay, Peterborough, Napanee, Kingston, Gananoque and other parts of the district heard a sparkling address on "What my Rotary membership means to me" given in eloquent style by Dr. Harry Sedgewick, of Toronto.

Highlighting the meeting held in the new Masonic Temple was a musical program that drew the cream of district talent. Belleville's James Bankier was heard in vocal solo as was Peterborough's Mac Gordon. Jack Green, cornet virtuoso from this district, and one of Canada's gold medallists in this particular phase of musical endeavour almost stole the "show" with a sparkling performance on his favorite instrument. Leo Riggs, presided at the piano and the lusty voice of S. R. (Sandy) Burrows was heard leading the community singing.

Brief addresses were made by representatives of the various clubs in which were included Mackenzie Robertson past president of Belleville Rotary when it assisted in the organization of the Campbellford club ten years ago and others. A distinguished visitor was District-Governor Harry Hovey of Geneva, N.Y., who motored from his distant home to attend the function.

Upwards of thirty members of the Belleville Club headed by President McLean Haig, who incidentally spoke in glowing terms of the forthcoming Rotary Regatta to be held here this summer, attended the function. The banquet was served by the Women's Association of St. John's United Church, Campbellford.

Dutch Settlers Seek Relief From Bad Roads

Newmarket, Ont., April 26 (CP)—Dutch settlers in the hamlet of Ansnorveldt, 10 miles west of here in the Holland River Marsh, appealed today for relief from conditions brought on by mud-bogged roads.

The settlement has been cut off from bread and milk supplies since Friday and horses are unable to get through the mired roads to the nearest town, Bradford. A woman needing hospital treatment yesterday had to walk to the nearest highway to catch a bus.

"I haven't any bread or milk and I'm running short of sugar and other necessary things," said Mrs. A. Neinhus, the village storekeeper. The last delivery of milk was made by a Bradford dairy company Friday.

A wholesaler tried to reach the community yesterday with three motor-trucks. When the first one dropped into a mud-hole three feet deep, the others were forced to stop and became bogged down.

"There's nothing we can do about it until dry weather comes," Reeve Thomas McMurchy of King Township said. "The settlers seem to delay bringing in their fertiliser until the roads are at their very worst and then they get bogged. But I see no reason why they shouldn't be able to use roads in another week or so if the weather is favorable."

'REVELATION' IS SERMON THEME OF EVANGELIST

Rev. Tom Miller Addresses Good - Sized Audience at Evangel Temple

Giving an address that was remarkable because of its clarity, simplicity and spiritual appeal, Evangelist Tom Miller with the method of presentation that is unique to preachers from the Old Land, spoke to an appreciative good-sized Monday audience at the Evangel Temple last evening on the subject "Will The Church Pass Through the Great Tribulation?" giving a bird's eye view of the Book of Revelation.

"Many regard the last book of the canon of Scripture as a 'sealed' book, but this is entirely wrong", declared the speaker, "because the very word 'Revelation' means unveiling', and is the exact opposite to a concealed mystery. And mark you, it is not 'the Revelation of St. John,' as is commonly stated, but the Scripture reads 'The Revelation of Jesus Christ', being a most comprehensive revelation of the grace and glory of His Person and His redemptive work of Calvary and its ultimate consummation. I am certain, that if John the Beloved were here today, he would not want to hear of this book of blessing referred to as his revelation, but rather the Revelation of the Lord Jesus Christ".

"What is the Church and what is the Great Tribulation for, are two vital aspects of this great question which we must answer from the Scriptures", said Mr. Miller. "The Scriptures assert that when the Lord Jesus returns at His Second Advent, the Church is going up. Of course by that we do not mean this building, or that any other building is going up, because in Scriptural usage the word 'Church' is never applied to a building, but always to a collective company born-again, blood-washed people who are eternally united to Christ because of His redemptive work on Calvary which they have entered into. Two figures are employed in the New Testament Scriptures to reveal the spiritual and super-natural nature of Christ's Church, those terms being 'His Body' and a 'Spiritual House' formed out of 'living stones'. Both have one common characteristic, that being spiritual life. His Body, the Church is a live Body because He is its Living Head. His whole Body the entire Church will be caught up at His coming, because it is to be a raptured Body, not a ruptured Body. Again, the house is not composed of bricks but of living stones. Bricks are man-made, but stones are made by God, and these stones are alive because of their union with Christ who has already given present-tense Eternal Life to those to whom He is united according to John 1:12. So this Church is no one sect or communion of Christendom, but the 'ecclesia', all the 'called-out' ones who belong to Christ".

"The Great Tribulation will not be for the Church, because of her heavenly calling and destiny she will have no part in it. But it will be for the Jews, God's chosen earthly elect, to prepare them for their national restoration to God's favour. It will be for the Gentile nations because of their treatment of the Jews as seen in Germany and other countries of Europe today. It will be for the luke-warm Laodicaean apostate church that has surrendered and denied everything that is supernatural and Divine. It is to fulfill all the wonderful Old Testament types, which will have their full meaning when this epoch takes place."

The address was preceded by a sing-song of old Gospel hymns, a vocal duet, and an electric vibraphone solo. Mr. Miller will speak each night this week except Saturday.

'No Sheep, No Sail' Say Moslem Seamen, Captain in Quandary

Halifax, Apr. 25 (CP) — Things were pretty wild aboard the British steamship City of Singapore today. Among them were 12 Gibbons—small monkeys—the ship's captain, F. R. Witkins, and a number of Mohammedan seamen, mostly Lascars.

The gibbons were wild because they were born that way. The Mohammedans were wild because they wanted a sheep. And Captain Witkins was wild because he couldn't find one.

A part of the Mohammedan religion demands ships on which its adherents work must carry live sheep. When the Singapore arrived here yesterday the sheep were ordered destroyed because the ship had come from China Seas ports, and hoof-and-mouth disease is prevalent in that region.

Since the sailors' articles contain provision the ship must carry sheep, Captain Witkins had to find one. He scoured the city, but early today, a few hours from sailing time, there were no sheep to be had. The Mohammedans, meanwhile, knew little English, but they made a good job of saying "No sheep, no sail."

BEACHES ASSOC. WILL SPONSOR AMATEUR SHOW

Winner Will Then Compete In Toronto for New York Trip

At a special meeting of the Bay of Quinte Beaches Association held in the Y.M.C.A. last evening, it was announced that definite plans had been made by Sims' Greater Shows to visit Belleville during the week of May 29th and arrange the annual mid way for residents on the site of the civic bathing beach, the proceeds thus earned to be turned over to the Beaches for further work necessary.

It was decided also by the entertainment committee of the Association, headed by Chairman Jos. Imlah to hold the first amateur show under the auspices of the Beaches in the local Collegiate Auditorium on the evening of May 9th. A winner selected from this show will be sent to Toronto in competition with other provincial winners and a final candidate will be selected to represent the Province at a show in New York City.

Announcement was made that the Belleville Horticultural Society would commence the first work of tree planting on the site of the bathing beach east of the city as soon as ground conditions permit. It is expected that over two hundred trees will be planted on this location this year as an addition to the hundreds planted by the same Society last season.

An appeal was made by President residents of Belleville to assist in this work of tree planting and beach of the Beaches, Reg. Moncrieff, for improvement. All trees needed will be supplied by the president from his own tree planting plot where Royal Oak trees from seedlings shipped from Windsor Forest in England have been nurtured through the winter.

Reich Broadcasts In Arabic, Afrikanns

Special Hitler Message Read in S. W. Africa

Berlin, Apr. 25 (CP-Havas)—The Reich government today began short wave broadcasts in the Arabic and Afrikanns, the latter the language of the Dutch settlers of the Union of South Africa. The broadcasts will take place daily "and if necessary, will be made in other languages", it was officially announced.

Hitler's Message to S. W. Africa.

Johannesburg, South Africa, Apr. 25 (CP-Reuters)—Delivery of a special message from Chancellor Hitler to the German community in Southwest Africa provoked considerable comment here today.

The Chancellor's message was conveyed to the German residents in the former Reich colonial territory, now under mandate to South Africa, by the German Consul-General at Windhoek Sunday. The consul urged the Germans "to swear undying allegiance and loyalty to the Fuehrer through thick and thin, no matter what came, and in all circumstances," it was disclosed.

The occasion was a private meeting in celebration of Hitler's 50th birthday. The consul said that before he left Germany recently Hitler saw him and asked him to deliver a special message to the Germans of Southwest Africa, thanking them for their past loyalty and expressing the hope that it would continue.

In Full Nazi Brotherhood.

The chancellor urged that petty strife, personal animosities and divergent views were to be set aside and that harmony and concord were to rule them as one people, the consul added.

Germans in Southwest Africa should live hand-in-hand in full Nazi brotherhood, the consul said he was told by Hitler.

According to the special correspondent of the Johannesburg Star, who was allowed to attend the meeting, the consul said the best birthday present the Germans could give the Fuehrer was to behave as "good comrades". The consul emphasized that there is "no danger of trouble in Southwest Africa, where the Germans plan no offensive action of any kind."

The Union Government recently strengthened police forces in the former German colonial territory, apparently to safeguard against possible unrest.

U.S. Senate Approves Defence

Washington, April 25—(AP) —The United States Senate approved and sent to the White House today a $508,789,824 appropriation for Army Defence activities during the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Of the total, $94,737,281 will go for the purchase of about 600 modern fighting planes. Another $53,173,100 will be spent for such equipment as semi-automatic rifles and tanks and anti-aircraft guns.

NOT ALWAYS LIQUOR MAKES 'EM TALK THAT WAY

Brantford, Ont., April 25 (CP) —Any member of Brantford's city council may come to a council meeting in an intoxicated condition but if he "talks like a fool, he shall be thrown out," according to a ruling of many years ago when Brantford was a town and had 53 saloons and inns. Mayor R. J. Zaterous recalled at a recent banquet here that the ruling never had been rescinded.

LORD LOTHIAN

his cousin as 11th Marquess and came into estates totalling 28,000 acres, he was known as Philip Kerr. For 14 years he has been secretary of the Rhodes Trust.

In the government he has been Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster and under-secretary for India. He is a bachelor.

While Lord Lothian in 1936 regarded Hitler as "earnestly" desirous of peace, he since has decided that Hitler's book, "Mein Kampf," shows the German Fuehrer's objective is to remake "a large part of the world by force."

In the House of Lords April 13 he said he had read for the first time an unexpurgated edition of "Mein Kampf" ("My Struggle") during the Easter holidays. In that address, the Peer said, among other things:

U. S. Can Help

"I believe we can count on being able to obtain from the United States facilities for bringing the enormous industrial resources of that country behind the Democracies to help in any way that is possible."

At the same time, he upheld Prime Minister Chamberlain's appeasement policy as "right" insofar as it was an effort "to prove to the rest of the world that we wanted appeasement and not war."

"But today if we want to be sure of support from the Dominions and of sympathy and assistance from the United States—and I have visited both recently—it is absolutely essential that we should prove to the world that we are capable of giving effective resistance to aggression."

Blonde Muskrat Found in Trap

Shannonville, Ont., April 25—(Special—A rare type of muskrat, golden in color and boasting four pure white feet was discovered in his traps yesterday by Fred Lewis, veteran trapper of this district.

The animal resembled a fox in color, although it might have been a shade lighter than the average Reynard.

According to reports the animal was not the one that left one of its white feet in a trap set by a trapper named Spencer last week.

Trappers of the district claim that catches are beginning to fall off. While the season has been anything but a record one, the best individual catch reported taken along the Salmon River is that of 125 animals caught by James McCambridge of Marysville.

DENY REPORT GUARDS PLACED AT TUNNEL

Ottawa, April 25—(CP)— Commissioner S. T. Wood of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police today denied a report two guards had been placed at the entrances of a tunnel carrying piping from the Dominion government's main central heating plant to various buildings, including the House of Parliament.

The report, which said the guards had been placed because of fear of sabotage, was not true, Commissioner Wood said.

CROLL BILL MEETS DEFEAT IN THE SECOND READING

Bill Proposed Those Marrying Should Produce Medical Certificates

DR. WELSH OPPOSED

Toronto, April 25—Attacked on the ground that its proposals were too far in advance of public opinion not yet sufficiently educated on the problem of social diseases, David A. Croll's bill requiring parties to a proposed marriage to produce medical certificates testifying they were free of these diseases, was defeated yesterday in second reading by the legislature.

Only a scattering of verbal votes was made in favor of the proposed amendment to the Marriage Act, after Leopold Macaulay (Con., South York), in giving the only backing offered to the bill, declared the member from Windsor-Sandwich "is on the right road and I am going to support the bill."

"The government preened itself for its courage in enacting the compulsory pasteurization bill, and rightly so. It did take courage. We destroy cattle which are infected with tuberculosis. But we won't give a woman contemplating marriage assurance that her life won't be blighted by insidious disease," he said.

Croll Stresses Necessity

Mr. Croll, who last year introduced a similar measure and withdrew it under pressure, made a vigorous plea on behalf of his new bill, warning that "the social welfare of the people makes imperative a measure which will ensure that social diseases and other hereditary ills in the bodies of men and women shall not be passed on to a future generation."

On the House, he said, was an onus which could not be ignored of providing for the protection of innocent persons who were about to contemplate marriage.

Dr. Harold Welsh (Con., Hastings East), who in his budget speech repeatedly urged the department to launch an educational campaign in conjunction with its treatment work, charged that medical men had not co-operated with the department as they should have done in reporting cases.

"I say if you pass this bill, you are not only throwing it upon an uneducated public, but also on a profession which is not as yet co-operating as it should," he warned.

He declared a doctor was guilty of "professional malpractice," if he did not take steps at child birth to protect the infant from the disease. There was, he said, no excuse for a child being infected if the doctor was notified of the mother's condition.

Ahead of Its Time

"The bill," he added, "is a good bill, but it is ahead of its time."

Moreover, emphasized Dr. Welsh, if there was to be an amendment to the Marriage Act, it should include above all things the matter of mental diseases, by forbidding the marriage of persons inflicted by mental disorders.

Hon. H. C. Nixon, Provincial Secretary, under whose department marriages are supervised, declared "the public is not ready for it, and conditions in the province do not warrant such a drastic legislation."

He claimed also that if the bill were passed its effect would be partially nullified, on the ground that persons desiring to marry and unwilling to submit themselves to tests would go to other jurisdictions for the ceremony. New York State, he said, had a similar bill and marriages dropped off in the state by 33 per cent.

Motorists Must Sign Driver's Licences

"Motorists must personally sign their individual driver's licences in the designated position set aside for that purpose on all drivers' licences in this province", warned Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine today following a check-up on motor vehicles and drives over the week-end.

According to Officers Caldwell and Ervine, who conducted the motor investigations and check-ups over the week end, motorists are prone to neglect to affix their signature to their individual operator's licence. This regulation is being more rigidly enforced this year.

"Another matter motorists are cautioned about is the permitting of licence plates to become obscure with mud and dirt. The H.T.A. clearly define all licences plates in the province must be kept clean and free from foreign substance", added Motorcycle Patrolman Ervine.

Annually each spring a complete check-up of all motor vehicles on the provincial highways is made by the officers of the province. Later this month a check-up on lights and brakes will be made by the Department officers, it was revealed today. No warnings will be given motorists of these periodical check-ups.

King George, pictured here looking through binoculars, was an interested spectator of a mimic battle staged for him at Aldershot during his recent tour of inspection of the Aldershot proving grounds. The most modern instruments of war were displayed for the King who, accompanied by Queen Elizabeth, asked innumerable questions regarding Britain's latest defence weapons.

BRUINS' GOALIE TO WED ONTARIO GIRL

If ever a goalkeeper had as triumphant a season as Frank Brimsek of the Boston Bruins enjoyed during the past winter, it has not been recorded. It was Frankie's first year as a major league puck-stopper, and during it he won the National league's Vezina trophy for fewest goals scored against, was voted the year's outstanding rookie, named goalie on the all-star team and played on a Stanley Cup winning team. And to top it all off, he won himself a bride in the person of Miss Peggy MacMillan, with whom he is shown ABOVE. They expect to be married some time this summer. Miss MacMillan, 21, comes from Kirkland Lake in Northern Ontario.

TRANSPORTATION ISSUE IN SUIT

Suit at Cobourg Assize Concerns Costs of School Transportation

Cobourg, Ont., Apr. 25 (CP) Two cases are listed for hearing at the spring non-jury assizes of the Supreme Court which opens this afternoon with Mr. Justice Greene presiding. Much interest centres around one of the suits, which is being brought by the trustees of Union School Sections 16 and 19, Townships of Murray and Brighton against the United Counties.

The statement of claim points out that the school was established many years ago, but in 1927 a continuation grade B school was established. At the time this continuation school was built an agreement, in writing was entered into between the trustees of the section and the trustees of Sections 12 and 29 in Murray Township and Sections 17 and 19 in Brighton Township whereby it was agreed the sections should contribute to the maintenance of the school it is claimed.

Transportation Costs.

It is further said that in January 1937 the plaintiff trustees decided to provide transportation for county pupils to and from the school. The cost of transportation was to be $564 from January 1, 1937, to Dec. 31, 1937. Between Sept. 3, 1937 and Dec. 31, 1937, the trustees employed two more bus drivers at a cost of $612, thus bringing the total cost of transportation up to $1,176.

The plaintiff submits that the defendant refused to pay such transportation costs, and also that the counties failed to notify the trustees of its decision not to pay such costs.

The plaintiff is asking a declaration that the cost of transportation is part of the cost of educating county pupils. Payment of $1,176 is also asked, as well as a mandatory order directing the united counties to charge, levy and collect the money necessary to pay the bill.

Counties Deny Liability

The counties council denies it is liable in any way for the transportation costs, claiming it did not authorize the trustees to engage or employ the bus drivers. It is also denied that the trustees have any right to assess the cost of transportation as a part of the cost of educating county pupils.

John Callahan of Toronto, is acting for the plaintiff school section, while Col. F. D. Boggs, K. C., of Cobourg counties solicitor, is acting for the counties.

The other action listed for the hearing during the Assizes is a third party issue.

Launch Campaign To Curb Gambling Among Young

Timmins Shops Raided and Charges Laid

Timmins, Ont., April 25—(CP)—Aimed at curbing an increase in gambling among among the town's juveniles, a campaign was launched here during the week-end which resulted in the issuing of summons to three wholesale house managers on charges of distributing lottery equipment to stores in town. The charges followed numerous raids made by police officers on a number of small shops and stores in Timmins Saturday afternoon.

"This is probably the most vicious form of gambling," said Chief of Police Leo H. Gagnon commenting on the clean-up today. 'It teaches children to gamble and contributes in no small way to a lot of the juvenile delinquency in Timmins today."

Charges laid by police yesterday were against Claude S. Tittensor, William Nicolson and James Ralph.

Police charged that these three wholesale houses had distributed the various alleged gambling devices which were found when officers raids stores in town on Saturday.

Dog Gives Alarm, 4 Boys Save Child

Boy Scout Resuscitates 3-Year-Old Caroline VanZaret

Toronto, April 25—(CP)— Rour boys and a dog were credited today with saving three-year-old Caroline VanZant from drowning in a muddy creek near her home at suburban Buttonville.

The child's hands were stuck fast in the muddy creek-bottom and her head was below water when Morley Wallen, nine, Murray Wallen, 10, and Douglas Walton, 11, were attracted to the bank yesterday by the barking of her two-year-old pet spaniel, "Lady." The three boys pulled her out and William Hood, 19-year-old boy scout, revived her with artificial respiration methods.

Marks in the mud indicated the dog had tried to pull Caroline out after she fell into the water.

"They have been inseparable pals ever since we got the dog six months ago," Caroline's father said. "The dog was soaking wet when we got to the bank and was running around barking furiously."

Dancer and Fawn Tie up Traffic

New York, April 25 (CP)—Faith Bacon, the dancer who changed her fan for a fawn to dance at the New York World's Fair appeared in court today on a disorderly conduct charge because she stopped traffic with her Grecian costume and the fawn on Park Avenue.

Miss Bacon, 27, was arrested yesterday, posing for photographers on the street while a crowd looked on. She told Magistrate Louis Brodsky today she had not meant to tie up traffic, whereupon he dismissed the charge.

AXIS PALS IN A JOVIAL MOOD

In a jovial mood are Herman Goering, LEFT, and Italo Balbo, seen as they walked along the quay from a boat at Tripoli, Italian Libya. Balbo, famed Italian flier, is governor of the latter territory and shortly after the arrival of Goering, Gemany's No. 2 Nazi, the pair inspected the fortifications of Mussolini's African colony, a friendly and strategic gesture between two representatives of the "axis powers."

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself with a sattisfied expression and ma said, Willyum the more I let my mind dwell on it the home I'm sure Mrs. Hannah Mabel Papst is just using me as a laughing block in that play of hers. After all, Willyum, being cut from 2 lines to one and from one line to 2 words, is that any treatment for the authoress and director to award the chairman of the play committee?

No, that's my flat answer to that, pop said, and ma said, But there's such a thing as revenge.

That's what makes the world go around, and sometimes up in flames, pop said, and ma said, I'm suppose to say, She's coming. Just that and nothing more as I rush to the window, She's coming, and its a wonder that awful Mrs. Papst hasn't tried to cut my part down still further by keeping me from rushing to the window. Well anyway, on the big night of the performance that's to prevent me from adding a word of my own, such as, Why? In other words, Why, she's coming, and for even more added effect I'll slip in a significant pause. Why, pause, she's coming, ma said.

By gollies I wouldn't be surprised if it stopped the show, I can hear that burst of applause right now, he said, and ma said, It will serve Mrs. Papst right.

Another good stunt would be to drop your handbag just at that point and have about a half pound of small change roll out, that would be a great attention getter, especially if some of it went into the audience, pop said, and ma said, That would be overplaying. Mrs. Papst lent us all a copy of her book, Acting As An Art, and it seems the worst deadly sin is overplaying, she said.

Well then you might just slowly take a wad of chewing gum from your mouth and stick it under the window ledge for a little more emphasis, pop said, Like this, Well, pause, chewing gum, she's coming. Or still better, Well, pause, chewing gum, pause, she's coming, he said.

Ma claiming she was sattisfied with just the well and the pause.

PERMANENT MARKERS

In the British Isles a car retains the same license plates that are first affixed to it, no matter how old it is or how often it changes hands. The background is black and the letters and numbers white, never different. The plates are longer and the letters and figures much broader so that they are legible a long way. The plates are of a durable material, made to last and not to fade.

That system may not find approval here, but the plates could well be several inches longer and the letters and figures larger. — Stratford Beacon-Herald.

A MILLION HOMES ARE HAPPIER

A MILLION CANADIAN FAMILIES have discovered new happiness . . . new leisure . . . new savings . . . by living electrically. To acquaint these people with new uses for electricity in the home, Canadian General Electric has consistently advertised its wide range of products in the Canadian Daily Newspapers.

And records show that daily newspaper advertising does a highly effective job in promoting wider use of General Electric Appliances.

General Electric Appliances safeguard perishable foods, cook delicious meals, even wash the dishes. Other labour-saving devices make child's play of washing and ironing—keep rugs and floors spotlessly clean. Still others provide automatic heating and air conditioning. And Edison Mazda Lamps ensure good light that is kind to the eyes, while G-E Radio brings to the home a world of entertainment.

Daily newspaper advertising has made the public "electrical minded". Proof of this is strikingly evidenced by the fact that recent Canadian General Electric newspaper advertising prompted more than 40,000 men and women from Halifax to Vancouver, to write letters on the subject: "Why I Prefer the Electrical Way of Living".

CRISIS IMMINENT?

Clearly Shown by Adoption of Conscription in England in Peace - Time Says Mr. Woodsworth

London, Apr. 26 (CP)—Talk of imminent cabinet changes was heard in parliamentary lobbies today after Prime Minister Chamberlain had made his statement on conscription.

While official circles were silent on the matter, The Associated Press reported that "some observers believe the basis of the government may be widened."

Havas News Agency reported that Winston Churchill and Anthony Eden might be included in the cabinet.

As the Prime Minister concluded his statement to the Commons Campbell Stephen, Independent Labor member from Glasgow, arose and asked:

"Since the Prime Minister has adopted bit by bit the policy laid down by Mr. Churchill, does he not think that in every decency he should get out of the premiership and let Mr. Churchill in?"

Mr. Chamberlain did not reply.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Night air! Shakespeare wrote of "the poisonous damp of night", and in our time there are some who still believe that night air is injurious. This belief is probably due to the fact that the mosquito causing malaria flies and feeds at night. Night air is generally more pure than day air, as there are fewer fires and less traffic. As nearly as 1860 Florence Nightingale, the famous English nurse, wrote of the fallacy that night air injured anyone; she admonished all to sleep in well-ventilated rooms, which is excellent advice today. It is thought that the fall of Greece was due to the prevalence of malaria, as the Greeks had at that time no quinine, a South American product.

DYNAMITE STOLEN FROM STOREHOUSE

It is believed the thieves gained entrance to the storehouse by forcing the door.

FARMHAND HANGED

Regina, April 26—(CP) —Harry Heipel, 24-year-old Arcola farmhand, was hanged early today at Regina jail for the highway murder last November of an elderly farmer, J. A. Kaeser. He was arrested at Oregon, Ill., Nov. 19, 10 days after the 65-year-old Moosomin farmer's bullet-riddled body was taken from the Kaeser automobile and hidden in a slough near Sintaluta, 50 miles east of Regina.

"It Might Have Been Worse" Is Opinion on Simon's Budget

By DREW MIDDLETON
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, April 26 (AP)—Londoners, from workmen in overalls to city brokers in wing collars, were discussing what one newspaper called Sir John Simon's "Hitler Budget" today, and generally agreed "it might have been worse."

With nearly $3,000,000,000 to be raised for defence this fiscal year, partly by steeper taxes on tea, tobacco and automobiles, there was comparatively little grumbling over the budget which Sir John, Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced yesterday.

But there was plenty of grousing about conscription which it was believed the Government would announce today.

"The rich will feel the automobile tax worst," one solicitor said. "I have always like a car to get out of London. It will not be possible now, not at 25 shillings per horsepower."

"I like a bit in my tea, but I'll have to give that up if sugar gets higher," said the old apple woman in front of St. Martins-in-the-Fields Church.

A tobacconist predicted more men would smoke pipes, pointing out that cigarettes already were high and probably would be higher.

"But they won't mind paying it if it's for their good," he said.

Concerning compulsory military service, one big laborer remarked as he downed a pint of beer at a pub:—

"I went over in 1914, but I didn't have to be conscripted. I have a son to go now and he won't have to be either."

The idea that France and Russia wanted to be reassured of British determination if it should come to war did not seem to him to be sufficient reason for conscription.

"What right have they to tell us what to do?" he asked.

Some Londoners felt conscription all right if "we are sure the big fellows will be conscripted too."

Some war veterans said they were ready to go to war again but "on our own free wil, not because we are made to."

"We do not need any law to make us stand by," was a general opinion in the streets.

"That Hitler, he broke his word, he did," said a grizzled cabby. "Now if he throws his weight about again we're for it."

Jewish Visitors From Germany Barred from States

Washington, April 26—(AP) — The United States has closed its doors to further Jewish visitors from Germany, but it is still providing a haven for many who came here as visitors in recent years and never departed.

The issuance of visitors' visas to Germans whose passports show that they are Jews has been discontinued, State department officials said today, because they would be unable to go back to Germany.

One general rule, they explained, is that a prospective visitor must have a residence to which he can return. This is no longer true as to Jews leaving Germany.

James Houghteling, Commissioner of Immigration, disclosed that 5,779 Germans and Austrians who came through Ellis Island as visitors after July 1, 1934, are still in the United States under valid visas or extensions of them.

These people came into the United States under the law permitting visits for pleasure or for the transaction of international business. They were in addition to regular immigrants, whose numbers are limited by quota.

Arch Masons Welcomed By Acting Mayor

Windsor, Ont., April 26 (CP)—Solution of world problems lies within the ideals and hopes of Masonry, Acting Mayor George Bennett of Windsor told the 81st convocation of the Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons of Canada today. Presided over by Col. William Y Mills of Kingston, Grand Z of the Order, business sessions were held throughout the day.

The Acting Mayor, not a Mason, was thanked by Col. Mills for his expression of Masonic ideals and hopes for success of the Order.

King and Queen May Use Passenger Liner for Trip Rather Than Battleship

London, Apr. 26 (AP)—An alternative plan for the King and Queen to use a passenger liner rather than the battle cruiser Repulse for their voyage to Canada starting next week was reliably reported to be under serious consideration today. Buckingham Palace sources announced that nothing short of war will affect plans for the visit to Canada.

One suggestion advanced was that their Majesties might use the Canadian Pacific Liner Empress of Australia.

The Empress of Australia is now at Southampton and presumably could be made ready to undertake the voyage May 6 as originally intended. She is a vessel of 21,833 tons.

However, reports persisted that the whole question of the advisability of the trip in the light of present European conditions may be re-examined.

Nevertheless Prime Minister Chamberlain personally was understood to favor carrying out the trip.

Use of the Empress of Australia would leave the Repulse—the only one of Britain's three fastest battle cruisers in service — free for any emergency on this side of Atlantic.

Can Take All Attendants.

The size of the Empress would permit their Majesties to take the same suites of attendants as could be accommodated in the Repulse.

An alternative plan involving a passenger liner has been under consideration for a month, and perhaps was outlined as long as three months ago, in case it appeared desirable to keep the Repulse in home waters.

Robert Boothby, Conservative, has served notice he will ask the Prime Minister if the government is "satisfied that the Repulse can safely leave European waters" while the German fleet is holding war games off Spain.

The battle cruiser's sister ship, the Renown, is laid up for repairs and the battle cruiser Hood, the world's largest warship, is being overhauled at Portsmouth.

The 32,000-ton Repulse is armed with six 15-inch and twenty 4-inch guns.

PARTIAL APPROVAL OF CROLL'S BILL GIVEN BY GOV'T

Recognize Labor's Right to Organize in Unions of Choice

A LONG SESSION

Toronto, April 26—(CP)—Recognition of labor's right to organize in unions of its choice has been made by the Ontario Government through partial approval of a bill proposed by David Croll, former Minister of Labor and Liberal Member of the Legislature for Windsor-Walkerville.

Feature of a long session of the House which did not end until 3.05 a.m. was the government's acceptance of vital clauses of Mr. Croll's bill to declare it legal for employees to form themselves into a trade union, to bargain collectively with employers and to bargain through trade unions.

The government, through Labor Minister Hipel, reserved the right to amend sections which would prohibit employers from inserting provisions in contracts to restrain an employee from exercising his rights to organize and provide penalties of $100 to $1,000 for persons or corporations who prevent employees from belonging to a trade union.

Their Majesties Too Busy to Celebrate Wedding Anniversary

London, April 26—(CP Cable) — It was the 16th wedding anniversary of the King and Queen today but they were too busy with details of their forthcoming trip to Canada and the United States to celebrate the occasion.

They had hoped to see the two thousand guineas run at Newmarket but were unable to get away.

Favors Conscription Here if War Comes

Vancouver, Apr. 26 (CP)—Rt. Rev. H. E. Sexton, Anglican Bishop of Columbia, declared here last night he is fully in favor of conscription for Canada if war comes.

"I am grateful that I live in Canada, free from the stigma of nationalism, a menace to the civilized world," he said, addressing the second annual banquet of the Australia, New Zealand Association. "We should be prepared to fight for liberty and peace for life is not worth while living without liberty."

GOV'T TO ASSIST INDUSTRIES THAT PLAN TO EXPAND

Ten Percent Credit Offered by Hon. C. A. Dunning in His Budget

SPECIAL TAX OFF

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 26 (CP)—Imaginative business leadership can guide Canada out of the present era of unbalanced budgets and widespread unemployment in the opinion of Finance Minister Dunning.

In his budget speech in the House of Commons yesterday the minister threw down a challenge to the business and financial leaders of the country, chided them with lack of foresight and activity and held out a definite inducement to them to undertake construction, plant extension and modernization projects in the present year.

Although forced to report a heavy deficit for the fiscal year 1938-39 and to forecast an even heavier one for 1939-40, Mr. Dunning declared there was no reason to fear for Canada's national solvency.

Must Avoid Easy Spending

However, after ten consecutive unbalanced budgets, the Dominion could not go on indefinitely with its finances in the red. To reverse the trend governments would have to avoid easy spending and business and financial leaders would have to make every effort to expand production, employment and incomes in order to relieve governments of the necessity of embarking on work-creating schemes.

To speed this result, Mr. Dunning assured any firm embarking on construction, installation, better-

BING CROSBY NOW CARRIES A GUN

Police Probed Kidnap Threat of Children of Film Star

Hollywood, Apirl 26 —(AP) — Crooner Bing Crosby carried a gun today while agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, as usual refusing comment on their activities, probed a kidnap threat against the four children of the singer and his wife, the former Dixie Lee of the films.

Floodlights illuminated the Toluca Lake estate of the screen star and armed guards patrolled the grounds as Crosby said he had conferred with G-Men but disclaimed great concern, declaring "it's really nothing unusual; we get there (threats) every once in a while and don't pay much attention to them."

He would not discuss the nature of the threats. Spokesmen at the singer's studio denied a report one demand was made for $100,000.

Measure to be Introduced First in Peacetime In Modern British History

Conscription Bill Brought in Next Week Will Apply to Able - Bodied Men Between 20th and 21st Birthdays, British Prime Minister Declares in Momentous Speech in Commons

HOPES MEASURE IS TEMPORARY

Britain Ready to Confer With Other Nations, Among Them Germany, With Object of General Settlement Says British Premier — Measure is Taken for Sake of Commitments in Europe and for Peace

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Apr. 26 (CP Cable)—In a momentous statement carefully timed to precede Chancellor Hitler's speech Friday, Prime Minister Chamberlain today announced to the House of Commons that compulsory military training will be introduced in Great Britain during peace for the first time in modern history.

Legislation will be introduced next week giving the government the power to call up for military training all men between the ages of 20 and 21 years. They will receive six months training and then either enter the territorial army for three and a half years or pass into the special reserve of the regular army.

200,000 TRAINED EACH YEAR.

A total of 310,000 men will be affected each year, but due to physical disabilities and other limitations, the government expects the number of men to be trained each year to be approximatley 200,000.

An official spokesman said the conscription bill will apply to able-bodied men "between their 20th and 21st birthdays". However, he pointed out that youths bordering on these birthdays will be able to take their training if they have special reasons.

As a prelude to the announcement of conscription, the prime minister said the British government was ready to discuss with the German government a "general settlement". Replying to a question, Mr. Chamberlain said:

"The British government would be ready to take part in discussion with the German government with a view to a general settlement if they were satisfied such a discussion would be welcome and would be likely to have useful results."

LIMIT ARMS PROFITS.

Later the Prime Minister announced steps would be taken to limit the profits of armament firms and legislation to that end would be introduced shortly in parliament.

The conscription announcement was designed as a warning to Germany and Italy that Britain is prepared to stand behind her guarantees of the independence of Rumania, Poland and Greece.

FLIGHT STOPPED BY HEAVY STORMS

Russian Flier Hopes However to Reach New York by Sunday

Moscow, April 26 (AP)—Vladimir Kokkinaki, Russian long-distance flier, still hoped today to reach New York in time for the opening of the World's Fair despite postponement because of bad weather of his proposed Moscow-New York flight.

Storms over Finland forced a delay in his take-off for the non-stop hop by way of Finland and Labrador. He had planned a 4 a.m. (8 p..m. E.S.T. Tuesday) start.

He estimated a maximum of 25 hours would be required for the trip and that he would still have time to reach New York before Sunday if weather does not force repeated postponements. The aviator flew from Moscow to Vladivostok in the Far East last June in 24 hours.

Two Tweed Boys Hurt When Dynamite Cap Explodes in Hands

Tweed, Ont., (Special)—Careless curiosity on the part of Sanford Johnson and Howard Baldwin, two teen-aged Tweed youths resulted in badly lacerated fingers when a dynamite cap they were playing with, suddenly epxloded.

Obtaining the cap from an undisclosed source the youths, heedless of the warnings of others applied the flame of a cigarette lighter to it," to see what would happen."

"It" happened alright and today two sadder but wiser boys are nursing badly torn fingers as a result of their "experiment."

Inner Workings of Poison Ring Disclosed by Woman's Confession

Philadelphia, April 26 (AP)—A 41-year-old mother of two children was jailed on a murder charge in a four-state poison ring investigation today after allegedly admitting she killed her husband of 20 years for $7,000 insurance money.

The woman, Mrs. Josephine Romaldo, was the sixth person charged with murder in connection with the case. A man already has been convicted and sentenced to death and another woman has confessed poisoning three persons.

The Philadelphia Record quoted a "high police official" as saying a signed statement by Mrs. Romaldo disclosed the inner workings of the poison ring and that as a result approximately 75 additional arrests on murder charges would be made within a month.

Investigators have said the ring, operating in Pennsylvania, New York, Delaware and New Jersey, may have killed "scores" of persons in the last 10 years and defrauded insurance companies of thousands of dollars.

An investigator for the state quoted Mrs. Romaldo as saying she killed her husband, Antonio, 44, three years ago by slowly poisoning him under instructions supplied by members of the ring. The Record said it learned the ring gave advice on how to administer poison for a flat fee of $300.

'No Room on Earth' For Nation or Group That Would Enslave All Others—Hull

Washington, April 26 (AP)—State Secretary Hull, speaking three days before Chancellor Hitler's scheduled reply to President Roosevelt's appeal for peace declared last night there was "not room on this earth" for a nation or group of nations that would enslave all the others.

He addressed the 75th anniversary dinner of the American Red Cross. Some observers interpreted his remarks as both a warning and an appeal to Chancellor Hitler. The State Department sent the major parts of his speech to all United States diplomats in Europe and South America.

"There is ample room on this earth for the 2,000,000,000 human beings who inhabit it," Hull said. "There are ample known resources of materials and skill to enable all nations to enjoy a high level of economic prosperity and to face a future of continued plenty.

"But there has never been, and and there is not today, room on this earth for a political organization of mankind under which a single nation or a group of nations will enslave and dominate all the others."

Bloomfield Holstein Chosen One of Ten Canadian Cows at Fair

Outstanding in a representative herd of ten Canadian Holstein-Friesian cows to be shown in the Borden Company's "Dairy World of Tomorrow" at the New York World's Fair, will be "Countess Alcartra Hartog" queen of the herd of Mr. Fred Hubbs, Bloomfield, prominent Canadian breeder and president of the Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada.

Mr. Hubbs' cow is eight years' old and is of splendid type and quality. She is the proud possessor of an enviable R.O.P. record and is now in heavy milk production. Her recent record-of-production test was five per cent, which is, according to breeders, a highly creditable start on a new record which will be completed during her stay at the Fair.

The Canadian prize herd, will be milked by a special process in full view of spectators at the Fair, and will be identified with name plates, carrying the name and address of the owner. Each animal passed a series of rigorous tests, some fifteen in all, given by the Federal Health of Animals' Branch before being accepted for the exhibit.

Other members of the show herd have been drawn from the herds of prominent Ontario and British Columbia breeders.

Wellington Fishermen Blocked by Drifting Of Sand into Channel

Failure of moving icefields of West Lake to clear the narrow channel connecting that body of water with Lake Ontario at the eastern limits of the village of Wellington, of sand, has effectively prevented fishermen of that village from placing their nets in the larger body of water.

The ice which went out last week usually clears the sand-choked channel after a temporary dam built at the head of the channel is dynamited. This year however, due to the fact that a breakwater was erected by the government for the purpose of diverting the sand that annually fills the channel, no dam was erected.

Apparently the breakwater failed to have the desired effect and now there is approximately eighteen inches of water flowing in the channel which is nearly filled with the sand washed in by the waters of Lake Ontario.

Fishermen, helpless in West Lake, and unable to navigate their heavy fishing boats over the bar, are naturally up in arms over the affair, and are clamboring for some kind of action. Several have threatened to pick their fishing gear and move to another part of the district where fishing activities are not dependent on the whims of nature and government officials, as one irate netman puts it.

QUICK THINKING SAVES BOY'S LIFE

Tweed Lad Clutches Tree Branches and is Saved from Going Over Dam

Tweed, Ont.— (Special)— Presence of mind of a twelve-year-old boy swept over the sluiceway of a dam near here by the flood-swollen waters of the Moira river, when he clutched overhanging limbs of riverbank willows, and his dramatic rescue by a garage-worker who plunged to his help while companions clung to a rope fastened around his waist, cheated the flood waters of the river of a potential victim here the other day.

Falling into the water above the dam, Stafford Donahue, was swept through the sluiceway by the swifty moving water. By a quirk of fate and the whims of the river he missed going over the dam, the currents sweeping him toward the sluiceway, through which he plunged to the river below.

Swept downriver by the surging currents, the boy was carried near the riverbank. Overhanging branches of willows drooping to near water-level met his frightened gaze and in desperation he caught and clung to the slender limbs.

Meanwhile a thoroughly frightened companion had summoned help. Attaching a rope around his waist, Robert Stocker, employee of the Trudeau Motors branch here plunged into the torrent to the boy's rescue while others clung to the rope. Stocker brought the frightened boy to safety, none the worse for his thrilling experience.

It is the intention of the Salvation Army to erect a new citadel in Belleville on the site of the present one on Pinnacle Street. Ex-mayor M. P. Duff who was chosen as chairman of the Salvation Army Building Campaign Committee.

At an organization meeting of the Salvation Army Building Campaign Committee, composed of citizens, held last evening in the Y.M.C.A., Mr. M. P. The campaign was set to open on May 15th.

The amount of money required to complete the scheme under consideration is $6,000.

The committee at its organization meeting decided that the objective of the present campaign should be $3,000. It was the unanimous opinion that this amount could be raised without difficulty.

Shannonville

Shannonville — The village and district was well represented at a miscellaneous shower held in the Orange Hall on Friday night in honour of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Liddle, popular members of the younger set of the village who were recently married.

Both Bert and Martha are well-known in the district having lived practically all their lives in the neighbourhood and always taking part in the social and other activities. Bert is member of the Shannonville hockey and baseball teams of which he is a valued member. Both teams were well-represented at the shower. During the evening the gay crowd danced to music furnished by a talented group of musicians led by Merle Robinson.

Immediately preceding the social hour the bridal pair were given seats of honour on the platform at which time a presentation address was read by Mrs. Bruce Reid to which appropriate replies were given by Mr. and Mrs. Liddle. The presents received by the popular couple were beautiful and many in number.

The presentation address:

Shanonville, Ont.
March 21, 1939

Dear Martha and Bert

Your many friends are gathered here this evening to celebrate with you for one evening at least in your recent marriage. We might take this opportunity to extend our best wishes and hopes for future happiness and success.

You are both well-known in the village and therefore none of us need an introduction. Although you have not been with us for the past two years, Martha, we have not forgotten you and still remember the co-operation that you used to give us during any of our endeavours. We believe that you will be happy among your old friends who all extend their cordial invitations to visit with them. Bert of course is known throughout the district in which he is a very popular member of the younger set. During the past few years Bert you have played with our baseball and hockey teams and we hope that you will continue to do so and perhaps Martha you might be able to persuade him to do so as after all you are supposed to be the "Better Half".

Not that we wish to be giving any advice but we feel sure that Jack Fitzgerald who is well-versed in the road of matrimony might consent to do so and perhaps Gerald Sager who although lacking in practical experience might be able to give some timely advice.

We wish good health to stay with you,
And things to waken laughter
And should some days be dark and grey
We wish you sunshine after.
We wish enough of wealth for you
And time to fold your hands and rest,
In time of care and hurry
And then we wish each coming day
To bless you as it meets you
And think often of these Friends who greet you.

Signed on behalf of the village and community.

April Showers

April showers are keeping local residents in a "dither" these spring days. When they venture out to any distance without their raincoats they are usually caught in a shower and when they wear a coat they usually find "Old Sol" shining in all his glory.

Softball Inaugurated

Melrose baseball team which disbanded two years ago when it found that it could not contend with the "imported" teams of the South Hastings League is seriously considering changing its loyalty from baseball to softball this coming semester according to Ernie Pascoe popular member of the team when seen in the village over the week-end. An organization meeting was held at the enterprising hamlet last week at which plans were outlined for the future.

Mr. Everett Stratton is confined to his home due to illness.

Mr. William Benn of Carman, Manitoba, is visiting in the community the guest of his sister, Mrs. Charley Howard and Mr. Howard. On Wednesday Mr. Benn accompanied by Mrs. Howard motored to Marlbank where they were the guests of their brother, Mr. Lawrence Benn.

Mrs. Edward Kent is able to be out again after being confined to her bed for a very lengthy period.

Local cheese factories are busily preparing for opening day which in all likelihood will be close to the first of May. The Shannonville cheese company is making extensive changes to its factory that should prove to be of the greatest improvement. Mr. William Kemp is the cheesemaker in the Shannonville Factory this year. Mr. Clarence Mastin is the maker at the Mountain Cheese factory which will open in the very near future.

It is believed that factories in this district will enjoy a 'Bumper' year due to the fact that the price of cream is rather low and the outlook for the season is brighter in every standpoint.

The Rev. Herbert Pringle, Tyendinaga Reserve Clergyman, conducted the service in the Trinity Church on Sunday evening at which a large congregation was in attendance. The Rev. Mr. Pringle delivered a very inspiring sermon. Miss Elma Bell presided at the organ.

Mr. George Barnhart, Tyendinaga Reserve resident received a very unfortunate injury last week when he was kicked in the arm by a horse by which he was standing. It was found upon examination that Mr. Barnhart was suffering from a broken arm. It was necessary to remove the injured man to hospital where treatment was given.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Lewis and daughter, Dora of Belleville, Mrs. Trumbell and Mr. and Mrs. Carter of Frankford, were Thursday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Howard.

Due to the fact that no minister has been appointed to this Parish the Rev. Herbert Pringle will conduct an evening service in the Point Anne Anglican Church this coming Sunday. Mr. Pringle will continue alternating the services in the two churches, (Shannonville and Point Anne) until the new minister arrives.

Due to the rough condition of the road at the "Y" just east of the village night watchmen are being kept there until the condition has been rectified. On Sunday one of the road employees was flagging cars at the same spot.

Mr. Vincent Bardy left for Burlington on Sunday where he has secured employment for the summer months.

The Rev. J. Cantrell and Arthur of Parham, were Saturday callers at the home of Mrs. Jack Kent.

Word was received on Wednesday of the death in Toronto of Mr. Frank Carr. Mr. Carr was a well known and highly respected former resident of Frankford and district, moving to Toronto just last fall. The sympathy of the whole community is extended to the family.

Hockey equipment has been laid away and any evening now, groups of boys and girls can be seen and heard playing the old "Hit and Run" game on the different sand lots in the village. It is rumored that a Soft Ball League is being formed in town at an early date which will help to stir up the place a little anyway.

Mrs. John Rannie attended the funerals of her great uncle, John Coutts and her cousin, Miss Annie Coutts, of Toronto. Mr. Coutts had been an invalid for some time as he had attained the great age of ninety eight years. His daughters, Annie and Mabel, nursed him faithfully and well and after his reath recently, while standing viewing his remains in his casket Annie dropped at the side of the casket, so the funeral was postponed and a double funeral was held.

St. Andrew's Church, Burnbrae, held their postponed W.M.S. and M.B. Easter programme on Sunday night last when an interesting programme was put on. Miss Thelma Wallace, president of the Mission Band, presided. The programme was of an Easter nature, one part representing the women who first came to the Sepulchre, Mesdames W. H. Little, Geo. Craighead and Roy Walker. Choruses, trios, duets, were interspersed. Mrs. Alex Milne took a prominent part in a very capable way.

Misses Elsie Rannie and Fern Weatherell were in Toronto through the O.E.C. last week, the former regarding the music and the latter as teaching in rural schools.

Mr. Malcolm Hutcheson and Mr. Angus Todd were also in attendance.

Mr. Alex Milne is ill.

Sidney Crossing

Sidney Crossing—Mr. Wm. Pepper, Jr., of Belleville, called on Mr. Bruce Hogle on Sunday afternoon.

Queensboro

Queensboro—The Good Neighbors Mission Band was held at the parsonage on Saturday afternoon, April 15th. The meeting was opened by singing a hymn, followed by prayer by Mrs. Snelgrove and the class following with the memory selection. "Christ the Lord is Risen Today" was sung and two girls and two boys told the story of Easter. The offering was taken and another hymn sung, after which the minutes of the last meeting were read, also the Roll Call given.

Bessie Rousehorn read a story and the members sang "God Sees the Little Sparrow Fall." Carl Snelgrove read a poem followed by a story by Dorothy Leslie. A song from "World's Friends" was sung and the meeting was closed with prayer. The remainder of the afternoon was spent in games.

Mr. and Mrs. Gibson Bailey, of Cooper and Mrs. Harold Bailey of Bancroft, spent Wednesday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rollins.

Mr. Dave Johnson, Cordova, spent Thursday with Queensboro relatives.

Mrs. Electa Tanner has returned to her home at Hart's, after spending the Winter with Mrs. Sam Palmer.

Inspector A. W. McGuire, B.A., of Tweed, paid his regular visit to Queensboro School on Friday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Allair, of Toronto, spent a few days last week with relatives here.

The Ivanhoe Young People presented their play, "The Girl in the Fur Coat" in the Orange Hall on Wednesday evening under the auspices of the United Church W.A. There was a good crowd in attendance and the play was greatly enjoyed by all present. Piano music by Miss Edna Reid of Ivanhoe and Mr. Will Glover, also solos with guitar accompaniment by Mr. Melvin Loucks were given between the acts.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Clarke and family, Eldorado, spent Sunday with relatives in this vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Eaton, Belleville, spent Sunday with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Groves.

Mr. and Mrs. Ford Tumelty and family, Madoc, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Irvine Delyea.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Groves spent the week-end with Mrs. H. Goodmurphy at Consecon.

OVERHILL PROTECTION

On a highway in one of the eastern states a new device is being tried out for its value in preventing accidents on hills. The series of prisms mirror the traffic coming on either side of the hill and picture the traffic so that there can be no danger of collisions as so often happen today on hills.

So science marches on to save men's lives where men do not always follow the common sense view of in driving.

Some day there may be such devices for indicating the traffic around curves, and picturing the roadway ahead, for peering far through the darkness.

There seems no end of inventions for use of man.

The world has not yet reached the stage where there is no money for devices of this kind. Highways really need something of the sort of the mirrors on the hill tops to protect safe drivers and others from those who are reckless. This device seems so good and so effective that it will likely be used on many of the roads in the continent in the course of a few years.

NAZI TIMETABLE

Hitler's timetable has been in the light since Munich in September 1938. It particularly showed up in March 1939 with the final engulfing of Czecho-Slovakia. Now the concern is whether the Germans are about to strike again.

His birthday passed without any untoward events though such had been feared. (This fear is part of his strategy of propaganda). That absence of a coup leads to a hope that the immediate future may not see great changes. But there is no certainty of just what the Fuehrer may decide upon in the light of recent events, the formation of the "stop-Germany" bloc and President Roosevelt's appeal to the German and Italian governments to give peace guarantees for a period of at least ten years with respect to thirty-one nations whom the American executive named. This may have forced him to make some change in his timing of plans.

AFTER FRIDAY IN THE REICHSTAG

After next Friday what will Hitler's plan for Europe look like to the nations? Those who have read excerpts from his book "Meih Kampf", or the entire book, which was completed in 1926, dealing with his vision of Germany in the world of the future, will look to see if there is any change yet in his project. So far he seems to have followed fairly closely his original plans, drafted so long ago.

He has however of late, it would seem been forced to change his plan slightly because of the Anglo-French plan of the entire Hitler bloc in East and Middle Europe.

Is Hitler going to throw the weight of all upon the army, navy and air force this year? Some guess that his generals advise war at once but that Hitler urges two months' delay.

Hitler is the arch-strategist of diplomacy in German history as far as immediate results appear and may be will not throw the burden on his generals but rather trust to his own diplomacy he has been following so far.

There is in many minds a feeling that if war does not break out shortly, it may not take place, that if war does not take place inside of seven or eight months it will not take place at all in view of the preponderance of weight of the democratic powers in resources of all kinds, materials, money, armments ever growing in power and importance, and in men.

IN THE MEDITERRANEAN

The island of Cyprus is under development by Great Britain and will in time be of invaluable strength along with Gibraltar and Malta. Cyprus is located within a 300-mile circle which includes the Italian air base at Leros and Rhodes, of the Dodecanese group, Alexandria, Port Said, Beirut and Haifa. Once Britain offered Cyprus to Greece when she went into the Great War as an ally but Greece declined. Its value as a supplement to Alexandria will continue to grow.

Many an attempt has been made to seize the mastery of the Mediterranean. Napoleon was the last to fail. Now Mussolini calls it mare nostrum (our sea). He has a submarine base between Sicily and Tunisia. He has a very powerful submarine fleet and many airplanes.

Britain's navy is at its greatest since the last war and vessels are being turned out at the rate of more than one a week. France's fleet is powerful and France has six air and naval bases in the Mediterranean.

Gibraltar was never so strong as it is today. Ceuta might possibly be a base for hostile guns but the warships of Britain and France are one of the great factors.

Malta, says a New York Times writer is "the great focal point of the Mediterranean and the British mean to keep it." The British fleet is concentrated at this point.

THE GARDEN AWAKES

Oh, the garden is peeping through the snow
Rousing itself from its long Winter dream;
In its wise old eyes is a joyous gleam
As it feels the kiss of the sun's bright beam,
And glimpses the waters aflow.

The mutinous creeks that swirl and quiver,
Disdaining restraint, o'erleap the banks
And scamper about in juvenile pranks
Among the trees, then—back in their ranks,
They steadily march to the river.

The rivulets gurgle murmurously,
Rippling and glinting like beaten brass,
The vagabond winds caress the face
Of the little still ponds as over they race,
And ruffle them playfully.

The waters are everywhere hurrying
To join their mother, the distant sea,
From the tiny stream that sings in its glee,
To the rapids that roar vehemently—
Or even the bubbling spring.

So the garden peeps through its blanket of snow,
And smiles 'neath its vanishing coverlet,
For the song of the rippling rivulet
Will waken the slumbering violet,
'As sure as the south winds blow.

OIL ON THE TROUBLED WATER IN PARLIAMENT is not often effective, but in that medley, or melee, or what have you, of words down at Ottawa, while some speeches over four hours long, argumentative, vituperative and generally dipped in gall, when the oil is applied by a woman some heed should be taken, and by a woman whose vision is not clouded by party bias of narrow views, a woman of the great outdoors whose vision has been cleared and magnified by the sparkling Arctic nights of the Yukon and companionship with those men and women of the great outdoors who are not tied to one hitching post in front of the general store but take the whole world as their orbit and keep moving, the argonauts of discovery. Mrs. George Black, Member of Parliament for the Yukon, rose in her place in the House and gently chided the members for the partisan tone of the unemployment debate. She said that berating the Minister of Labor would not help the unemployed. She appealed to Social Credit and C.C.F. members to discuss the problem without bias. "Unless we come to grips with it we will reap the whirlwind," she said: "I have heard some clever men say a woman's tongue is hung in the middle and loose at both ends," said Mrs. Black. "But that has been refuted in the past few days. I have listened closely but in vain for a solution of this problem."

....During the present session, Mrs. Black said she had given more than $100 to transients who had approached her and she had given out 11 self-addressed, stamped envelopes with the request that recipients advise her when they reached their destination. Not one had been returned to her.

"My opinion is that there are a number of men, and possibly women, who would not work under any circumstances if they could get along wtihout working. But they are in the minority. I think 90 per cent of the unemployed are ready and willing to work."

Mrs. Black said she believed children should have a semi-military training for the discipline it would impart.

"If we do not come to grips with this problem we will certainly reap the whirlwind. I am afraid of the brand of bolshevism or socialism preached in camps and industrial organizations by men who want to make trouble. It is a matter of absolute indifference to me personally which party is in power. I want good government first, last and all the time."

Turning to the Social Credit and C. C. F. groups, Mrs. Black said "I ask these honorable members to my left, and there are many I admire, not to go back to 1930 and 1931 not to berate the present Minister of Labor but to try to help that man do what you think he should do."

Attacks on the minister would not help the unemployed in the streets, she said. "I am going to ask you to discuss these questions in the family. When your son asks you a question you don't rant at him—you sit down quietly and talk to him."

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

April 26th., 1919.

"The Better 'Ole" will be the attraction at Griffin's Opera House on the evening of May 7th.

What about Victoria Park? For one year there has been only a temporary bridge entrance, neither rustic nor artistic. No time should be lost in preparing plans for a permanent structure and fixing up the park generally as a recreation place for the public. In its present state the park is not a good advertisement to strangers. Arrangements might be made for weekly band concerts. Zwick's Island should also receive some attention; it could be made an attractive place for citizens to spend afternoons.

After the regular meeting of Court Moira I.O.F. of this city last evening, a smoker was held and during the proceedings Bro. Chas. Walters, Financial Secretary, and Bro. S. S. Pinkle, Recording Secretary, were each presented with a handsome chair. Bro. Herity, Court Deputy, made the presentations, which were suitably acknowledged.

30 YEARS AGO

April 26th., 1909.

The ranks of the 15th. Regiment are about filled; only 15 vacancies, according to Col. Stewart.

To commemorate the 90th. anniversary of the founding of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, the members of Belleville and Mizpah Lodges attended the morning service at the Baptist Church on Sunday. The turnout was very large and was headed in the march to the church by the Oddfellows' Band. The sermon was preached by the Rev. J. A. Hilts.

James Price, a stranger in the city, found his brother here after making a search of the city for him. The brother resides on McDonald Avenue, and the two had not seen each other for twenty years. It was a happy reunion.

Mr. Sanford R. Burrows has returned home after a visit to friends in Washington and New York City.

Mr. Frank Wallace, eldest son of Mr. Robert Wallace of this city, will please accept our congratulations on having received with honors the degree of B.A. at Queen's University, Kingston.

40 YEARS AGO

April 26th., 1899.

Mr. L. A. Appleby, County Gaoler, received a canvas fishing boat yesterday from Battle Creek, Mich. The boat is much admired by all who have seen it. The weight capacity of the boat is 850 pounds.

Mr. Mirley Sine recently purchased a fine pair of black horses for carriage driving.

The Y. M. C. A. rooms were crowded last evening with visitors who came to view the exhibits of the members of the Camera Club. The display was in every respect a credible one. The exhibit of Mr. Percy O. Pitney took first prize; Mr. C. W. Good won second prize and Mr. D. Stewart won third prize.

The first meeting of the Belleville Cheese Board for the season will be held on May 2nd.

Mr. Ezra Will Holton, an old Belleville boy, now of Quincey, Ill., who has been here on a visit, left last night for Montreal.

50 YEARS AGO

April 26th., 1889.

A meeting of the officers of the 15th. Battalion was held last evening and it was decided to lay a concrete floor in the drill shed, and to proceed with the gymnasium, which will be in the rear part of the building. Col. S. S. Lazier and Quartermaster W. W. Pope, will proceed to Montreal on Monday next to order white helmets and also leggings for the men. The new uniforms have been distributed to the captains. The officers room has been furnished. George Brooker has been appointed armory caretaker.

The steamer Empress of India will leave Picton for Toronto early next week.

The popular steamer Annie Gilbert will commence on Monday next to run to Massassaga Park every afternoon at 3 o'clock. This trip affords a pleasant outing.

Mr. Joseph F. Way of this city is at present in Los Angeles, California.

Mr. J. C. Jamieson left today for Chicago where he will spend a short time with friends.

Mr. Ripley and "The Kilt"

Sir: "Believe it or not," claimed Mr. Ripley last week, "kilts are not of Scotch origin. They were brought to Scotland by a French tailor (1745)."

Believe it or not. Mr. Ripley, with all deference to Parisian couturiers, the "hellandman's" kilt is no French "importation." Why, man oh man, the kilt is the final version of mankind's first raiment dating from the time when fashion dictated a hand-tailored bearskin draped around the torso.

Succeeding races improved upon the original. Linen, cotton and wool supplanted skins and this light form of garment which left the limbs at freedom became common to all European nations. The ample folds of cloth were fastened around the middle by the ancient Celts and, falling to the knee, became their peculiar costume.

The Highlanders of Scotland laid this antiquated dress aside in the 16th. century and adopted their own versions—breacan an fheile, in the Gaelic—or belted plaid, so called from being fastened around the body by a belt. This loose robe—kilt and plaid, as we know them today, in one piece—contained 18 yards of material and answered the purpose of a garment by day, a comfortable cloak in bad weather and bedding by night, for by unfastening the belt the whole was disengaged.

x x

The Scots and Irish, people of identic Celtic origin, resembled each other closely in dress and arms. Nor was the separate kilt or philibeag a recent improvement. As late as the battle of Killiecrankie, in 1689, the Highlander was wont to strip off shirt and plaid when hotly engaged and had the belted plaid been the garment then worn he must have stood "pugnare in nudo corpore" (in his birthday suit, to you). No, a simple covering for the lower portion of the body by wrapping around the loins a piece of some material was evidently the primitive garb of all nations, and the kilt, therefore, is the oldest, as it is the most characteristic relic of the ancient Highland costume.

When Stewart hopes died with Scotland's brave on the field of Culloden, the Highland dress was proscribed and its wearers hunted like outlaws. Their pride humbled, their hopes blasted, the men of the bens and the glens fled from their ancestral soil. Canada received many and a new Celtic race sprang us to nourish their children in the traditions of a noble breed.

The great Chatham, however, perceived the value of the Highlander in the public service and legalized their fondly cherished costume when worn in the British army. The result was that 50 Highland battalions were embodied from 1740 to 1800. In "the garb of old Gaul" the Highland clan is proud, fierce and fearless— ready to march and die on the field of conflict. In kilt and plaid, in bonnet and feather the sons of the North have carried England's flag to victory on many a far and bloody field.

England's rulers have long evidenced a love for the dress of Scotland. James V. wore the tartan in 1538 when a-hunting in the Highlands. Bonnie Prince Charlie adopted the kilt in that brief and fateful '45. (He didn't bring a French tailor, Mr. Ripley). Queen Victoria did much to restore its ancient grandeur and our own beloved Queen cherished the garb of her race. His Majesty the King is Colonel in Chief of a Highland regiment and often appears in the kilt. At Balmoral Highland tradition is maintained in Royal fashion.

x x

To the true Celt, the Highland garb is far more than a fashion or the gallant trapping of martial pomp. It is the symbol of an ancient and revered society. It revives the devoted loyalty of the clansmen for their chief. It recalls the memories of an exiled Royal race. It opens the floodgates of Scottish patriotism and makes the wearer proud to think he may yet breathe the free air in "the land of the mountain and the flood."

In fancy, he marches under the banner of his chief; the pipes ring with their wild, thrilling music; the war-cry makes the mountains quake and the tartan mayhap is steeped in the blood of the brave. Could this be inspired by the needle and thread of a French tailor?

Today tartan and kilt have been restored to their rightful place of honor. Many Scottish men still wear them in the ballroom, on the grouse-shoot, on the curling ice not only as a badge of national distinction but because the kilt is so peculiarly fitted to the life they love—amid the heather hills and rushing torrents; in the society of those who treasure this last tie with a race of heroes.

So, Mr. Ripley, let this be a lesson to you. And if you're still of the same mind, here's the Encyclopaedia Britannica on the kilt: "Properly the short, loose skirt reaching to the knees and forming part of the dress of the Scottish Highlander. The word means girded or tucked up and is probably of Scandinavian origin. The early kilt was not a separate garment but merely the lower part of the plaid in which the Highlander wrapped himself."—And call it "the kilt" next time.—Thos. H. Johnstone, Ottawa, in letter to Ottawa Journal.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Diarrhoea May Be Harmful or Harmless

You read much about constipation because between 40 to 60 percent of adults are constipated to some extent. Physicians in charge of outdoor and indoor hospital clinics state that perhaps as high as 70 per cent of their patients give a history of constipation.

There is also a large number of individuals who suffer with diarrhoea and if it is not too severe they are content because they feel that they would sooner have diarrhoea than be constipated. Diarrhoea is frequent during the warm weather.

What causes diarrhoea? Diarrhoea results from disorders of the small intestine and may be organic or functional (not organic). It may also result from disorders of the large intestine and from disorders of other organs—liver, stomach, nerves.

As diarrhoea may be due to simple or innocent causes, or to serious or organic changes, the cause should be sought, to allay or ease the mind or to prevent serious consequences.

The difference between the functional (innocent or non-organic) diarrhoea and the organic diarrhoea due to changes in the lining of the small intestine caused by dangerous organisms or growths, is outlined by Dr. Harry Gauss in his book 'Clinical Dietetics'.

Functional diarrhoea: — 1 The onset is sudden. 2—The direct cause is immediate or known (a) the recent eating of unripe fruit or vegetables, (b) the recent eating of contaminated foods, (c) emotional stress or upsetment, (d) sudden changes in the weather. 3—Diarrhoea is the principal symptom and lasts but a short time. 4—Cramps may be present and very little, if any, pain at any one spot in the abdomen. 5.—There is no blood or pus in the stools. 6—There is little or no loss of weight, fever, or anaemia, although a feeling of weakness may be present. 7—The Xray examination shows an increased amount of movement but no trouble at any one spot.

Organic diarrhoea: 1—The diarrhoea comes on slowly and is almost unnoticed. 2.— The direct cause is unknown as the trouble which started the diarrhoea may have occurred days, weeks, or months before, (a) the food or beverage which was contaminated with harmful organisms or parasites had been eaten, (b) diarrhoea due to poisons is gradual. 3—Diarrhoea is principal symptom, lasts a long time, blood and pus are commonly found, pain and cramps mostly in one spot, Xray may show trouble present; there may be fever, loss of weight, anaemia. 5.—The harmful organisms or parasites may be found in the stools.

The M. D. General Practitioner

Humanity seems to be divided into two classes—those who like "going to the doctor" and those who don't. The latter undoubtedly predominate, but there is a large number of people who run to the doctor when they have the least ailment. In fact there is a large number who run to the doctor when they haven't any ailment at all, but they brood over some inconsequential condition and worry as to what it is or what it may become; or they hear or read about other people's ailments. Every doctor meets this kind of patient. He loses them now and again, but they are replaced by others, because people of that kind like to go from doctor to doctor for different advice and treatment.

Specialists are valuable members of the profession. It was not until about the end of the last century that they began to establish themselves, but today medical directories list dermatologists, ophthalmologists, urologists, gynaecologists, internists, allergists, cardiologists, brain surgeons, oral surgeons, neurologists, physiotherapists, psychiatrists, orthopedists, radiologists, alienists, proctologists, endocrinologists, obstetricians, psychoanalysts, plastic surgeons, cosmetic surgeons, pediatricians and several other lines. The person who is sent to a hospital for a general check-up may pass through the hands of any half dozen or more of the specialists named. He or she has the satisfaction of knowing that when they have carded the reports the doctor who co-ordinates the final reading knows everything worth knowing, and there is little chance of anything escaping observation.

The general practitioner, however, the man who serves in the small cities, towns and rural communities, must still command the respect and admiration of his patients. Only in exceptional instances does he think it necessary or advisable to send people to centres where they may get a lot of "high-power" handling. He takes things as they come, dealing with anything from colds or festered fingers to carcinoma and Bang's disease. To these things he applies wonderful knowledge and skill, and an amount of personal attention which the specialist does not and cannot give; and the general practitioner in town or country has a record that will compare with anything his exclusive confreres may do. For example, we were talking to a small city practitioner some time ago and mentioned about a boy who had been flown from Toronto to a big American hospital to have a bead extracted from his lung. The doctor smiled, fished a bead from his trouser's pocket and quietly remarked: "I took that from a boy's lung yesterday."

Dr. A. R. Dafoe, the Country Doctor, while proud of his quints, thinks he did a better job when he saved the life of a woman who had shot herself and injured her brain. But he would not be called a brain surgeon—just a general practitioner.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

LUNATIC SUGGESTION

It is suggested by some zealous patriot that all Canadians should adopt a national dress of red, white and blue during the visit of the King and Queen.

Thus, the men would wear red vests with white and blue trimmings. The women would adapt the same colours to the costumes, while anybody who wished to be particularly swank would carry a tricolor cane.

"Canadians," says the propoger of this scheme, "would make a name for themselves if this plan were carried out."

They certainly would. And the name they would make for themselves would be spelled "L u n a t i c."—Vancouver Sun.

IN THE SUBWAY

In these days of "streamlined" handbags, lipstick, fountain pens, and furniture it is inevitable that the new light-weight train which the B. M. T. (Brooklyn, Manhattan Transit Corporation) demonstrated should be hailed as a "stream-lined" evolution of the heavy, rail pounding coach which has made subway travel a deafening experience.

Streamlined in the engineering sense the new cars certainly are not; nor would there be any sense in shaping them like airplane fuselages when they will never be called upon to make more than 40 miles an hour. But their dark blue and white ivory sides are a pleasant relief from the drab hues to which we have been accustomed.

Aluminum alloys take the place of steel wherever possible, with the result that the weight of a single car has been reduced from the conventional 150,000 pounds to 76,000. Rubber springs and rubber "sandwiches" between wheel rims and axles reduce the wear and tear on rails and hence much of the noise that we have accepted as a necessary evil.—N. Y. Times.

STILL PIONEERING

Leadership demands constant pioneering—discovering and developing the new and better method of doing the things we have to do.

Time was when the introduction of a new implement was a memorable and historic event, but these were the early days in the application of mechanics to farming operations. Today, changes succeed each other with greater rapidity and even the most revolutionary innovations are accepted with little acclaim.

Not in any period of the ninety years of Massey-Harris history has such skill been employed in the designing and developing of machines for the farm as there is today. The Company's engineers, in their extensive field experiments, are constantly testing new ideas and developing, under actual conditions, machines and attachments specifically suited to the requirements of the territory for which they are intended.

Thus, whether it be a one-handled walking plow to be used by a native, and even perhaps drawn by natives, on the South African veldt; a power-driven mower to cope with the luxuriant growth of grass on an English meadow, or the One-Way Disc Seeder developed to help the farmer on the prairies of Western Canada combat soil drifting, it is the result of definite scientific research by the Company's field engineers.

And in the motorized mechanization that is taking place in farming operations, Massey-Harris is in the forefront, still pioneering in bringing to farmers the latest developments in Tractors, Combines and other power equipment.

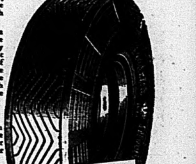
HOW A BURNING MATCH TELLS WHICH TIRE GIVES THE QUICKEST NON-SKID STOPS

There's no more helpless feeling than when your car starts to swerve and skid on a wet, slippery road. Why not investigate the new Goodrich Silvertown . . . the tire that stops you quicker on a wet pavement than you've ever stopped before!

The tire even looks different. Your Goodrich dealer will tell you the Life-Saver Tread sweeps wet roads so dry you can light a match on its tracks! Yes, when a tire sweeps wet roads so dry you can actually light a match on its track that's plenty of proof it can be depended upon in emergencies to give you a quick non-skid stop!



WHEN A CHILD darts across your path in a blinding rain—when a train suddenly looms ahead at a crossing—in a hundred and one situations you may meet on a rainy day—think what it will mean to have tires on your car that really dry the road. Yes, when quick non-skid stops are a MUST, here is the tire that will give you the quickest ones you've ever had! And here's proof:

In two series of non-skid tests of regular and premium-priced tires of the six largest tire manufacturers, including new tires which have just been introduced, Pittsburgh Testing Laboratory reports:

"The new Goodrich Silvertown with the Life-Saver Tread gave greater skid resistance than any other tire tested, including not only the old established tires of these manufacturers—some listed up to 40% higher in price—but also the new tires which were recently tested under the same road conditions."

Double Protection

And just as this new Goodrich Safety Silvertown gives you the greatest skid protection ever offered, it gives you still another feature that for years has been a sensational life-saver—the famous Golden Ply blow-out protection!

No Extra Cost

You might expect to pay more for this double protection, but remember, both the skid protection of the Life-Saver Tread and the famous Golden Ply blow-out protection are yours in Silvertowns at no extra cost. The next time you buy tires—buy safety—buy Silvertowns!

QUICKER STOPS! HERE'S THE SECRET:

Goodrich engineers tested tread designs by the hundred. Finally they developed this Life-Saver Tread that acts like a set of windshield wipers. As the row upon row of never-ending spiral bars roll over a dangerous film of water, they sweep the water right and left—force it out through the deep drainage grooves—make a dry track for the rubber to grip. No wonder this new Goodrich Safety Silvertown will stop you quicker, safer on a wet pavement than you've ever stopped before!

C.G.I.T. of Tabernacle Church Entertain Mothers at Banquet

Miss Betty Ross, Secretary of Girls' Work Board is Speaker

SPLENDID PROGRAM

Honoring their mothers and at the same time presenting aspects of C.G.I.T. that co-relate to the home activities, members of the C.G.I.T. groups of Tabernacle United Church entertained at a splendid mother-daughter banquet in the Sunday School rooms of the church last evening. As special guest of honor, Miss Betty Ross, secretary of the Girls' Work Band of the United Church, gave an interesting address, one of the highlights of the evening's program.

Daffodils and tapers in pastel tones decorated the long tables, while each guest found a "wooly" Easter bunny name card and dainty nosegay of "gum drop" blossoms at her place. A delicious banquet was served and for the added enjoyment of the guests a sing song of C.G.I.T. songs and rounds, led by Miss Ruth McLellan, with Miss Jean Shorey as pianist, was held throughout the evening. A piano duet by Misses Marion James and Peggy Doolittle was greatly appreciated.

Miss Jean Wannamaker was chairman for the interesting toast list, welcoming the mothers on this special occasion and explaining that the program would stress C.G.I.T. in the home. The toast to the King was responded to by all singing "God Save the King."

Toast to Church

The toast to the Church was proposed by Miss Myra Goodfellow who spoke of the cooperation, leadership and example of good living which the C.G.I.T. looked for in the Church and which they found so abundantly in Tabernacle Church. In reply, Rev. D. T. McClintock said that the United Church of Canada, the largest Protestant body in the Dominion, was but fourteen years old itself although it was composed of congregations that had traditions, centuries old, and a great and noted history. The youth of the Church meant that the young people of today would all have the making of its history; they could make a history upon which succeeding generations would look back with pride. It had been said that the Christians of the first century won through because they "out-thought, out-lived and out-died paganism"; so the Church today would conquer by honest, hard thinking, by living courageously so that when the call comes members need not be afraid.

Mrs. D. T. McClintock proposing the toast to the C.G.I.T. spoke of its three fold object—developing Christian character, providing age groups for fun, knowledge and a common purpose shared together, and relating to the midweek service and to daily life in the home, church and community the thoughts of the Sunday service. Miss Marjorie Kennedy in responding, stressed the aims of the C.G.I.T. and how the groups worked out during the year, the motto 'do by doing'. With Miss Peggy Doolittle as model, Miss Mary Redfern described the C.G.I.T. uniform and the importance of each member wearing it to meetings.

Tribute to Mothers

Miss Eileen Langridge paid a sincere tribute to mothers, not only for their share in preparing the banquet, but for their loving care and sacrifice that had meant so much in the lives of the girls. Mrs. Wm. Wonnacott responded to this toast, thanking the girls for the splendid banquet, and the leaders of the C.G.I.T. in the church, who often put aside their own pleasures for the interests of the movement. Tabernacle Church was most fortunate in having such capable C.G.I.T. leaders. Mothers could play their part in the work by seeing that their daughters attended meetings, shared in the responsibilities of the association, were loyal to their groups and to their leaders, remembering that C.G.I.T. presented not only an opportunity to receive, but to do for others.

The charms of C.G.I.T. summer camp life, in anticipation, were described by Miss Marion Brennan in a manner that made all her hearers eager to visit camp, while Miss Helen Wedden, a camper of four years' experience showed that the camp, in realization, was quite as appealing. A favourite song at camp, "All Through the Night" was sung by Misses Ruth McLellan and Mary Redfern.

Demonstrating the training phase of C.G.I.T. work, four members took part in a dramatization, one scene from "Victoria Regina", and their performances were splendid. The parts were taken by Miss Dorothy Wonnacott as Princess Victoria; her mother, the Duchess, by Miss Peggy Doolittle; the governess by Myria Goodfellow and the maid by Evelyn Allison. The action of the play was explained by Miss Marie Embury. The setting of the play was truly mid-Victorian and very effective.

Guest Speaker

Thoughts to be treasured by daughters and mothers were found in the words of Miss Betty Ross, Toronto, in her address to the gathering. The guest speaker was particularly enthusiastic over the dramatic sketch she had just witnessed, referring to it as the finest she had seen in any of her visits to C.G.I.T. groups. In discussing the great work of the C.G.I.T. Miss Ross said it was a cooperative venture, mothers working together with daughters, in obvious and in quiet ways, all seeking to accomplish the same purpose, the developing of fine, Christian citizens. Miss Ross asked her audience to let their thoughts dwell on the home of Jesus, with its understanding mother and noble father—a home of friendship, contentment and honest work.

Homes today require all manner of skills for perfect home making, good companionship, common interests in simple things, and the ability to live with others, all the qualities that C.G.I.T. fosters. Family life is to be cherished, especially in these times when other nations are breaking down the family with state control. The ideals of democracy should be maintained that the family may maintain its rightful place in the plan of life.

Sincere appreciation of the address of the evening was expressed in a vote of thanks moved by Miss Evelyn Allison and seconded by Miss Dorothy Hammett, bringing to a close a happy occasion in the life of Tabernacle C.G.I.T.

Hymn 113 was followed with prayer by Mrs. Hubel.

John Hancock took the chair for Citizenship meeting. The programme consisted of a reading, "Then a Smile" by Earl Yorke; a duet by Norma Clare and Olive Ross, "Throw out the Lifeline"; a reading, "Station Y-O-U", by Garnet Latchford; hymn 446; song, "Cathedral in the Pines" by Norma Wyatt and Ruth Livingston; reading, "Success" by Garnet Huffman; reading, "Lovemaking Under Difficulties" by Irene Elliott. Collection, which was the Easter offering, amounted to $7.00.

Community Fetes Sidney Family

Presentation to Mr. Frank Aikens and Family

3rd. Sidney—Mr. Frank Aikens and family were happily surprised on Monday evening when friends and neighbors gathered at their home to enjoy an evening with them before their departure for their new home. Mr. Aikens will take up residence in the near future on the front road, a few miles west of Belleville.

Mr. Wm. Wheeler acted as chairman for the evening. Music was supplied by the Aikens orchestra. The following address was read by Mrs. Fred Moon:

Dear Frank and family:

We, your friends and neighbors felt we would like to come—and spend an evening with you before you leave our community.

We are glad you are not going far away and hope it will be our privilege to meet with you often in the future.

Many of us have known you, Frank, since childhood, and can recall many happy hours as schoolchums. We still remember many of your childhood pranks when, as ring-leader you thrilled the hearts of the school children with daring adventures.

Then, too, during your young manhood, you were always one of us, enlivening many a gathering with your good sense of humor.

Some of the boys who are now men, recall with pleasure when you were their Sunday School teacher.

The Aikens name will ever remain with us, your grandfather having given the land where our church now stands and from whence it received its name, Aikens Church.

Time brings many changes. Years of joy and years of sorrow you have spent in our midst. We have always admired your loyalty and devotion to your family. You have fathered a family who, one and all, at some time or other have added greatly to the richness of community life.

We have appreciated, too, your generous donations in the past, to our W. A., and in various ways you have given assistance in our church and community affairs. You have always shown yourselves good friends and neighbors and we shall miss you. As you make new friends we hope you will not forget the old, for "those are silver, these are the gold."

While you, Marion, have not been able to be with us much the last few years, we have felt that you were still one of us, and have been glad to know that another one of the Aikens young people was making good in their chosen profession.

June and Jean, we have appreciated your singing, enjoying your duets when you assisted the choir on several occasions, also on many other programs.

Now that our connection will be more or less severed in the near future, we are glad to have this opportunity of expressing our love and friendship in the reading of these few words and the presentation of this floor lamp and spotlight, which we hope will help to brighten your future home and serve to continually remind you of loyal neighbors and friends left at Aikens.

(Signed):

Frank Jeffrey,
Arthur Saylor,
Earl Bush,
Fred Moon.

April 24, 1939.

Mr. Aikens suitably replied, expressing the thanks and appreciation of the family for the gifts, and for their presence and delighted the gathering with reminiscences of happy school days at the Hogle school, many present being old schoolmates.

Mr. Wheeler then called on Mr. Frank Jeffrey, Selburn Westover, Carmen Grills, Lee Grills, Mrs. Thos. Irwin, Mrs. Hubble and others, all paying tribute to the Aikens family and expressing regret that they were leaving the neighborhood.

Red Cross Juniors Do Their Best

Red Cross Juniors deciding where they will make their next International Friendship contact. They have a wide choice, as Junior Red Cross is now organized in 52 countries of the world, with a world membership of over 17,000,000 children.

2,382,263 cents in the pockets of Canadian Red Cross Juniors wended their way past candy stores and toy shops last year, and were finally deposited, voluntarily, in Red Cross bottles, marked "Crippled Children's Fund".

"When a child of his own accord will deny himself in order to help a crippled comrade, you have a good citizen in the making", contenoed the Red Cross.

Through the pennies and nickles saved and contributed voluntarily by Canadian Red Cross Juniors, 14,-577 crippled and handicapped children have been assisted since the inception of this work sixteen years ago.

Last year alone, 2,012 children were treated through the Junior Red Cross Crippled Children's Fund, hospitalization involving 19,-864 days' care.

An eminent Canadian educationist, writing in "School Health", states "When the children in a Junior Red Cross unit earn and bring in their pennies to help some crippled child back to whatever degree of freedom and happiness is possible, they are doing an inestimably precious thing for themselves at the some time; they are learning to care. They are going to keep on caring. They are going to be a great power in bringing in the day when all society will care, and will direct its greatest efforts towards the prevention of disease. I believe that in years to come the whole personnel of public health work will profit by a public spirit which received its first stimulus through the work of Junior Red Cross. That belief is shared by many educationists and public health workers today."

Eduardo Ciannelli, as the crook who tries to double-cross Morris; Walter Abel as the prosecutor, and Lee Patrick as the gang's feminine member are prominently cast. "Law of the Underworld" is a sizzling thriller made from the story "The Lost Game," and no punches are pulled, to provide a motion picture that is different and one that is audience dynamite.

Companion Feature

Adding variety to the program a second feature presentation in addition to "Law of the Underworld" is to be presented, entitled "Painted Desert" and featuring George O'Brien with Laraine Johnson, Ray Whitley and Fred Kohler.

This picture is Western melodrama at its best—swift, action-packed, suspenseful, spiced with romance and filmed against backgrounds of grandeur and beauty of the great outdoors—it is a top-notch George O'Brien picture, wholesome, stirring, vivid, one that every red-blooded man or boy will get their supreme thrill in adventure while it flashes on the screen.

In addition to the above two features, another exciting episode of "Flying G-Men" is also to be presented and will provide twenty minutes of ideal entertainment. This serial is outstanding in every respect and has in it an excellent cast, if you have not as yet seen it, by all means do so this week-end, it is worthwhile and one that is different.

AT THE BELLE

"I'm From Missouri"
"The Saint Strikes Back"

Bob Burns—your favorite native humorist—has changed his overalls for top hat, white tie and tails and forsaken the prairies for Piccadilly and Mayfair in his newest picture "I'm From Missouri!"

But the sage of Van Buren is still the rough-hewn, home-spun Yankee character the world loved in "The Arkansas Traveler," in this hilarious comedy about an America's escapades abroad. It's only good Missourian's natural love for his mules—and affection for his wife—that lead him from the Mississippi to the Thames in the story.

"I'm From Missouri", which is next at the Belle Theatre presents Burns at the head of a large cast of popular players, including Gladys George, who plays his wife, Gene Lockhart, Patricia Morrison, Judith Barrett, William Henry and George P. Huntley. The last three, incidentally, are the principals in the romantic story that weaves in and out of the adventures of Burns and Miss George.

"The Saint Strikes Back"

From the pages of a Leslie Charteris mystery novel, that urbane, and ruthless, personality, "The Saint", steps to the screen of the Belle Theatre in one of the season's most exciting screen thrillers—RKO Radio's "The Saint Strikes Back".

This film is the second of a series, and presents George Sanders in the title role. Wendy Barrie is the girl in the case, and Jonathan Hale, who created the role of Inspector Fernack in "The Saint in New York", is again seen as the flustered policed officer.

Dedicating his life to the cause of justice "The Saint's" exploits lead him to a large western city where he and Hale, who has been sent by the New York police, assist the authorities in capturing a mysterious underworld figure.

Many complications arise to thwart their efforts. The first is the meeting of Sanders with Wendy Barrie, a determined young lady who has her own means and methods of uncovering the identity of the wanted murderer in an effort to establish her deceased father's innocence of a crime of which he was unjustly accused.

When Sanders stumbles on a sum of money stolen from a bank and safely stored in the safe of a noted art patron, complications are further increased, so Sanders taxes matters in his own hands without the aid of the police. Suspicion is thrown on Sanders and for a time every member of the cast is suspected of being the wanted criminal.

How Sanders wins Miss Barrie to his side, their adventures in the very jaws of death before the story reaches its surprise climax, will thrill and delight the spectator.

Sanders, Miss Barrie, Hale, Jerome Cowan, Neil Hamilton and Barry Fitzgerald, all give splendid performances adding much to the drama.

MASSASSAGA LADIES' AID

The monthly meeting of the Massassaga Ladies' Aid was held at Mrs. George Flower's home on April 14 with twenty-two members and four visitors present. After the opening hymn, Mrs. Osborne of Belleville, was asked to read the Scripture lesson.

The president was in charge. Members were asked to take plants or bulbs to the May meeting. Mrs. Geddes, a visitor from the Front Road Ladies' Aid, told the meeting something of their work, which was very interesting.

Mrs. Hillman had charge of the programme, having arranged for the roll call to be answered by "something I have not done."

Readings were given by Mrs. J. A. Weese, "Apples and Grandmothers" and by Alma Ackerman, "Let's Laugh Although Our Skies Look Grey." Mrs. Hillman also gave, "Women and Politics". Dues were paid by several members. Offering and total collections for the day, $7.15.

A hymn and the Mizpah Benediction closed the meeting. A delicious lunch was served and a social hour enjoyed.

QUEEN ELIZABETH THANKS QUE. GIRL

Audrey Kingsborough Sent Letter to Princess Elizabeth in Secret

Portneuf Station, Que., April 26—(CP)—Audrey Kingsborough is the envy of her school chums today and the proudest little girl perhaps in all Portneuf County. The reason: 12-year-old Audrey possesses a letter from "The Queen's own Secretary."

The letter was a reply Audrey received to one she wrote and mailed to "Princess Elizabeth, care of King George, Buckingham Palace."

Audrey explains she slipped her letter to the British Princess into a mailbox without telling anyone because "they might have laughed."

Her letter, she says, told Princess Elizabeth of having read a book of her life and Audrey "wanted to know just how the Princess was getting along."

Audrey says she also asked the Princess if she would accept "next autumn, some nice maple leafs" and then expressed the hope the "Princess' governess would let her read the letter and not just throw it away."

"The private secretary to the Queen is commanded by Her Majesty to thank Audrey Kingsborough for her nice letter addressed to Princess Elizabeth and the kind wishes therein expressed, also the nice poem enclosed," the letter from Buckingham Palace said.

THE GOLDEN GIRL

—by—

Agnes Louise Provost and Ladbroke Black

"It is that girl!" she said to herself resentfully. She thought of a charming apartment with the single word "Moreland" on the door. She must contrive to keep them apart and estranged until she could establish her old hold on him. Then she remembered Wayne Gorham, utterly unscrupulous and mysteriously interested in Gloria.

Things could happen when she told Gorham of her discovery. She was ready to tell him now.

Jack left them at Colon. Twenty-four hours later the Dickerson yacht, its cruise cut short, was steaming up the coast again, bound for New York.

X X X

Gloria met Sophie Daimler one afternoon and was borne off at once to the nearest place for tea.

"Glory, I haven't seen you for centuries! Where have you been?"

"Out of town a great deal."

Gloria warmed under the impulsive greeting. She liked Sophie Daimler."

"I've so much to tell you." Sophie paused to give her order to the waiter and settled down to confidences. "Let me see, where shall we begin? I haven't seen you since the night of Amy's wedding. And things have happened so fast since that time. That dreadful murder—poor Miss Endicott, you know—and Jack Moreland's trouble. We were so shocked about it that we simply couldn't think of anything else for days."

"Yes, it was a terrible thing. But he is free now and I suppose he is much better."

Gloria wondered if she was speaking naturally.

"Yes, he is free, but it was a dreadful ordeal for him. Bill saw him yesterday and he says he isn't like himself at all, so quiet and reticent; almost morose."

"Oh, he has returned?" Gloria could scarcely keep the relief from her voice.

"Yes, he came up from New Orleans by train instead of going on with the others, and he is at work already. We think it is much too soon, but he will do it. Poor Jack, I suppose he has to now. Father says the estate has simply fallen to pieces. He is with the Garrett-Hudson Motor Sales Company, selling cars. They have a big showroom, you know, and you go there to look at a car and they call 'our Mr. Moreland' to take you out and show the car off and make the sale. It seems queer for a man like Jack; but you've met him, haven't you?"

"Yes, I know him," Gloria said quickly. "I met him at Beechwood when I was Miss Endicott's secretary. She was very devoted to him."

In her own room, a little later, Gloria feverishly searched the directories for the showrooms of the Garrett-Hudson Motor Sales Company.

"That must be the place," she decided, and looked up at Cecile, who was laying out her gown for the evening."

"Cecile, I think I shall buy a new car."

She said the same thing the next morning, but this time it was to herself as she tucked a curl into a more becoming spot under her small hat. Her cheeks were flushed and her eyes bright, half in eagerness and half in trepidation.

"I'm going to buy a car—to buy a car! she sang to herself as she made ready to go. "And Jack will have to sell it to me!"

She went alone for obvious reasons, boarding a crowded bus as in the old days of poverty, and getting off at the corner opposite the Garrett-Hudson showrooms. They faced on Broadway with a long expanse of window along the side street, where shining new cars were ranged. Across the radiator of a big limousine she had a glimpse of Jack, tall, graceful, thin, but browned with sea breezes, talking to another man.

When she entered he had disappeared.

CHAPTER XXV

If anyone had told Jack Moreland six months before that he would one day be glad to buckle down to hard work, the young man would have referred him politely to a lunacy commission. Now he was not only glad of busy days and constant calls on his time, but he was restless and depressed when the day's work was ended.

Friends had proffered their help. Mr. Dickerson had offered him a position in his office; the elder Daimler stood ready to train him in as a bond salesman with his own firm, but Jack had found his work the first day at the Garrett-Hudson salesrooms.

"I'll stick to cars," he said grimly. "I don't know whether I'll sell them or drive them or go back to greasy jumpers, but it will have to be cars. Meanwhile I get a salary and a commission on sales, and I need the money."

The sales manager had smiled shrewdly over Jack's progress. The new salesman was a "find." He was good-looking, agreeable and had a host of wealthy friends, and he also handled a car expertly. And just now he was a popular hero. There were plenty of romantic girls with rich fathers and big allowances who would be thrilled at the thought of buying a car from Jack Moreland.

Much of this was running through the manager's shining bald head as he stood in the rear of the salesroom one morning talking to Jack. Then he looked toward the door and saw one of those pretty clients entering.

She was so very pretty, so amazingly fresh and winsome that the manager went briskly forward to meet her himself. He did not notice the quick turn of young Moreland's head and the slight stiffening of pose.

Left alone, Jack stepped back into the private office. The instinct to avoid her was almost involuntary. For a moment or two, unobserved, he stared moodily at her. That was his wife in the modish blue suit talking graciously to the bald-headed manager, listening with charming intentness to his explanations, the same Gloria, a little lovelier than ever.

The manager was exceedingly gracious. "Our Mr. Moreland will show you the phaeton if you wish to try it out now."

"I should like to."

"Thompson, ask Mr. Moreland to come here.' "

Thompson vanished for a few moments. Gloria wondered where he would be. She was certain she had seen Jack talking with this suave little man just as she had entered the door.

Thompson returned alone.

"Mr. Moreland has stepped out. He didn't leave word when he would be back."

The manager was politely deprecating.

"Very sorry, indeed, but won't you let me make an appointment for you? Mr. Moreland will call at your home at any hour that you desire."

"That will not be necessary." Gloria's voice was very quiet. She was conscious of a sharp hurt that Jack should have deliberately gone away to avoid the necessity of being with her, but pride came to her aid. "I will send my chauffeur to look at the car. He will understand it much better than I. Thank you."

That afternoon Sara Dalton in charge of the house at Beechwood received a telegram.

"Coming to stay with you a few days. Will be alone.—"Gloria."

"She's in trouble," said Sara wisely. "She must be in trouble, or she would never show herself at Beechwood. Poor Glory. If I could only help."

Beechwood, that she had never expected to see again! A hushed and quiet Beechwood with closed gates and silent house, deserted save for Sara Dalton, efficiently in charge, and the old gardener who still made his rounds with loving care.

Sara curled her arm around Gloria's shoulder. They were standing on a narrow balcony just outside the library, those long windows from which Miss Endicott, with Frances Payne and Gorham once watched her cross the lawn in front of them with quickened step and a distressed flame in her cheeks.

"Glory, dear, I was hoping that you two would come back together."

Gloria shook her head. "You were too romantic, Sara. It wasn't to be that kind of a marriage, you know." Her slight laugh sounded a little hard; her eyes were bright and restless as if seeking escape.

"I know, Glory." Sara made not the slightest pretense of accepting this pitiful pose of indifference "But I have always hoped that it would come out right. He loves you, honey."

"That is over, Sara. I—I threw it away. Don't dream any more dreams about me, dear. They won't come true."

There was no more reference that evening to Jack Moreland. Long after Sara had gone to bed Gloria sat at her window and looked out over the quiet grounds of the place that had been his home.

Her glance was suddenly arrested by a movement beyond the garage. Then a figure shadowed ghostly in the moonlight. It came closer, but not close enough to be distinguishable. Gloria held her breath. Height and figure an easy grace of movement, how like him it was!

A gruff sound under her window made her start. It was Kelly, Jack's bull terrier, narrowly recovered from his drastic treatment at Parsons 'hands. She heard scurrying paws in dry leaves, a short sharp bark as Kelly cleared a low hedge, and then she caught sight of a frantically excited dog leaping and pawing at the figure in the moonlight. The man stooped down.

"It is Jack. It is!"

He was patting the dog, then giving him orders sternly repeated when Kelly failed to obey. Kelly faced about, head down, and dragged reluctant feet back toward the house. Now and then he turned back with a coaxing whine, wondering why his master did not follow.

For a second longer the ghostly figure stood there in the moonlight looking back at Beechwood. Then he turned and walked briskly across a stretch of open field toward the main road and the railroad station.

Gloria dropped her face on her arms, dry-eyed and miserable.

Jack had come down to his old home late in the evening because he did not wish to be seen and have his movements commented on, and also because he was too busy during the day working to get the money to make his new plans possible.

From the station he had gone direct to the old mill, the only part of Beechwood that he had retained as his own. Moonlight and an electric torch helped him as he moved briskly here and there taking measurements, testing the flooring, peering at sturdy beams. It had been several years since he had been in the old building and he wished to refresh his memory.

"It will take a lot of money," he confided to himself grimly; "but I have this place and I can begin in a small way. Anyway, if I go to smash there's nobody to be pulled down with me."

He leafed over the papers until he came to a little stiff rectangle.

It was only a snapshot of a girl in white, standing under a big beech tree and laughing at the antics of a frolicsome bull terrier that half crouched near her, weedling her to play. He had snapped it one morning at Beechwood when she had not known he was there.

His thin brown face softened as he looked at it, only to become reflective and stern a moment later. He had tried and failed. That episode in his life was over.

A stir of rising wind rustled the leaves outside, found its way through the open door and played with the papers which he had laid beside him on the bench. They were perilously near the edge. One of them stirred and slid over, its faint whisper drowned in the stir of leaves outside.

There was a keenness in the night wind in spite of the warmth of the day. Jack remembered the hour and reached hastily for the papers beside him, thrusting them into his pocket. He did not want to miss the next train down.

Walking briskly toward the station, he made a slight detour and went past Beechwood lying dark and quiet in its stand of guardian trees. That was when Kelly made his joyful rush to meet his old master. So the new people, whoever they were, were looking after his dog! Poor old Kelly. Some day he would get him back again.

He caught the train by a narrow margin. It was not until the next day that he missed the little picture of Gloria.

CHAPTER XXVI

Wayne Gorham was beginning to breathe freely again. He admitted to himself that the Endicott murder might easily have involved him in some nasty notoriety. Parsons, for instance, if he had died less suddenly, could have revenged himself in his last breath by betraying his partner. Or the presence of the worthless shares of copper stock in Miss Endicott's possession might have started an unpleasant investigation. But Parsons was out of the way for all time, his swift death having prevented any possibility of last revelations. As for the stock, it was not unusual for apparently sensible people to buy wildcat securities, and there was no way of connecting the name of Wayne Gorham with them. One thing he had not failed to notice. During all the furore about Jack Moreland, no mention was made of a Mrs. Moreland. His trouble and illness had effected no reconciliation and it was Frances Payne who had been with the invalid at the Dickerson house where Gorham had not failed to call with solicitous inquiry, and Frances who had gone with Jack on the Dickerson yacht.

Yet undoubtedly Gloria had been staying at the Grandon, as Mrs. John Moreland. And Gorham, cynical enough in his view of life, had settled into a fixed conviction that the girl was "straight.".

On his way downtown one morning he noticed in his paper that the Dickersons had returned from their southern cruise. It sounded like quick work for a trip of that kind. When he reached his office another surprise awaited him. It was a letter addressed to him in Frances Payne's handwriting. Inside was a sheet of paper with two short lines.

"A little item which may interest you, found in the rooms of G. S.—"F. V. P."

The enclosure was a crumpled envelope, empty, with a typewritten address, "Mrs. John Moreland, Granliden Apartments." In the upper left-hand corner was the name of John Carver, counsellor-at-law, and a Chicago address.

He sat looking at it with a cynical smile which presently became an annoyed frown.

"If I had had this bit of paper at the time of the Endicott murder," he ruminated coolly, "I could have made her little ladyship come across handsomely for keeping quiet. And once she started to pay blackmail it would be hard to stop."

He reached for the telephone and called the Ritz, asking for Miss Staunton. Miss Staunton's maid answered. Mademoiselle was away—in the country—by the sea. Madame Payne? Gorham heard the maid's voice sharpen. Madame Payne was no longer with mademoiselle. She had not been there for several weeks.

Gorham sat quiet for a while, thinking. Curious that the maid did not know, or would not tell, where Gloria Staunton was. Evidently the questioning had confused her. In the country—by the sea. That was a queer combination. No, not so queer either. He reached for the telephone again.

"Hello, Norton." Norton was a real estate broker whom he knew fairly well. "I wonder if you could put me in line to find out who bought Beechwood—the old Endicott place on the sound. A man I know thinks he would like to have it."

"Beechwood ? Oh, yes. I remember. A man named Carver, from Chicago was the agent. He bought it in for somebody. I don't know for whom."

Gorham pushed back the telephone. Carver, from Chicago! He put the crumpled envelope carefully in his wallet.

It was nearly daylight when Gloria dropped asleep, and then she slumbered so heavily that when she opened her eyes to see Sara sitting beside her a clock was striking ten.

"Sara! I've been dreadfully lazy!"

"It doesn't matter, honey. But I had to call you, because somebody has been trying to get you on the telephone. It sounded like that Gorham creature. I never did like him. He said he understood you were at Beechwood and he wished to see you on important business."

"Oh!" Gloria was conscious of the cold fear which always crept over her when she met Gorham. "What did he say?"

"I told him he must have the wrong number," said Sara grimly, "and then I hung up. Do you suppose your maid told him, Glory?"

"I don't know," said Gloria wearily. "I don't think so. I would trust Cecile anywhere. The only thing that matters is that he knows that I am at Beechwood — or suspects it. It was foolish of me to come here at all.".

She threw out her hands impatiently. "I'm sick of it!" she burst out hotly. "I'm sick of hiding things and evading and pretending! It is mean and sordid and hateful. If only I had it to do again—" she stopped, shutting her lips tightly over the thing that she would do.

"Glory, dear, don't hide it any longer. There's nothing to be ashamed of."

"I must hide it—now." Gloria's voice sounded quiet and tired; the light of fierce rebellion in her eyes was quenched suddenly. "It isn't merely my secret any more. It's his. It's Jack's. When he cared, he would have been glad to have it known. Now it is different. I know I deserve it, Sara; I've been blind and selfish and mercenary, but I can't face being just his acknowledged wife."

Something choked in Gloria's throat. Sara kissed her gently and left her alone. This was no time for argument. Then she put in a call for the Garrett-Hudson Motor Sales Company.

The voice at the other end of the line was not Jack Moreland's. Mr. Moreland was out. He might be in any moment and he might not come back until late in the afternoon. Sara stifled a gasp of dismay.

"When he comes in," she persisted, "please tell him to come at once to Beechwood. At once! Tell him it is very important.' "

Sara put the receiver back with an impatient sigh. "If he only gets here before she leaves, and if I get a chance to see him first! She must see him! I don't believe he doesn't love her any more."

It was almost noon when Jack came back to the salesroom, driving up to the curb in the big shining car which he had just been demonstrating. As he stopped a man loitering near the curb came forward and nodded slightly.

"Hello, Murphy."

"Hello, Jack."

Murphy was a quiet looking man with nondescript brown hair and a nondescript grey suit, but the mild blue eyes were deceptive and under the grey coat, as Jack well knew, was a little shining shield which stood for the power of the law and the ability of Jim Murphy to enforce it. Jack had come to know the "plainclothes" man from Headquarters quite well in the grim days that had followed his aunt's murder.

"How are things getting along—or is that telling?"

"Oh, pretty fair," said Murphy, noncommittally. "Feel like dropping down at thirty-one? Got a dictograph in. From what we caught this morning the boss thought you might like to be tipped off for an appointment that we heard him make for twelve o'clock. Come to Room 529 on the fifth floor. I'll be there."

"Thanks. I'll follow," Jack said, and Murphy nodded and sauntered away.

Jack beckoned to a young man standing in the doorway of the salesroom.

"Tommy, look after this car, will you? And tell Mr. Norton that I've made the sale, but I am called away and may not be back for an hour or so."

He was off by the way Murphy had taken, and a few seconds later he hailed a taxicab. He could not afford it, but this called for haste.

Number 31 was a crowded office building in a crowded street, and the door of Room 529 opened into the most innocent looking of outer offices. Murphy was already there when Jack arrived. He nodded slightly, and together they went into the next room.

There were two other plainclothes men there, and a table with a poker-faced young man sitting in front of it, a telephone receiver fastened over his ears like an operator at a switchboard, and a stenographic notebook in front of him.

The man also nodded, without change of expression, and Murphy handed a similar receiver to Jack. Jack adjusted it to his head. It gave him an uncomfortable feeling to be "listening in" on another person's affairs. Then a voice came. He frowned. A moment later his hand went up as if to jerk the eavesdropping thing away from his ears, but the hand dropped again. He sat very quiet, with stern eyes and stiffening jaw. Now and then the poker-faced young man shot a swift glance at him.

CHAPTER XXVII

"So you thought you could double-cross me?"

All of Wayne Gorham's suavity was gone.

Mrs. Payne's anger flared quickly. She gave him the benefit of a disdainful stare. "Perhaps you have not learned," she said cuttingly, "that well-bred people do not express themselves in such a manner.

"But they can accept thirteen thousand dollar bribes to spy on people they live with? That's all right, I gather!"

She raised her head haughtily. "You are unspeakable!" Frances barely breathed it. She leaned back in her chair, cold with fear. What did this cynical creature mean to do? She had been insane to put herself in his power.

"Suppose I make myself clear." Gorham leaned forward. The smile was gone. "You understood to keep watch on the Staunton girl and report to me whatever you found out about her and Moreland. There was thirteen thousand eight hundred dollars against your name on my books, and that was to be cancelled for your work How did you do it?"

He drew out the envelope she had sent him and slapped it down on the desk.

"Today I get this from you. An empty envelope addressed to Mrs. John Moreland at the Granliden Apartments. You said you had found it in Miss Stanuton's rooms at the Ritz, but you didn't think I knew, or had brains enough to find out that you had left the Ritz just five weeks ago.

"You found this out, but you kept it for five weeks for your own purposes, which consisted chiefly of following up another woman's husband. If I had had this weeks ago when all the row was on—oh, what's the use!"

His voice snapped off disgustedly. Frances Payne was watching him with bright horrified eyes.

"You would have used it for blackmail!" she said breathlessly.

"I should call it a little late in the day for you to question my motives. The point is that you didn't deliver the goods. Now I'll tell you this much." He dropped his voice suddenly to a confidential tone. "I began this thing out of curiosity, but I'm in it now to win. I am going to see the lady this afternoon. I know where she is too, in which I am pretty sure I have the advantage of you. What I want you to do is to keep Moreland busy and away from her for the next few weeks. I have an idea that she will ultimately take a trip west, say to Reno or vicinity. When she comes back you can give a dinner to your dear friends, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Gorham. I'll pay for the dinner."

"You—you beast!"

She was on her feet, trembling and scornful.

"Think it over. The thirteen thousand and odd is still on my books, and I have several letters from you. They'd make quite a pretty scandal if they got in print." He went over to the door which led directly into the hall and unlocked it, once more smiling and urbane.

"You need my help and I need yours," he added coolly. "Think it over."

When she had gone he strolled back, whistling under his breath. His first intention, on catching the scent of a mystery, had been to make the Staunton fortune pay him a pleasant little income; now, on impulse, he had decided to marry it. Every man has his weak point and Gorham's was his enormous conceit with regard to his prestige with women. Once driven to get a divorce from Moreland, he had no doubt that a whirlwind courtship would carry the day. And she was a fascinating little piece, with her cream-and-gold loveliness and daintily aloof air.

He walked slowly across the room deep in his new project, and stopped absently by the side of a big roll-top desk against the wall. His eyes travelled absently along the desk, were suddenly arrested. He bent down to examine something near the floor. Wires! They seemed to go down through the flooring. What did they connect?

He went over to his desk and took out a small electric torch, flashing its clear little light behind the roll-top desk.

When he straightened again his eyes were alert and shifty, but cool. He stood close to the desk and spoke clearly as if putting in a telephone call.

"Give me Chelsea 5307."

He waited a little for his imaginary call. Then he spoke again.

"Hello, Saunders. Meet me at the Grandon at 1:30 and bring everything with you. I'll have my bag and will bring them back here. It's all right now to put them in my safe. No, don't come here. Make it the Grandon at 1:30."

Bruce Campbell Finds Range And With Feller's Fine Hurling Cleveland Defeats White Sox

Outfielder Not Figured in Plans of Vitt at Start of Season

PHILLIES STRONG

First Time Since 1937 That Team Has Won Four in Row

(By Sid Feder Associated Press Sports Writer).

There comes a time each baseball year when Bruce Campbell finds the range and lets both barrels go and right now the 25-year-old flychaser for Cleveland Indians in the American League has the range.

Bruce has had anything but an easy time of it in his 10 years in the big leagues. Three time spinal meningitis laid him low. Each time he came back and there he was again yesterday.

Bruce hadn't figured much in Ossie Vitt's plans for the Indians this season. What with Jeff Heath, Earl Averill, Ben Chapman and Jule Solters on the roster, it looked as though Bruce was along just for the ride.

Through the first four games, however, Averill was a large "flop-eroo." In 14 official at bats, the couldn't even get a loud foul. So yesterday Ossie bench "the oil" and gave the high sign to Bruce who poled out two homers and drove five runs across. Thus the Tribe cashed in on Bobby Feller's four-hit flinging to scalp the White Sox 7-1.

Feller Going Strong

That tilt marked 18 innings for Master Robert during which he has allowed just two runs and seven hits, while fanning 19.

The decision, however, didn't cut into New York Yankees' lead, for the Bombers celebrated the announcement of Joe DiMaggio's engagement to movie actress Dorothy Arnold by walloping the Athletics 8-4. The win was Rufus the Ruffing's second straight, but Red had to bow out after the fifth frame because of a pulled muscle in his salary wing.

Chicago Cubs also continued on their merry way at the head of the National League parade by knocking off Pittsburg Pirates 5-3 behind the eight-hit elbowing of Bill Lee, but the Phillies remained the big story of the senior circuit.

Phillies Win Four

Only the oldest inhabitant recalls that the Phils haven't put more than three straight together since August of 1937. Yet yesterday they bowled over New York Giants 8-1 with Claude Passeau tossing a five-hitter. That win was their fourth in a row and marked five straight, beginning with their tie last Thursday, in which they've stayed out of the losing column.

Whitey Moore of Cincinnati Reds, brought himself sharply to mind with a steady twirling job to whip the Cardinals 6-1, fanning seven and boosting the Rhinelanders into second place in the league. Brooklyn finally found the combination and nipped Boston Bees 3-2.

Jimmy Foxx's 11th-inning homer gave the Red Sox a 6-5 margin over Washington Senators and rookie John Kramer took a fall out of Detroit Tigers, tossing a six-hitter for a 7-2 St. Louis Browns' victory.

The finish on C.C.M. bicycles is as enduring as the mechanical parts—several coats of enamel baked-on; all bright parts chromium-plated over C.C.M. 20-year nickel.

Strong steel rims, rustless steel spokes and Dunlop tires add further to the high quality, long life and easy-riding pleasure of owning a C.C.M.

Ask your C.C.M. dealer to show you the various C.C.M. bicycles and then choose the one which suits you best. C.C.M. models include track-racers, road-racers, delivery models, standard bicycles and the C.C.M. modern streamlined bicycle, the "Flyte".

For the children, your C.C.M. dealer can offer you C.C.M. Joycycles, Bike-Wagons and sidewalk Bikes, all made as staunchly and with the same care and accuracy as C.C.M. bicycles.

LEAFS WALLOPED BY THE ORIOLES IN WEIRD GAME

Score is 25-11 With Toronto Using Eight Pitchers

ROYALS SET PACE

Thirteen Innings Required Before They Downed Chiefs 6 - 5

(By The Associated Press)

Baltimore International League fans, while they haven't yet seen a world-beating baseball club, at least are being supplied with a display of early-season scoring fireworks that would put even the bombing New York Yankees to shame.

Six games have been played in the Oriole Park, where the centre-field fence practically leans over the second baseman. They have produced an average total of 10 1-2 runs for Rogers Hornsby's forces and eight for the visitors. In the last three games, all with Toronto Maple Leafs, Baltimore has scored 40 and the enemy 27.

But the high spot to top all high spots was yesterday, when the teams battled through two hours and 26 minutes before the Orioles won 25-11 in a game that included eight pitchers, five of them for Toronto; 11 errors, eight of them by Toronto, and five home runs, four of them by Baltimore.

The Orioles scored often enough in the first inning in which they clubbed three pitchers to the showers and continued hammering a fourth, to win any ordinary game. Nine of them crossed the platter in that frame. Missing only in the third, they picked up eight more through the seventh, and then put on the finishing touches with a final barrage of eigth runs, all scored off Walter Lanfranconi.

Montreal Royals continue to set the pace, having gone 13 innings behind southpaw Kemp Wicker yesterday for a 6-5 decision over Syracuse Chiefs.

Whether needled by Bill Terry or Mayor Hague, the rejuvenated Jersey City Giants are pushing the Royals hard. They won their fourth out of six starts as Hy Vanderberg, one of Terry's contributions, held Rochester Red Wings to seven hits and helped in the 6-2 triumph with three safeties, one a three-bagger.

The Jerseys got 15 or their 16 hits off veteran Si Johnson, who had shut out Newark with a two-hitter on opening day. On the other hand Marius Russo, the Bear left-hander who lost that one, came bouncing back with a three-hit job that beat Buffalo 5-1.

EDMONTON GRADS DEFEAT ST. LOUIS

Wonder Team Comes from Behind After Shaky Start

Edmonton. April 26 (CP)—Edmonton Grads showed the spirit of champions last night as they came from behind after a shaky start to defeat St. Louis Legions 35-24 in the first game of a three-of-five series for the Underwood International Women's Basketball Challenge Trophy.

Second game will be played tomorrow. If Grads survive this series they will play Cleveland Fisher Foods and Chicago All-Stars later this spring.

WINDSOR ALUMNI BACK IN SERIES

Cage Squad Show Complete Reversal of Form to Defeat Dominoes

The Willows, Victoria, April 26—(CP)—Windsor Alumni defeated Victoria Dominoes 30-24 last night in the third game of the Canadian Men's Senior Basketball Championship. It was Windsor's first victory in the best-of-five series. Dominoes won the first two games.

The fourth game is scheduled for Thursday night and if a fifth, is necessary, will be played Friday.

In a complete reversal of their form of the first two games when they started strong but wilted in a critical quarter, Alumni battled from behind a first-quarter deficit.

And they did it despite the loss of Red Nantais, star guard who left the game in the second quarter with a sprained ankle, and Irving (Toots) Meretsky, banished late in the fourth on four personal fouls.

Before leaving the game Meretsky counted 11 points, topping Dominoes Hank Rowe and giving Windsor the game's high scorer for the first time in the series.

In a hard checking game that saw 32 fouls called, Alumni handcuffed Chuck Chapman, veteran guard who engineered Victoria's 51-33 victory Monday night in a second quarter scoring spree. Chapman was held to a single point until the fourth quarter when he added a free shot and a field basket. Art Chapman, centre and brother of Chuck, likewise was held to four points.

30 Game Schedule Adopted By Softball Association With Opening of Loop May 22nd

Four Teams Will enter Play-offs at end of Schedule on July 19th

SCHEDULE RELEASED

Ken Edgecombe Will be in Charge of Appointment of All Umpires

A thirty game schedule was adopted for the Belleville Softball League at an executive meeting held last night, the league to officially open on May 22nd, with extensive play-offs being agreed upon at the termination of the adopted schedule. Five teams will face the league barrier, four of which will be included in a post-schedule play-offs series for the league championship.

The play-off series will bring the first and fourth placed clubs into a best three-in-five series, while likewise the second and third clubs will indulge in a similar series with the two ultimate winners meeting in the league finals under the same arrangements, as moved by Harry Rollins. Secretary Harry Knott announced the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" would not be included into the local softball set-up during 1939, the Airmen having refused an invitation from the local association to affiliate with the Belleville loop.

To Name Umpires

Ken Edgecombe, league executive member, was appointed in charge of the appointments of all umpires throughout the season, the league umpires as recommended by the team managers being employed. In the matter of protests and complaints, all such grievances must be presented to the Secretary in writing as provided by the O.A.S.A. constitution, was a motion brought forward by Executive member Ken Edgecombe after accepting the responsibility of appointing the league officials. All league umpires must wear blue or black baseball caps, the executive also ruled.

Secretary Knott entered a motion that all players' certificates be in his hands on or before May 15th and later included a motion that in case of rained out games, such games shall be played within 24 hours of the postponement. Both motions carried.

The Executive announced that the league play-offs for 1939 would commence on or about July 21st, with a maximum of 15 league play-off games, including semi-finals and final games.

Ken Colling Named To Executive Post Of the O. B. A.

(By Claude D. Tice)

Appointment of Ken J. Colling, Sports Editor of the Ontario Intelligencer, to the executive of the Ontario Baseball Association by J. W. Scott, president of that organization, has been announced through the office of secretary William J. Snyder and will be received in this district with a great deal of enthusiasm.

Ken has served amateur baseball for a good many years, first as a sponsor of junior baseball, then as an umpire and later as president of the Bay of Quinte League, a position which he know holds. He is conversant with the workings of the O.B.A., knows his baseball and is willing to give many hours of his time and ability to the furtherance of his pet sport in this district. While we have not always entirely agreed with his decisions, when he donned the mask and shin guards, yet he has always had the reputation of calling them as he sees them.

This is the first time in Belleville that a resident has been given this post and it is fitting recognition to a city, that has produced two provincial senior champions and has been a power in the Central Ontario Baseball League for a long time. There is no doubt that the interests of the O.B.A. will be well looked after and all teams having just complaints will be given a sympathetic hearing and all facts in the case will receive mature consideration before a decision is given. It is to be hoped with an executive officer of the parent body so near at hand, that more attention will be paid to this part of the Province, which has been neglected by the O.B.A. for so many years.

Count Theo Rossi Fears Harold Wilson

Detroit, April 26 (CP)—If there's one competitor that Count Theo Rossi fears in the 1939 Gold Cup race, it's Harold Wilson of Toronto and Ingersoll. Visiting here today, the Italian nobleman who won the power-boat classic last year said it was the challenge of Wilson's Miss Canada IV that convinced him a newer and faster craft would be needed if he wished to defend the cup. He thinks he has a boat that will shatter all records on the Detroit River this summer.

Wilson's entry was doing well last year when forced out by oil line trouble. He plans to try again cup officials say.
